Exuberant and effective energy thrills the department of Ready-made Garments for women. This store is the source of supply for all who value Economy and Style. They come in crowds. An ebullience of smooth and dainty phrases expresses their appreciation. A mass of testimony could be printed—disinterested and intelligent decisions—that fortify our claims of supremacy. Far-seeing, firm-minded, large-hearted men have done all that taste, capital and capacity can do to make this part of the business brilliant and popular. Since the opening day of the season our success has been steadily rising. Former records have been annihilated, and up to date the sales sheets show an aggregate that is marvelous. Competition, whether sustained by the silken mediocrity of ostentation, or the coarse gloss of shoddy inferiority may shriek protests, but the facts of our statement are plain. This solid growth is the result of industry, the guerdon of skill, the reward of active heads, hands and purses. Our buyers were not rash, neither were they timid. With the whole world of fashion open to them, they brought the nice discrimination of aesthetic training and practical knowledge to bear upon each selection. Look through the collection. Be you critic, artist or dry-goods man we defy you not to admire. Whether the price is a few dollars, or a hundred dollars, the real standard of elegance and excellence has not been violated or sacrificed. Nothing flashy, nothing tawdry, nothing eccentric. The Suit and Wrap realm is controlled by sterling principles. No tinseled sceptre with vivid prestigious accessories are in the background to give sham and charlatanry a tempting glamour. No legerdemain with goods; no juggling with prices. The department merits a heraldic shield inscribed with the legend: "Honest Goods at Fair Prices."

The announcements in the adjacent subdivision of this page may interest you.

Dressmaking.

The dressmaking department has been reopened several weeks. Scores of elegant costumes have been finished and delivered. Not a complaint has been heard. It's only human to err, and we expected a mistake to occur every now and again. Perfection was not looked for. We didn't anticipate absolute faultlessness. It is none the less gratifying to you and to us. We reiterate with great emphasis that valid guarantee concerning fit, style, and general satisfaction. Our modiste is an artist. She awaits your coming.

"Sorosis."

The New Shoe for Women.

In order to form an intelligent and correct idea of "Sorosis" Shoes you must wear a pair and experience the satisfaction of knowing that your feet are correctly and stylishly dressed, and also enjoy that sense of restful comfort which is not the least of their desirable features.

It is necessary to understand once and for all that "Sorosis" Shoes must be classed entirely by themselves. They must not be confounded with other shoes because they look similar or because they lace or button or have soles, heels and toes. All shoes or almost all shoes are made of leather, have soles and uppers and either button or lace. The truth is "Sorosis" Shoes are a revelation to wearers and to makers of shoes; they are the acknowledged standard and what all makers are now endeavoring to imitate.

We sell them exclusively in Atlanta.

Special.

36 dozen Women's Two-clasp Lambskin Gloves, made in Grenoble, France, embroidered backs; red, brown, green, helio, tans, slates, drabs, grays, modes, pearl, white and black, worth $1.25; Monday's price, . . 59c

Colored Dress Goods.

The offerings this week are remarkable. You may pick at random from any of the groups and your choice will be judicious. Impossible to go astray. Every item advertised is a phenomenal bargain. If you've been faltering on the brink of buying, these quotations will surely make you plunge. It takes pluck for us to present such values, and still more courage for you to resist them. The frequency with which the same appellatives are printed elsewhere makes us wish we could enrich Dress Goods nomenclature, and prevent reckless advertisers from infringing. If names of the fabrics that are sold at retail had to be legally registered the titular wealth of 'round-town stocks would be tremendously diminished. Dealers have been known to give the same stuff several distinct christenings. Another form of fake that we don't tolerate.

The same old names that everybody uses must do service for us, but here each weave has character and worth, and that's what you want.

$1.00 for $2.25 Dress Goods.

A lot of exceedingly handsome and strictly exclusive goods. They are not remnants, but just enough in each piece for one suit, and no two alike. Succinctly stated, here's their history. They are samples that were used by an importer to sell the highest-toned stores in America. They were shown only once. All of each piece was taken by a Baltimore firm. Our New York buyer then stepped in and secured the "sample lengths" at less than half price. They include

$2.25 Two-toned Checked Canvas.
$2.25 Two-toned Bayadere Poplins.
$2.25 Two-toned French Matelasses.
$2.25 Two-toned Boucle Cheviots.
$2.25 Self-dotted Granite Cloth.
$2.25 Imported Novelty Plaids.

Your Choice for . . . . . $1.00.

The next group is exceptionally attractive, but they were not secured under quite such advantageous conditions.

$1.00 for Dress Goods Worth up to $1.75.

All-wool Poplins, Cheviots, Storm Serge, Broadcloth, Two-toned Covert Cloth and Two-toned Meltonettes. Grand chances, to be sure. The qualities are perfect and the range of colors is complete. Satisfaction vouchsafed to all who choose of them.

The third group is a half-dollar assembly. Bound to be popular with tomorrow's traders because intrinsic merit is conspicuously pronounced in every fold.

50c for Dress Goods Worth up to $1.00.

All-wool Cheviots, Serges, Poplin Plaids, Velour Plaids, Habit Cloth, French Melanges, Granite Cloth, Two-toned Coverts and Four-toned Silk-and-wool Novelty Suitings. Fabrics that require no praise. They carry their own recommendation in every fibre of warp and woof.

The last group is a vast assortment of Bourettes, Boucles, Foules, Flannelettes, Cheviots, Matelasses, Melanges, Serges, Homespuns, Tweeds, Chevrons, Diagonals and a score of others at 19c, 25c, 29c, 35c, and 39c. We could say they are worth double without stretching truth a hair's-breadth.

Black Dress Goods.

$1.40 for $2.50 Parisian Crepons.

These were a great capture. We look upon them as splendid trophies. Other bargains of large caliber may have been exploited in the past. Others may be in the future. But we don't think these will ever be equaled. They are matchless in every respect, and the price is an insult to the genius and originality of designers and loom's-men. They are late productions. Landed in New York when buying was dull. The importer couldn't wait for the demand to brisk. His bills fell due, and he was forced to sacrifice. We garnered a goodly share, and his loss is your gain.

The weave variations include more rippling puffiness, wrinkleness, crinkleness, waviness and hummocky delicacy than you've ever seen before.

Souffle, Serpentine, Bayadere, Braid, Zig-zag, Tufted Broche, Cocoon Spots, Pebbled, Silk Brocades, Etamine Overweaves, Leaf, Cube, Barre Flower and Dice designs.

Worth $2.50; Your Choice for $1.40.

Another section of shelves is literally overflowing with a great variety of new and familiar weaves that are seasonable, serviceable and low-priced.

Bilateral-striped Mohair Cheviot, Mohair Canvas Cloth, Silk-warped Henrietta, Storm Serge, English Serge, Cheviot Serge, Poplin, Sebastopols and others.

Worth up to $1.50; Your Choice at $1.00.

The special Black that you want may be among the company of Epingles, Sicilians, Mohairs, Cheviots, Serges, Jacquards, Henriettas, Cashmeres, Natte Suitings, Diagonals, Whipcords, Poplins, Crepons or Sebastopols that we are selling at 25c, 39c, 50c and 75c.

YALE DEFEATS THE CARLISLE INDIANS

Game Was a Sensational One from the Start to the Finish.

SOME MARVELOUS WORK DONE

Indians Got the First Half Without Any Apparent Trouble at All.

HUDSON PROVED TO BE A GREAT PLAYER

Yale Was Not Near So Quick and Was Without the Dash the Indians Showed Throughout.

New Haven, Conn., October 22.—Yale this afternoon defeated the Carlisle Indians at football 18 to 5. The game was a sensational one and at the end of the first half, as the score stood 6 to 5, it seemed alarmingly dangerous for Yale.

The five points to Carlisle's credit were due to Quarterback Hudson's marvelous skill in dropping a goal from the forty-five yard line. The trick caused consternation in the Yale line and after that the Indians played Yale almost to a standstill for a few minutes. The Carlisle's rush line seemed too much for Yale. But the reason of this became apparent when, in the second half, after Yale had changed signals, the Indians found the line nearly always impregnable.

For Yale Coy, Brown and Cutten played an excellent game and under McBride's powerful long kicks may be said to have done the lion's share of the work. Coach Butterworth, who was on the side lines, expressed the greatest astonishment when McBride repeatedly lined out sixty and sixty-five-yard punts.

The noticeable difference in the playing of the two elevens may be summed up in that Yale had not the dash and quickness of the Indians. Yale's line acted worn out, at times on the aggressive and for a short period were no match on the defensive either.

Other Games.

Ann Arbor, Mich., October 22.—University of Michigan 23, Notre Dame 0.

Philadelphia, October 22.—The University of Pennsylvania football eleven defeated the Lafayette kickers this afternoon by the score of 32 to 0.

HEIKES WINS THE MEDAL AGAIN.

Two Special Features Presented by Belle Meade Gun Club's Shoot.

Memphis, Tenn., October 22.—The Belle Meade Gun Club's shooting tournament closed with two excellent special events. The attendance was large and the day cloudy and cold. These special events were the features of the day's sport:

Special match between J. A. Elliott and J. H. Acklen at twenty live birds, only one barrel to be shot. On the first round they tied, each killing twenty birds. This was shot off at five birds, Elliott killing five, Acklen four.

Special match for championship of the United States, 100 live birds, $100 a side, between Rollo Heikes, of Dayton, O., in defense of the cast-iron chapionship medal, and William Elliston, Nashville. Heikes won, killing ninety-six birds to Elliston's ninety-four. This is the fourth time Heikes has won the medal.

Last Day at Morris Park.

New York, October 22.—This was the last day of the season at Morris Park and the attendance was large. The trio, Kentucky Colonel, Manuel and Filigrane, were always hot favorites for the White Plains handicap, but Mr. Clay, an outsider, won handily. In the Morris Park handicap Ben Holliday, with his 138 pounds, was always the favorite. At no stage of the race did Holliday do anything more than rate along until they came to the stretch, when he left the others as if they were standing still and won easily.

The Kentuckians Are Easy Winners.

Cincinnati, October 22.—The Kentuck Central stakes for two-year-olds, at one mile, was run at Latonia in a sea of mud. The race was only a gallop for The Kentuckian, the odds-on favorite. There was nothing in the race that could even make him extend himself. Jockey Nutt was suspended after the last race for an incompetent ride on Gallivant.

ALL ARRANGEMENTS COMPLETED

Lenox Athletic Club Ready for the Sharkey-Corbett Fight.

New York, October 22.—The management of the Lenox Athletic Club, of this city, has completed all details for the twenty-round bout between Corbett and Sharkey, which is scheduled to take place on November 22d.

FROSTS STRIKE YELLOW FEVER.

Weather Bureau Shows Temperature in Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana.

Washington, October 22.—The weather bureau today issued the following bulletin of frosts in yellow fever districts:

"This morning's reports show frosts generally throughout the infected district. In Alabama, eastern and northern Mississippi and northern Louisiana the frosts were heavy and killing; in southwestern Mississippi and southern Louisiana light frosts were reported.

"At Mobile the minimum temperature was 40 degrees and at New Orleans 46 degrees, the lowest previous record for the third decade of October being 34 degrees at Mobile and 42 at New Orleans. November 18th is the earliest date on which freezing temperature has ever occurred at New Orleans and November 2d is the earliest date of freezing temperature at Mobile.

"In central Mississippi and northern Louisiana, and also in northern Alabama and northern Georgia freezing weather has occurred in the third decade of October. The earliest date of heavy frost at Mobile was November 2, 1874-1878. The earliest date at New Orleans was November 11, 1877.

"The average minimum of temperature for the regions referred to ranged from 50 degrees to 55 degrees during November with periods of freezing temperature. The occurrence of light frosts Tuesday morning supplemented by heavy frosts and lower temperature this morning may be considered unfavorable for the further progress of the yellow fever. The temperature will probably for several days be below the season's average, which is 66 degrees at New Orleans and 65 degrees at Mobile."

EIGHT NEW CASES AT JACKSON.

Religious Services Will Be Held Today for the First Time in Months.

Jackson, Miss., October 22.—There were eight new cases of yellow fever reported for today, as follows: J. J. Baxter, Mr. Fairchild, Miss C. W. Walker, at Orphanage; John Dixon, Sr., John Dixon, Jr., Mrs. S. K. Cloud, Miss Carrie and Charles Hawkinson. There were no deaths. Refugees are rather slow about returning, seemingly preferring to wait a few days longer for the cold weather to get in its work.

Selma Lifts Quarantine.

Selma, Ala., October 22.—(Special.)—The county and city boards of health met today and declared the quarantine against Mississippi, Louisiana and all yellow fever infected points off.

Vicksburg's Quarantine Off.

Vicksburg, Miss., October 22.—The city board of health today declared all quarantines against infected points off.

Montgomery's Quarantine Withdrawn.

Montgomery, Ala., October 22.—Montgomery quarantine was declared off today against all points by the city board of health. Tonight Dr. Sanders, state health officer, practically raised the state quarantine by withdrawing all officers from trains.

TROOPS WILL COME WITHIN TWO WEEKS

That Is the Opinion of Major Varnedoe, Who Is in Macon.

GENERAL WILSON IS EXPECTED

Will Be in Command of the Troops in Macon Camp.

SITE WILL PROBABLY BE OCMULGEE PARK

Grand Master Masons To Meet in Macon This Week—Programme of Christian Endeavorers.

Constitution Bureau, Brown House, Macon Ga., October 22.—(Special.)—The soldiers may come to Macon earlier than was expected. Major James O. Varnedoe, of the commissary department, is in the city today and he says that he expects the troops to arrive here in about two weeks.

General Wilson, the officer in command, was in Lexington yesterday and it is thought that he will come here from there. A telegram was received in the city yesterday from the assistant adjutant general stating that the selection of the camp site would be left to the discretion of the commanding officer and that the commanding officer at Macon had been ordered to precede his troops here.

Major Varnedoe, who is a Georgian, will be stationed here as chief commissary of the First division. He will remain in the city until the troops arrive.

Major Varnedoe is an old confederate soldier and surrendered at one time to the same general under whom he is now serving. He says that he has nothing to do with the selection of the camp, as that matter has been left entirely to General Wilson. He thinks, however, that Ocmulgee park would be a good site for the camp. It is more than probable that the troops sent here will be camped at that place.

If General Wilson comes direct from Lexington here he will probably reach the city tomorrow morning. He will select the camp immediately upon his arrival and the soldiers will be sent here at once. The city officials are anxious to know where the camp is to be located so that they can begin work in getting it in shape. General Wilson will be in command of the troops here and with him will be General Bates as commander of the First division. Macon will have two brigades of the first division and they will be in command of Brigadier Generals Compton and McKee.

Grand Master Masons.

The annual convention of the Grand Master Masons of the state will be convened here on Tuesday, the 25th, and will continue in session for three days. The sessions will be held in the Masonic temple on Mulberry street. About 500 delegates from the different lodges in the state will be in attendance. Only the routine business of the convention will be transacted and the officers for the coming year will be elected.

So far as known the present officers will be re-elected. The present officers are:

James Taylor, grand master, Lumberville, Ga.

W. A. Davis, deputy grand master, Macon, Ga.

John D. Harrel, senior grand warden, Bainbridge, Ga.

John W. Akin, junior grand warden, Cartersville, Ga.

James Hussan, grand treasurer, Boston, Ga.

W. A. Wollihn, grand secretary, Macon, Ga.

Christian Endeavorers.

The programme for the Christian Endeavor convention which meets here on the 28th, 29th and 30th has not yet been made out. A committee in Atlanta is busy at work on it, and expect to have it completed by Monday.

The speaker for the first day will be Rev. W. P. Thirkield, of Atlanta, who will address the convention on "The Building of a Man."

Among the other prominent speakers will be Rev. W. F. McCauley, of Savannah, Rev. A. L. Smith, of Savannah, and Rev. C. P. Williamson, of Atlanta. These gentlemen are well known, and will greatly add to the entertainment of the convention.

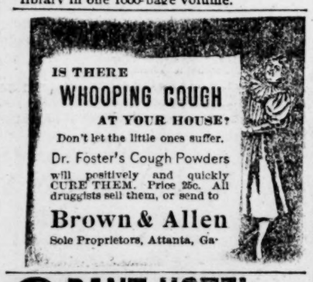

Happy, healthy childhood! Every childless woman feels a tugging at her heart-strings when she sees another woman's happy, healthy rollicking baby. Motherhood is woman's supremest duty and her supremest happiness. Even in childhood she shows how deeply thi sentiment is implanted in her breast when she plays with her dolls. There are thousands of otherwise happy wives in this world who only lack the thrilling touch of a first-born's fingers to complete their happiness.

Every wife may be the mother of happy, robust children who will. Thousands of women who had lived years of cheerless, childless wedded life, or whose babies have been born to them weak and sickly, soon to die, are now happy mothers of healthy children, and bless Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for the wonders it has accomplished for them. This great medicine acts directly and only on the delicate and important organs that bear the burden of maternity. It makes them strong, healthy, vigorous and elastic. It allays inflammation, heals ulceration, and tones and strengthens the nerves. It banishes the discomforts of the expectant months and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It insures a healthy child and an ample supply of nourishment. Honest dealers will not offer worthless substitutes for the sake of a little added profit.

"I cannot say enough in praise of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, as it has undoubtedly saved my life," writes Mrs. Florence Hunter, of Corley, Logan Co., Ark. "I miscarried four times; could get no medicine to do me any good. After taking several bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I made my husband a present of a fine girl."

ARMED NEGROES DRIVEN AWAY BY WHITES

North Carolina Negroes Threaten To Burn Ash Pole, N. C.

CITIZENS ASK FOR HELP

White Men In Adjacent Places Secure Guns and Hasten to Their Aid.

BOTH FACTIONS PREPARED TO FIGHT

Negroes Are Ordered To Leave the Place and at First Decline, but Finally Move Away, Shooting as They Go—Their Return Expected.

Wilmington, N. C., October 22.—A special to The Star from Lumberton, N. C., says: "A few nights ago Stubbs Stone, living in Ash Pole, eleven miles from here, was robbed and burned. Circumstances pointed to certain negroes. The matter has been under investigation for several days, and yesterday it was expected that several negroes would be arrested.

"The negroes heard of it and determined to resist arrest, and threatened to burn the town. Last night about 100 assembled in the village after dark and the whites kept watch.

"Late in the night the negroes commenced shooting. The fire was returned by the few white men assembled. About fifty shots were fired, but no one was injured.

"This afternoon the negroes commenced assembling, heavily armed, and expressed their determination to burn the place tonight. Help was asked from Lumberton, and a number of young men heavily armed left this afternoon. Young men are hastening to Ash Pole from the surrounding towns. The negroes are 150 strong, and at least 100 white men are already there.

"At 11:45 p. m. information was received from Dr. Brown, of Ash Pole, saying that they had made the negroes leave. The white men sent a messenger to them twice, and they refused to leave. The third time they were told that if they did not leave the whites would fire into them.

"The negroes then retired, the white men making them go in two directions. Dr. Brown says he can hear shooting in every direction, but cannot say whether they will remain or not."

IRISHMAN SHOWS SYMPATHY.

Smashes a Window in Which Anti-French Picture Is Displayed.

London, October 22.—The excitement over the Fashoda question led an Irishman this morning to smash with an umbrella a window of the office of Punch, on Fleet street, where was displayed a cartoon depicting John Bull threatening a French organ grinder who does not depart when ordered to do so.

The Irishman shouted, "vive la France" as he broke the window and was arrested. When asked if he was a Frenchman, the prisoner said:

"No, I'm an Irishman. Had I been a Frenchman I would have blown down the place."

SPAIN WANTS A COMPROMISE.

Commissioners Submit a New Proposition to the Americans.

Paris, October 22.—The United States peace commission held two sittings today to consider the voluminous communication presented yesterday by the Spanish commissioners.

This new proposition of the Spaniards looks to a compromise between the refusal of the Americans to assume any of the Cuban debt and the Spanish holding that the United States should assume it wholly. The terms of yesterday's proposal are obviously unknown save to the commissioners.

The American commissioners will reply to the communication at Monday's joint session and an extended argument will then follow and will carry the matter possibly over to another session.

NO POLITICAL ASSESSMENTS.

Civil Service Commission Has Inaugurated a Vigorous Campaign.

Washington, October 22.—The civil service commission is making a vigorous campaign against political assessments of federal officials and employees in view of the approaching elections, and in addition to its own circular, has brought out an order from the postoffice department, to be followed by one from the treasury, looking to its full enforcement. Acting Postmaster General Heath has issued an order calling attention to the commission circular and directing all postmasters to sign, post conspicuously and "use every means to direct the attention of their subordinates" to it. The order sent out by the commission is accompanied with a warning from the commission that its duty is to enforce the law strictly and that it will employ every legitimate and available means to secure the prosecution and punishment of whoever may violate it.

EMPRESS IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

Sultan Entertains the German Visitors at a Farewell Banquet.

Constantinople, October 22.—At the grand farewell banquet here last night the sultan sat between the emperor and empress of Germany.

At about 10 o'clock their imperial German majesties withdrew to the Morassin Kiosk and the emperor afterwards returned the farewell visits of the diplomatic corps.

Duchess of Aosta a Mother.

Turin, October 22.—The duchess of Aosta, wife of Prince Emanuele Filiberto, duke of Aosta, eldest nephew of the king of Italy, was safely delivered of a son today. The duchess was formerly Princess Helena of Orleans, daughter of the late count of Paris. She was married to the duke of Aosta on June 25, 1895.

A GALLOPING ANGEL!

"Gee-whiz! Do you mean to tell me that that namby-pambly, flat, insip'd drivel is Postum Food Coffee? Take it away, and let me burn into your mind as with a red-hot poker, this fact—Postum is a delicious beverage.

"Let me repeat it. Postum is a crisp, delicious drink.

"Do you understand my language? Postum is good, toothsome and satisfying.

"But when you serve it half boiled it tastes like—Wow! take it away.

"How to make it? Perfectly simple plan. Boil it! Boil it!! Boil it!!!

"The flavor cannot be brought out of the grains until it has actively boiled full 15 minutes.

"Excuse me, my dear, you did not boil that Postum 15 minutes. You may have had the pot on the stove that long, but that won't do. When actual bubbling and boiling begins take account of your time, and then allow full 15 minutes for genuine boiling.

"Use four heaping teaspoons of Postum to the pint of water, and when it has properly boiled you have something to be proud of.

"When a man wants Postum, he wants it to taste good.

"There is one sure and unfailing test of the truthfulness of the cook. If the Postum is good she has properly boiled it, if it is flat, she has not, and no excuse will change that fact.

"One cup of Postum Food Coffee made right makes one a friend forever.

"If you have been poorly served, try again our way. You will not be disappointed."

If your ill-feelings don't give way to medicines, try leaving off coffee a while. You may be one of that great army of active, bright, highly organized Americans that coffee acts upon as a slow, sure, and persistent poison; that first affects stomach and heart, then liver, bowels, nerves, weak eyes, etc., finally drifting into paralysis, cancer of stomach, heart disease, or some kindred evil.

Some people seem to drink coffee and whiskey without ill effects, but when a man or woman finds that incipient disease persists in hanging about them, it seems the part of wisdom to look to the cause. Thousands of brainy Americans have found that cause right in their beloved and unsuspected coffee cup.

A trial of ten days to a month without coffee, but with Postum Food Coffee (properly made) in its place will tell the tale, and if you find your troubles gone, your eye bright and step elastic, with a feeling of energy sufficient to do your daily work and enjoy life, you may be sure you have spotted the worm that has been "hidden under the bark."

Come along, now, and take an inventory of yourself. See if we can't quit being sick cranks, and put our machinery in shape so we can do something in this busy world.

BUBONIC PLAGUE REACHES VIENNA

BROUGHT IN BY DOCTORS

Malady Seems To Have Been Contracted While Cultivating the Bacillus.

PERSONS SUBJECTED HAVE MOVED

Every Effort Is Now Being Made To Prevent Spread of the Disease, but It Is Feared That the Discovery Was Made Too Late.

Vienna, October 22.—The outbreak of bubonic plague at Vienna, due to the experiments in cultivation of the plague bacillus, has spread terror at the Austrian capital.

Three cases in addition to that of the late Herr Barisch, the assistant in the establishment who contracted the bubonic plague while cultivating the bacillus, have now occurred. They are two nurses in the laboratory, another of the assistants, Herr Barisch's wife, and Dr. Muller, the physician who attended Herr Barisch. The last sacrament of the Roman Catholic church was administered to the latter and to one of the nurses by a priest through a window of the plague cells.

Dr. Muller was considered an authority on the plague, having been to Bombay for the purpose of studying it on the spot, and he survived all the dangers there. The disease at Vienna has assumed a pneumonic form. There are no bolls, but each case is accompanied by high fever and blood spitting. Extraordinary precautions have now been taken to prevent an epidemic.

The plague patients lie in an isolated building, attended by Dr. Pooch, a volunteer physician, and by Sisters of Charity. They are surrounded by a rope, across which nobody is allowed to pass.

Dr. Pooch writes the prescriptions and fastens them to the window pane. The doctors outside read them and have them made up. Then the prescriptions are placed on the window ledge, whence they are removed by those inside. Food is conveyed to the patients and their attendants by Sisters of Charity in a similar manner and the nurses furnish accounts by telephone of all changes in the patients' condition.

Every person who has come in contact with Herr Barisch, principally the hospital attendants, have been isolated, some of them resisted and other tried to escape, but were captured, and all were locked up.

It is feared, however, that the precautions were taken too late.

Heer Barisch was ill for three days before he saw a doctor, during which time he lived with his wife and visited wine shops.

The wife, who has now developed suspicious symptoms, visited friends, rode in public omnibuses and came in contact with dozens of persons at her husband's funeral.

The excitement in medical circles is tremendous. The well-known chemist, Professor Hoffroth Luding, has made a pathetic speech, during which he expressed the hope that the doctors of Vienna will prove themselves equal to all emergencies. This reveals the fact that it is the opinion of medical men at the Austrian capital that the plague is likely to spread in that city. Another significant indication of this apprehension is found in the fact that a temporary hospital, consisting of several detached sheds, was hastily erected during the past night behind the infection hospital, 100 men worked by torchlight there in order to complete it as quickly as possible.

A painful feature of the Viennese situation is the unscrupulous attitude of the anti-Semitic papers, which are accusing the Jewish doctors of bringing the plague to Vienna. It is feared that this appeal to the worst passions of the mob will lead to plague riots against the Jew if the disease spreads.

Bubonic Plague Has Another Victim.

Vienna, October 22.—The Neu Frei Presse states that another nurse who was in attendance upon Herr Barisch, Professor Nothagle's assistant in the bacteriological establishment, who died from the bubonic plague on Wednesday last, has been attacked by the disease.

ENGLAND'S NAVY READY FOR WAR

France Is Industriously Preparing Her Battleships.

CONFLICT SEEMS CERTAIN

Both Nations Express a Desire To Remain on Friendly Terms.

BOTH ARE GETTING READY FOR WAR

Salisbury's Attitude Makes It Necessary for Faure To Withdraw from Fashoda or To Go to War with His Neighbors.

London, October 22.—Never since Great Britain and France began to dispute over Egypt, nor during the most acute stage of the Niger differences between those two countries, has the situation looked so ominous as today. In spite of the hope expressed in the sober journals of both countries that the matter would be amicably arranged, it is a fact that the French naval and military authorities are making feverish preparations for war, and though calm reigns at the British dockyards at Portsmouth, Chatham and Devonport, it is only the calm of preparedness and significant orders have been arriving there from the admiralty indicating the belief that Great Britain and France are on the brink of war.

As M. De Blowitz, the Paris correspondent of The London Times, writes today:

Never before has there been witnessed such a state of fever as is now prevailing in Great Britain, nor so great an exaltation of public feeling over a matter of foreign policy, while on her side France is promptly and rapidly, without looking forward, preparing to fight any power provoking her. The French statesmen, however, still cling to the hope that the marquis of Salisbury will offer some exchange which will enable them to retire from Fashoda without apparent sacrifice of dignity. This hope is based on a conversation between Lord Salisbury and Baron de Courcel, the French ambassador at London, which figures in a most important dispatch in the yellow book which the French government will issue tomorrow.

It is learned by the Associated Press that Baron de Courcel in this dispatch says Lord Salisbury during the conversation referred to asked him what were the desires of France in the Soudan. To this the baron replied that France wished for an outlet on the upper Nile. Lord Salisbury then responded that he could not promise anything and must consult with his colleagues on such a matter.

Frenchmen Are Deceived.

Frenchmen infer from this attitude of the British premier that he is willing to discuss the French claims, and they even talk of negotiations being in progress. The English newspapers, however, vigorously combat this impression and warn France not to be led away by such illusions. They declare that the evacuation of Fashoda must precede anything else.

BOARD PASSES IN ANNISTON

War Investigating Commission Hears Two Witnesses.

Anniston, Ala., October 22.—The war investigating commission began its work here today by making an inspection of the site of Camp Shipp in the forenoon and then devoting the afternoon to questioning General Frank, commanding officer of the camp, and his chief surgeon, Major Henry F. Hoyt.

Both were identified with Camp Thomas at Chickamauga, General Frank having been in command of the First division of the Third corps at that point, with Major Hoyt his chief surgeon there as here. The general trend of their examination here pertained more largely to Camp Thomas than to the camp here, as a majority of the men here were removed from Chickamauga. There are, however, two regiments here which were in Cuba and some of their representatives will also be examined.

Dr. Henry F. Hoyt was also examined, especially in reference to Camp Thomas. He said the increase in sickness above the normal had begun about the middle of July and had been rapid from that time forward until there were 350 patients in the First division hospital on the 1st of August. At this time it was impossible to receive new patients for a period of twenty-four hours. The increase in disease had begun with the rainy season, and he thought much of the malaria had been due to the fact that the men were compelled to sleep on the ground. He attributed the increase in typhoid to the sinks, to the flies; to the fact that the wells were infected and to the carelessness of the men. The command used water taken through pipes from the Chickamauga river, and the pipe was located only a few feet above the mouth of the stream which drained the camp. The doctor thought that some of the water from this tributary stream had been forced into the pipes by means of eddies. It had also been impossible to prevent the use of surface well water by the men.

Dr. Hoyt expressed the opinion that the surgeons in the division hospital had been competent, and in support of his opinion, he adduced the fact that there had been only twenty-seven deaths out of 1,549 patients in the hospital for the entire three summer months.

WESTERN RAILROAD IS SOLD.

St. Louis, Kansas and Southwestern Knocked Down for $150,000.

Kansas City, Kas., October 22.—The St. Louis, Kansas and Southwestern railroad was sold at auction here today by Master in Chancery Dillon under a decree of the United States circuit court to satisfy a claim of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, of New York. The line is sixty miles long, running from Arkansas City to Anthony, and was at one time part of the 'Frisco system.

The road and equipment was purchased for $150,000 by Samuel Baker, of Hamilton, Ontario, as representative of the creditors, who hold $8,000,000 of the company's bonds. The sale was subject to lease, which expires June 30, 1899, and is held by Colonel F. H. Eaton, who is at present operating the road.

First Concert a Success.

The immense audience that thronged the Grand opera house last night clearly demonstrated the fact that Atlanta is musical as well as literary. The great interest shown in the lectures of the Lecture Association is a high tribute to the culture of the Gate City, and no less so was the most enthusiastic reception given the Musical Association last night on the presentation of its first concert.

BRITISH SEA GOING WARSHIPS ARE NOW UNDER QUICK ORDERS

London, October 22.—The British admiralty has ordered every seagoing warship to have its crew made up to the full complement, as ordered in case of mobilization.

The order of the British admiralty practically means the complete telling off prospectively of every ship's company in detail.

Four torpedo boat destroyers, which were about to be fitted with new water tube boilers, have had their orders countermanded and have been instructed to redraw their stores.

Officers on leave of absence or unemployed have been notified to hold themselves in readiness to commission the reserve ships, if required.

The British cabinet has been summoned to meet early next week for the purpose of discussing the Fashoda question. It is understood that the government proposes to take the steps necessary to insist upon an early and definite statement on the subject from France.

ELECTED OFFICERS AND ADJOURNED

Woman's Home Mission Convention Completes Its Work.

ALL OFFICERS ARE RE-ELECTED

Convention Accepts Invitation To Meet in Dalton Next Year.

CONVENTION WAS A SUCCESSFUL ONE

Delegates and Visitors Were Pleased with Their Reception and Treatment in Atlanta.

Eighth annual convention of Woman's Home Mission Society completes its work and adjourns.

THE EIGHTH ANNUAL CONVENTION of the Woman's Home Mission Society of the north Georgia conference adjourned yesterday evening after having been in session since last Wednesday morning.

An invitation of the society in Dalton to meet in that city next year was accepted, and the meeting adjourned to meet in Dalton. Elberton also extended an invitation to the convention, but was defeated by a small vote.

The annual election of officers, which was one of the most interesting as well as one of the most important features of the convention, resulted in the re-election of all the old officers. The officers, as they now stand, are: President, Miss Emily M. Allen, Forsyth, Ga.; first vice president, Mrs. H. H. McClure, Rome, Ga.; second vice president, Mrs. R. H. Brown, Augusta, Ga.; corresponding secretary, Mrs. T. R. Kendall, Augusta, Ga.; recording secretary, Mrs. Mary H. Matthews, Atlanta, Ga.; assistant recording secretary, Mrs. McKendree; Treasurer, A. M. Lambdin, Barnesville, Ga.

The district secretaries are as follows:

North Atlanta district, Mrs. R. P. Milam; South Atlanta district, Mrs. Alonzo Richardson; Augusta district, Mrs. H. H. Simmons; Dalton district, Mrs. Star; Dahlonega district, Miss Singleton; Elberton district, Mrs. J. R. King and Mrs. W. C. Smith; Griffin district, Mrs. J. H. Shearborne; LaGrange district, Mrs. H. C. Harris; Rome district, Mrs. S. P. Jones; Oxford district, Mrs. Henderson and Miss Hudson; Carrollton and Athens districts will be filled by the executive committee.

Committee on local parsonage work, Mrs. H. H. McClure, chairman; Mrs. J. H. Eakes, Mrs. E. A. Gray, Mrs. L. J. Johnson, Mrs. W. B. Stradley, Miss Kate Neal and Mrs. S. C. Parker.

The convention just closed was one of the largest and most successful ever held by the society, and the officers are highly pleased with the result. A considerable amount of interest was displayed in the proceedings of the convention, and each session was largely attended. The work was done in a satisfactory manner, and those interested in the society feel that the result of the Atlanta meeting will have a good effect on the future work.

The delegates and visitors are delighted with the treatment they received at the hands of the Atlanta ladies, and are loud in their praise of Atlanta's hospitality. Each day a lunch was served in the basement of Trinity church by various churches of the city. Trinity church served the luncheon on the first two days and the First church served the lunch on the third day, while the other Methodist churches served the last lunch. The lunches were elegant, and reflected credit on the ladies in charge of them.

Two Sessions Yesterday.

The morning session of the convention was opened with devotional service led by Mr. W. S. Witham. This was followed by a short talk by Mrs. V. A. Redding, conference editor.

Mrs. Marshall McKendree read an interesting paper on the work in the rural districts, and told of some of the obstacles which were in the way of the work in the rural districts. One-minute discussions were had on "What Constitutes a Successful Auxiliary." This discussion was participated in by a large number of the delegates, and resulted in bringing out many points which will prove of value to the various auxiliaries.

Miss M. E. Singleton read a paper on the possibilities and hindrance of mission work in the rural districts. This was followed by a discussion of the subject. Both Mrs. Kendall and Mrs. E. P. Chamberlin were highly complimented for the good work they have done in the city missions. Mrs. H. G. Smith read a paper on the department of systematic and proportionate giving. This was followed by a solo by Mrs. Jarnigan. A paper by Mrs. A. M. Lambdin on the baby roll closed the morning services, and after devotional exercises, which were led by Mrs. L. J. Davies, the convention adjourned and lunched with the Methodist churches of the city.

Afternoon Session.

The first business of the afternoon session was the reading of the reports of committees. The report of the finance committee was read by Mrs. A. M. Lambdin. The report was lengthy and elaborated on the financial side of the society. It indorsed the system of proportionate giving as outlined in papers read before the convention.

The report, as first read, provided for the establishment of a door of hope in Atlanta similar to the one in Dallas, Tex. On account of the fact that the Florence Crittendon Home is doing such excellent work in Atlanta, and because the society has no desire to conflict with this home, the clause relating to this was stricken from the report, and was substituted by one indorsing the home and praising the work of the ladies in charge. The money which has been subscribed for the establishment by the society of a door of hope will be held until the society in southeast Georgia is ready to build such a home, and the money will then be turned over to that institution. The report of this and other committees will not be given out for publication until they have been revised.

The report of the committee on extension of work was read, as was the report of the committee on publication. These reports urge an increase in interest on the part of the ladies in the society. The report of the committee will be read at the meeting this evening.

After the reading of the reports of committees, the work of electing the officers was taken up, and resulted as stated above.

Bishop Candler Today.

The annual sermon to the society will be preached by Bishop Candler at Trinity church this morning at 11 o'clock. The delegates and their friends will be present, and the sermon will be one of the most prominent features of the meeting.

Following is the programme for the remainder of the day:

3:30 p. m.—"Our Young Women and Girls," addresses by Miss Bacon, Miss Bruce and Miss Davies.

7:30 p. m.—"Our Mission Schools," Miss Mary W. Bruce, superintendent.

NEGRO LYNCHED IN KENTUCKY.

Blue Grass Farmers Quickly Avenge an Assault Upon Defenseless Woman.

Tompkinsville, Ky., October 22.—News has reached here of the lynching of Arch Bauer, colored, who committed an assault on and attempted to murder Annie Morrison, the eldest daughter of Henry Morrison, a prominent farmer of Cumberland county.

The crime was committed at the Morrison home yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock. Miss Morrison received wounds that may prove fatal. When the neighbors learned of the crime they pursued the negro with bloodhounds and captured him in a small cabin within five miles of where the crime was committed.

When they entered the negro begged for mercy, but a noose in the rope was quickly thrown about his neck and he was dragged, more dead than alive, to the woods, where the rope was tossed over the limb of a tree and he was hauled into the air.

The lynchers left the body and disappeared. Eight bullet holes were found in the body this morning. The remains were buried by Bauer's relatives.

Sister of Charity.

The Sisters of St. Francis of St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum, Columbus, Ohio, write a letter to Dr. Hartman for publication. These public benefactors desire the whole world to know exactly what Peruna is to them and their work. They write: "Some years ago a friend of our institution recommended Dr. Hartman's Peruna as an excellent remedy for the influenza, of which we then had several cases which threatened to be of a serious character. We began to use it and experienced such wonderful results that since then Peruna has become our favorite medicine for influenza, catarrh, coughs, colds and bronchitis."

E. E. KIRBY GOES TO CHARLOTTE.

He Accepts a Position with the Seaboard and Leaves Tomorrow.

Mr. E. E. Kirby, the city ticket agent for the Atlanta and West Point railroad and the Western Railway of Alabama, leaves tomorrow night for Charlotte, N. C., where he will enter the service of the Seaboard Air-Line.

Mr. Kirby is well known in Atlanta. He was city ticket agent for the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia in its old Kimball house office for years. His first railroad position was with that company, with which he remained for ten years. When that company was absorbed by the Southern Mr. Kirby was offered a good position at Chattanooga, but he did not wish to leave Atlanta and remained here, accepting service later with the Atlanta and West Point. He also represented some of the ocean steamship companies.

Mr. Kirby is a splendid ticket agent and would make any company a strong representative anywhere. He has had long experience and has a wide acquaintance. His many friends here regret to see him leave, but the change is very much to his interest. General Passenger Agent Wiley, of the Atlanta and West Point, gave him a flattering letter when he tendered his resignation. Mr. Kirby will be the Seaboard's city ticket agent at Charlotte and he will begin his service on Tuesday.

He will be succeeded in the Atlanta and West Point office by Mr. J. W. Warner, who has been in the company's freight service.

HELMS WANTS PAY FOR INJURY.

Man Crushed Between Cars Sues Railroad for $10,000.

Valdosta, Ga., October 22.—(Special.)—Joseph W. Helms by his attorney, C. T. Ladson, of Atlanta, brought suit here today in the superior court against the Georgia, Savannah and Florida Railway Company for $10,000 damages. In the complaint filed he says that last July he was a brakeman on the Georgia Southern and Florida Railway Company and there were a number of empty sleeping cars which had been used in transporting soldiers and that while attempting to couple two of these, because of defection and dangerous drawheads and because one of the "buffers" had been previously entirely broken off, the cars came too close together and crushed him through the body and crippled him for life.

The case will be tried at the next term of the court.

Alger Changes Mustering Out Order.

Washington, October 22.—Secretary Alger has just ordered that the Fourteenth and Fifteenth regiments of Pennsylvania volunteers be mustered out instead of the Second and Third regiments from that state. The Fourteenth and Fifteenth are now at Camp Meade, while the Second and Third are in Philadelphia. It is understood that the change was made for consultation with the state authorities. The Second and Third regiments are understood to be destined for Cuban garrison duty.

CORN WHISKY; HOW IT IS MADE

R. M. Rose & Company the First To Place Old Corn on the Market.

MAKE IT AT THEIR DISTILLERY

They Color Whisky by Keeping It in Slightly Charred Barrels.

STRIVE FOR QUALITY AND NOT QUANTITY

The Liquor Is Filtered Twice and the Claim Is Made That It Is Absolutely Pure.

How corn whisky is made and aged at the Mountain Spring distillery.

THE AGING AND COLORING OF CORN whisky is an art which previous to ten years ago was scarcely known of and was practiced by none. Up to that time corn whisky was considered best when new.

There is but one distillery in Georgia where corn whisky is aged and colored and where this is made a specialty. This is the Mountain Spring distillery, owned and operated by R. M. Rose Company, wholesale liquor dealers of Atlanta. This distillery is located in Cobb county, two and one-half miles from the Chattahoochee river, and is under the supervision of a United States government gauger, who remains at the place all the time and who tests and cares for all the whisky made until it is withdrawn and placed on the market by the Rose company.

This distillery is one of the most interesting places near Atlanta and the methods of making whisky here, while similar to the methods in other stills, are different in that they are the same methods practiced by the primitive whisky makers.

In modern distilleries steam has done away with a great amount of labor. In these stills the mashes are mixed by steam and to a considerable extent the mashes are cooked by steam.

At the Mount Spring distillery the mashes are mixed by hand and are cooked in copper stills over wood fires. Steam is used only for pumping purposes and for grinding corn. Here one sees liquor made as it was made 100 years ago. The still is located in an ideal spot and in appearance is similar to the old stills which were operated half a century ago before steam had been brought into use as an adjunct to whisky making.

At the Mountain Spring distillery no effort is made to make great quantities of whisky. The whole claim of the operators is for the quality of the whisky, and this is what they strive for. They make only two gallons and three quarts of whisky to the bushel, where they could make four gallons by the steam process.

Where the production is lessened in this manner the quality of the liquor is proportionately increased as is the cost of making the whisky. While the quantity of whisky made at the Mountain Spring distillery is not as great as is produced at those where steam is used, but the claim is made for whisky made by R. M. Rose Company that it is absolutely pure and it has been indorsed by physicians.

Aging and Coloring Corn Whisky.

Mr. R. M. Rose was the first distiller or wholesale dealer to age corn whisky for sale. In aging the whisky it is put up in slightly charred barrels which colors and purifies it and prevents it from tasting of the wood. This whisky is made only for the consumer and is shipped direct from the wholesale house of R. M. Rose Company to the consumer. It is widely used and many gallons of it are sent to the north and east, where it is gaining a reputation for its purity and medicinal properties.

The Mountain Spring distillery is in charge of Mr. Henry Gautschy, an experienced distiller who personally superintends the making of every gallon of whisky that leaves the still.

In the making of this whisky only the best milling white corn is used and the malt which is used to ferment the beer is made by sprouting the corn. No yeast or chemicals are used to increase the yield. The beer is distilled into low wine in copper stills over furnace wood fires. The low wines are transferred to a doubling still by furnace heat and is then run off into proof whisky. The whisky is purified during the process of distillation by being filtered through charcoal and sand. It is filtered twice and all poisonous properties are removed in this manner.

The water used in the distillation is obtained from a pure mountain spring and is conducted to the still through pipes, thereby having no chance to become mixed with surface water.

Mr. Chapman, the government gauger who is now stationed at the still, says it is the cleanest he has seen. The greatest care is taken to keep the distillery in a perfectly clean condition and the labor which is employed is experienced and expert.

After the whisky is barreled it is placed in warm, dry warehouses, the keys to which are in the possession of the government gauger. It is in these warehouses that the whisky is aged and here it remains until it reaches the proper age to be placed on the market.

While corn whisky can be colored with coloring matter, it will not have the flavor, ripeness and bouquet of Rose's old corn whiskies.

The whisky made and colored at the Mountain Spring distillery is used exclusively by the R. M. Rose Company and is sold by them directly to the consumer and is handled by no middle man.

PROTECT YOURSELF IN TIME! A BATTLE IS COMING!

In an earnest and highly interesting manner The Washington Medical and Surgical Institute sets forth the climatic causes for the COMING CATARRHAL EPIDEMIC.

Low and lowering barometer, cold, raw winds, variable temperature, fogs, rains, high winds and overheated rooms, sudden chills. These conditions drive the fluids of the body from surfaces to interiors, producing congestion of the mucous membranes.

Now, it is as essential for the physician to know the effects of the changes upon the human organism thoroughly, that he may be able to grasp the situation in all its manifold phenomena successfully, as for the captain of a vessel to know the effects of a coming storm upon his ship to be able to prevent a wreck.

It is a well-known fact at this period of the year the community has scarcely recovered from the long heated term that enervates the system and renders them unable to resist the encroachment of diseases of the mucous membrane. In this weakened condition, before they are aware of it, the blow falls, generally, on the nasal passages, and acute catarrh coriza or common cold in the head results. This is so common as to be looked upon as of very little importance by the average person, and as a mere pathological trouble not worth doing anything for by the average doctor.

Here is made the MISTAKE THAT LEADS TO DEATH.

The cause of this sad mistake is that the general practitioner of medicine has many apparently more serious cases and no time to search in the realm of nature and obtain that which would fully relieve the sufferer, and the patients finally drift from doctor to doctor, the disease meanwhile progressing until it has reached the deep hold of which they cannot successfully treat.

It is for this reason that the physicians of the Washington Medical and Surgical Institute became deeply interested in this neglected class of diseases and spent their time and money and extensively traveled in order to search out those remedial agencies which would enable them to triumph over all difficulties that environed the general practitioner.

That they have succeeded in accomplishing this most desirable result is proven by the constant demands made upon their professional skill and the great number of happy, healthy persons who were once going downward to death from neglect of their catarrhal difficulties.

The Washington Medical and Surgical Institute calls the attention of the community to the fact that if individuals would watch themselves they will note a chilly sensation as they pass from an overheated room to the cool air; the nose will grow dryer and more sensitive with an inclination to sneeze. Soon a yellowish discharge follows, growing more and more tenacious; the tonsils inflame, soreness in swallowing; larynx involved; speech becomes hoarse with a nasal twang. Finally swelling of the mucous membranes of the passages, with more or less difficulty of breathing.

After a number of attacks the breathing through the nose becomes almost impossible. Progress of the disease continues with increased difficulties. Ulcerative process sets in and a foul odor is thrown off, premonitory of dissolution. All these conditions are but the manifestation of receding vital forces of resistance and a cultivation of the soil for the reception of which, when it has found a full lodgement in the human organism. The Washington Medical and Surgical Institute will not offer any encouragement for relief! They bow to the inevitable outcome. The time to conquer this great enemy to life is to prevent the encroachment of all catarrhal diseases. And that they have most successfully done this, they point to their numerous patrons and let them speak for them.

"When I called at your office on May 3d I could not talk above a whisper; was afflicted with a terrible case of catarrh. I had previously consulted most of the leading physicians of the city without avail. Indeed, my case seemed to grow worse. Within three months your wonderful treatment has completely cured me. I thank God that I called at your office, and will recommend you whenever I get a chance."—R. A. RAKESTRAW, 168 Decatur street, Atlanta, Ga.

STARBUCK TO MEET M'DUFFEE MONDAY

Race at the Coliseum Will Be a Big Event.

BOTH CLAIM THE RACE

They Say They Will Keep the Pedals Going Furiously.

WHAT JACK PRINCE HAS TO SAY

He Believes It Will Be the Biggest Racing Event in the Coliseum's History.

Red-hot race will be run at the coliseum Monday night by Starbuck and McDuffee.

STARBUCK AND McDUFFEE, WHO are to meet tomorrow night on the track in a match race for the first time, worked out a bit on the track yesterday. It was as good as a race to see the two men together. They did not sprint against each other, but the five miles that they rode was covered at one of the fastest clips ever seen on the Atlanta track.

They were not racing; there was no money up, but it was a race, nevertheless. Each man was trying to show the other one what he would have to expect tomorrow night, and as they rode they watched each other like hawks. First McDuffee would pull out in front and then Starbuck would forge ahead as if to indicate that the pace was not enough for him. The two men do not speak. They have been rivals for a long time and the fact that they both claim to be champion does not tend to make the feeling between them the best.

They are both quiet, gentlemanly fellows, and neither one will talk about himself except to say that they want to win the race tomorrow night. McDuffee has been undefeated so far this year with one exception, and in that race, while he was defeated, he was given the race and the purse by the judges.

AN ELEVATOR CAUGHT FIRE.

Blaze in the Silvey Wholesale Dry Goods Store—Disastrous Fire Averted by the Firemen.

A fire broke out in the wholesale dry goods store of Silvey & Co., on Decatur street, near Peachtree, last night about 10:15 o'clock, and the timely arrival of the fire department stopped what would have been a distrous blaze.

A small box that had been left in the elevator was filled with paper, and in some way the trash caught fire. The burning box ignited the woodwork of the elevator and when the fire was discovered by the police it was in a bright blaze.

The damage was very light. It is believed the trash box caught from the end of a cigar which had been thrown into it earlier in the evening and before the store was closed.

COTTON MILLS ARE SHUT DOWN.

Trustees Will Secure Money on the Goods in the Pool.

Fall River, Mass., October 22.—The Chase, Sagamore, Wampanoag, Weetamoe and Stafford cotton mills shut down today in accordance with the agreement of print cloth manufacturers to curtail production for four weeks.

It is understood that the trustees appointed by the Manufacturers' Association, who have charge of the selling of print cloth, will be empowered under the pooling agreement to borrow money on the manufactured product placed in their hands and that the mills which have cloth in the pool will be allowed to secure loans from the trustees. The sales of the week in the local print cloth market have amounted to about 250,000 pieces. The mills which closed today employ about 3,500 hands.

FIVE MEN KILLED IN A WRECK.

Tramps Stealing a Ride Are Crushed to Death in Box Cars.

Fort Worth, Tex., October 22.—A wreck on the Rock Island road near here today resulted in the death of five men. Three others will die and two were seriously injured.

A freight train broke in two at the top of a steep grade. The rear portion could not be stopped and it crashed into the front section, wrecking and derailing several box cars. In one of the wrecked cars were ten men, evidently stealing a ride.

Five of them were instantly killed and three are dying. The names of the unfortunate men cannot be learned.

MORTAL REMAINS REST IN OAKLAND

Judge Marshall J. Clarke Was Interred Yesterday.

DR. W. W. LANDRUM OFFICIATED

Funeral Services Were Conducted in the Second Baptist Church.

MANY ESCORTS ATTENDED THE REMAINS

The Auditorium of the Second Baptist Chruch Was Crowded and the Services Were Impressive.

The mortal remains of the late Judge Marshall J. Clarke were interred in Oakland yesterday.

THE REMAINS OF THE LATE JUDGE Marshall J. Clarke were interred in Oakland cemetery yesterday afternoon after impressive services at the Second Baptist church. Dr. W. W. Landrum, of the First Baptist church, officiated in place of Dr. Henry McDonald, who is absent from the city.

The church altar of the Second Baptist was literally covered with floral offerings, one of the prettiest of which came from the Atlanta Bar Association. It was a large design of white roses and stood directly behind the place where the casket rested.

Many floral offerings were sent to the late home of Judge Clarke, on Washington street, and after the casket had been covered it was found necessary to leave many of them at the residence. The grave was completely covered with the flowers placed there by loving friends and relatives.

The services at the church commenced at 2:30 o'clock, and the auditorium was filled before the cortege stopped at the entrance It was necessary to make room for the relatives of Judge Clarke, and many were forced to remain standing in the rear of the church.

The bar association occupied seats in the center of the church, and nearly every member was present. The attorneys met at the courthouse at 2 o'clock and marched in a body to the church. Judge Clarke's Sunday school class occupied seats near the front of the altar beside the relatives.

The following gentlemen, who were lifelong friends of Judge Clarke's, acted as pallbearers:

Mr. E. W. Martin, Mr. Alex Smith, Judge J. T. Pendleton, Hon. Porter King, Mr. E. H. Thornton, Mr. A. D. Adair, Mr. George Stevens, Mr. Henry Hillyer, Mr. M. M. Welch and Mr. T. W. Baxter.

The following gentlemen composed the honorary escort and accompanied the remains from the residence to the church and then to the cemetery:

Dr. W. S. Kendrick, Judge Logan E. Bleckley, Mr. E. P. Chamberlin, Mr. John A. Grant, Mr George Westmoreland, Mr. G. T. Dodd, Captain W. D. Ellis, Mr. A. I. Briscoe, Mr. F. J. Paxon, Mr. H. H. Cabaniss, Mr. W. A. Hemphill, Dr. J. B. Baird, Mr. George Boynton, Mr. A. J. McBride, Mr. Julius L. Brown, Mr. E. W. Marsh, Mr. Frank Graves, Mr. A. Maier, Mr. Isaac Liebman, Mr. R. C. Black, Mr. S. P. Richards, Mr. L. H. Hall, Mr. S. B. Spencer, Mr. E. Y. Clarke, Mr. W. L. Abbott, Mr. B. B. Neal, Mr. Jacob Haas and Mr. H. A. Boynton.

Members of the Young Men's Library Association met and passed resolutions concerning the death of Judge Clarke, after which the officers and directors of the association were requested to represent the Young Men's Library Association at the funeral. Judge Clarke was one of the founders of the library and was its first president.

The following officers and directors of the Young Men's Library Association attended the funeral as an escort to the remains:

Messrs. E M. Mitchell, A. A. Meyer, G. R. DeSaussure, J. R. Nutting, C. A. Read, F. J. Paxon, R. C. Alston, T. H. Martin, R. L. Palmer, W. G. Cooper, W. F. Denny, J C. Haskell and F. M. Scott.

The officers and directors of the Atlanta Lecture Association, of which Judge Clarke was one of the founders and over which he was at all times enthusiastic, also constituted an honorary escort. They are:

Messrs. E. P. Chamberlin, C. A. Read, Frank Weldon, F. J. Paxon, T. J. Kelly, L. J. Trounstine, W. M. Slaton, R. J. Guinn, Josiah Carter, C. C. Cox, James E. Cariton, A. G. Thomas, H. A. Maier, Joseph Richardson, Joseph Jacobs and Frank E. Block.

In his sermon over the remains Dr. Landrum spoke as follows, taking his text from Acts xiii, 36: "After he had served his own generation by the will of God he fell on sleep and was laid unto his fathers:

Dr. Landrum said:

"Salvation is the noblest thought of the Almighty concerning us; salvation is the biggest word in the lexicon of the human race; salvation is the gloria in excelsis of the redeemed in heaven. It is a present experience as well as a future inheritance. It is salvation from hatred to love, from doubt to trust, from sin to righteousness, from selfishness to service. It takes in the whole man and is operative and effective in all his selections. Salvation is to one's self, one's family, one's church, one's community, one's country and the world.

"Every saved man is an incarnation of the spirit of him 'who went about doing good.' His epitaph is that of Israel's poet king, 'David after he had served his own generation by the will of God fell on sleep and was laid unto his fathers.'

"We can serve other generations yet to come only by serving our own. We can serve our own generation only by helping individuals; we can help individuals only by understanding ourselves; we can understand ourselves only by submitting ourselves fully and unreservedly unto the will of God through Jesus Christ our Lord.

"Such, in epitome, was the creed of the worthy Christian gentleman whose departure we mourn today. His life, just so far as it was exemplary and praiseworthy and edifying to us, was the illustration of these simple but fundamental and sublime doctrines. The Bible which embodies them was his only rule of faith and practice, the test and the touchstone of creed and conduct.

His Early Faith.

"It is an old adage that 'the boy is the father of the man.' Marshall J. Clarke gave his heart to his God in boyhood. When about fourteen years old he was deeply concerned about the worth and dangers of his own soul. It was a memorable crisis in his history. A great inner revolution occurred which resulted in hearty repentance toward God for all his sins and simple, but satisfying trust in Jesus Christ as the 'Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world.' This experience of divine grace was not transient but permanent; it inhered in the warp and woof of his moral and spiritual constitution; it calmed and controlled his whole subsequent career. While he shrank from public disclosure of his holiest emotions he was ever ready to declare, when it seemed proper to do so, 'by the grace of God I am what I am.'

A Courteous Gentleman.

"It would be out of place for me to detain you today with any worthy biographical sketch of our lamented brother or to pronounce an extended eulogy. His life in this community has been an open book, known and read of all men. Who of us can ever forget the picture which his character has hung up in the halls of our memory? How, in all his intercourse, he was the courteous, refined gentleman, ever manifesting that holiness which applies the golden rule in little things. How, as he moved among us, we esteemed him a gallant knight, without fear and without reproach. He was a man of worthy lineage and hereditary culture; he was one of those elect, which make up the literary leaven of our community, cherishing the true, the beautiful, and the good. His influence was silent, like that of gravity, but potent and pervasive, and that influence made our civic righteousness and social purity. As a lawyer he was learned and laborious; as a judge he wore the ermine with dignity and honor, with gentleness and firmness; as a patriot he put principle above policy and preferred defeat to victory bought at the sacrifice of honest conviction; as a Christian he was simple and straightforward, seeming to be just what he was and being just what he seemed to be; as a God-built man he was well-poised, symmetrical, quiet, consistent and courageous. It is but simple truth to say that our community had few like him and that his departure was a loss which all must feel and which none can repair.

He Died in the Harness.

"It pleased God to take him hence in the midst of his usefulness. The summons came suddenly. True, for more than a year Judge Clarke was well aware that he had been smitten with an incurable disease. This painful knowledge he kept within the immediate home circle, and went on in the discharge of his professional duties as if there were no shadow over his pathway. It was his ambition to die 'with the harness on.' God gave him his desire. There in the temple of justice, in the early morning of a busy day, in the midst of a case of grave importance, with every faculty and power devoted to duty, in a moment he was called to lay aside his work and quit the busy scenes of the human life. Having served his own generation by the will of God he fell on sleep, sweet, sweet sleep, in the bosom of his Father ad his God. 'He giveth his beloved sleep.' He is not dead, but sleepeth.

"Asleep in Jesus! Oh, how sweet
To be for such a slumber meet.
With holy confidence hoping
That death hath lost his venomed sting.

"Refreshed by slumber, he will awake again in the land that is fairer than day, in God's great family reunion where those long parted meet again and those who meet shall part no more. By God's grace, let us meet him there."

REMAINS TO BE INTERRED TODAY

Funeral of Mr. R. H. Huzza Will Occur This Afternoon.

Funeral services over the remains of Mr. R. H. Huzza, who died Thursday night at his late residence, 311 Courtland street, will occur this afternoon at 3 o'clock, Dr. Jenkins, of the First Congregational church, officiating. The services will occur at the late residence and the interment will take place in Westview cemetery.

Dr. Huzza had a host of friends who had known him for many years and who admired him for his gentleness, courtliness and modesty. He had a particularly cheerful disposition, and during the several months of his last illness he was never in too great pain to say a cheerful word to those around him.

The following gentlemen are requested to act as pallbearers and are to meet at the rooms of H. M. Patterson at 2 o'clock this afternoon:

Dr. W. C. Jarnigan, Dr. H. S. Wright, Dr. F. H. Peck, Colonel J. W. Austin, N. Ittner and J. A. Bailey.

IT WILL BE WARMER TODAY.

Weather Indications Cause the Forecaster To Give Promise of Genial Sunshine.

The man who gets up this morning and shivers with the cold need not get alarmed and put on all his last winter's heavy clothing, for if he does he is apt to be very uncomfortable before night. This does not mean either that he is to go out in a linen suit and take a palm leaf fan to church, but it is thrown out as a gentle hint that today the weather will moderate a bit and that tonight it will be some warmer than it was last night.

Chief Marbury said yesterday: "It will, I think, be some colder tonight and tomorrow morning early, but the chances are that it will moderate some during the day and it will be warmer tonight than it was last night. We will still have what you might call cool weather. No, I do not see any rain in sight now and as far as we can tell do not think that we will have any just now anyway.

"The cold snap that we have had here the last few days has been general all over the south and in many locations it has been much colder than it was here in Atlanta. In Memphis there was a killing frost night before last and in many sections throughout Texas there was a killing frost. There was been frost all through Mississippi and Louisiana and a light frost in New Orleans. This is unusually early for frost in the fever districts and the best feeling now prevails throughout that section of the country."

ROBBERY IN A DANCE HALL.

Country Negro Knocked Down in the "Dive"—Police Give Chase and Capture the Robbers.

A robbery was committed last night in the midst of a dance hall on Decatur street known as the "Dive." It was about the boldest affair of the kind that has been reported in police circles in many a day, or rather, night.

Ben Howard, a country negro, was taking in the Saturday night sights, and he went to the "Dive." He was showing his money around quite freely when Spencer Allen and Ethel Phillips, a negro man and woman, who are well known among the police, assaulted him with a heavy stick and then robbed him before they could be interfered with.

Call Officer Chosewood and Patrolman Hollis chased the robbers, who escaped by breaking through a rear window in the dance hall. The thieves knocked down a negro man who attempted to intercept them in an alley and then tried to strike Officer Hollis with a rock.

The robbers were caught and locked up, and the stolen money was recovered.

TWO MORE ARE IN THE RACE.

Mr. W. J. Albert Will Run for Judge and Mr. E. P. Upshaw for Solicitor of the City Court.

Mr. W. J. Albert has announced his candidacy for the judgeship of the city criminal court in the primary which will be held in event the general assembly passes the bill authorizing the election of city court judges and solicitors by the people. Mrs. Albert is a member of the firm of Albert & Hughes, and is well known in the city.

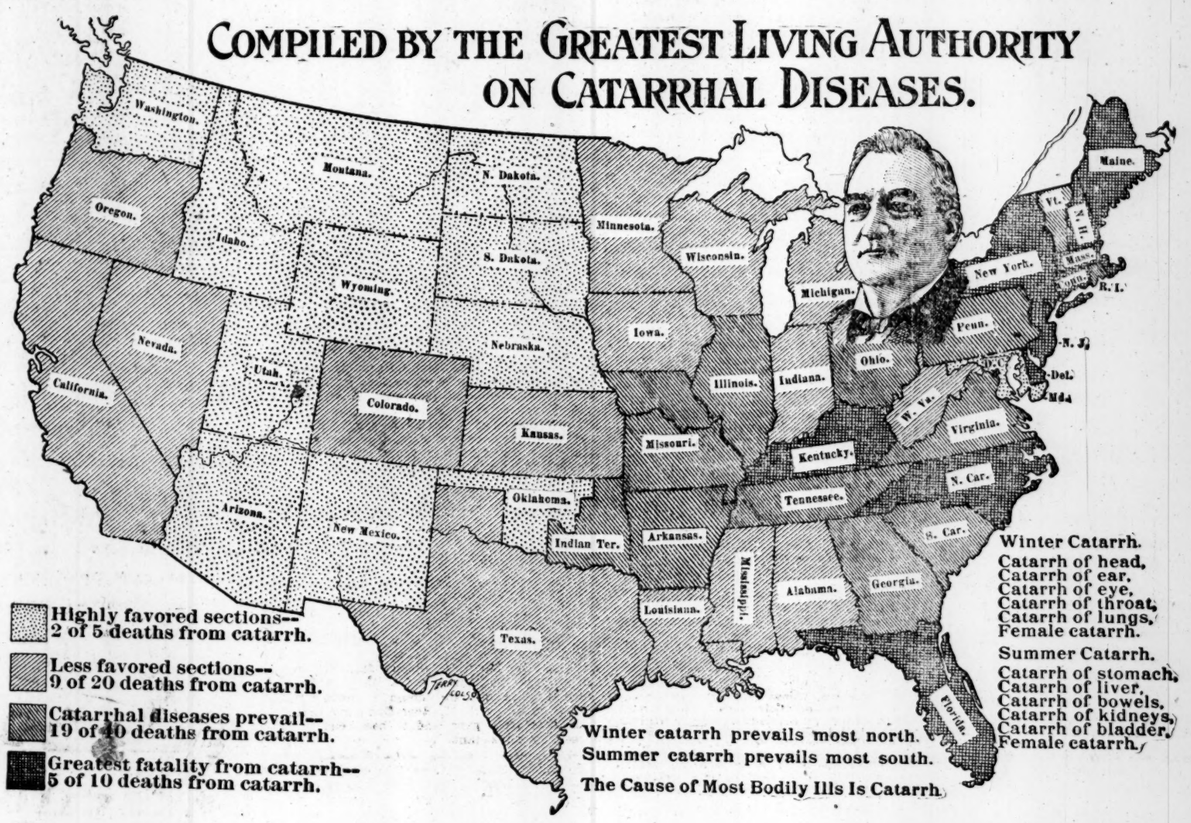

Among the candidates for the solicitorship is Mr. E. P. Upshaw, of the firm of Upshaw & Robinson. Mr. Upshaw has many friends in Atlanta, and they are confident that he will be the winner.

CATARRHAL DISEASES

Of the United States--Catarrh Found to Be the Ever-Increasing Cause of Death.

ONE-HALF OF 70,000,000 PEOPLE MORE OR LESS AFFLICTED

COMPILED BY THE GREATEST LIVING AUTHORITY ON CATARRHAL DISEASES.

The above map has been carefully compiled from United States documents by the Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, of Columbus, Ohio. The figures were taken from the latest mortal statistics published by the government and entirely agree with the archives kept at the Hartman Sanitarium.

The map is made in four shades. The lightest shade shows the states which have the lowest per cent of deaths due to catarrhal diseases. In these states very close to 42 per cent of all deaths in 1890 were due to catarrhal diseases. That is to say, over four out of every ten deaths were from catarrhal affections.

In the states of next darker shade the per cent varies from 42 to 45. In the next darker shade, 45 to 48 per cent of the whole number of deaths resulted from catarrhal diseases. In the darkest shade we have indicated the states in which 50 per cent, or one-half or more, of all the deaths were directly traceable to catarrh as the cause.

This is an appalling state of affairs. As many people die from catarrhal affections as all who die from accident, from contagious diseases, from hereditary diseases, and all other causes added together. Smallpox has its terrors and yellow fever its scares, but these are slight affairs compared to the mortality of catarrhal diseases.

This nation has got to confront the fact that catarrh has become a national curse. Catarrhal diseases threaten the life of our people. Over one-half of the people suffer from some form or degree of catarrh. Fully thirty-five million people are personally interested in the discovery of a radical catarrh cure.

A great many remedies for temporary relief have been devised from time to time, such as sprays, snuffs, creams and other local applications, but as a rule the medical profession has little or no enthusiasm in the treatment of catarrh. It is generally pronounced by them to be incurable. It therefore created a great sensation in medical circles when Dr. Hartman announced that he had devised a compound which would cure catarrh permanently. The remedy was named Pe-ru-na, and in a short time became known to thousands of catarrh sufferers, north, south, east and west.

Letters testifying to the fact that Pe-ru-na is a radical cure for catarrh began to pour in from all directions. Thousands of such letters are on file in the offices of the Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company. These letters are not used for publication except by the express wish of the writer. A pamphlet filled with such letters will be sent to any address free.

Pe-ru-na cures catarrh, chronic and acute. About this there can be no question. Everybody admits it. The only question that can be raised is whether the cures remain permanent. A few of the many people who were cured years ago will be asked to speak on this point. Any one doubting the genuineness of any letter can easily become satisfied by writing to the address under each one.

Catarrh of Bladder.

Mr. Samuel Sanders.

Mr. Samuel Sanders, Blythedale, Mo., writes: "My disease was catarrh of the urethra and bladder. My symptoms were the same as those given in the Family Physician No. 2. I got a bottle of Pe-ru-na and began taking it, and in a few days I was relieved and could sleep and rest all night. I think that Pe-ru-na is a valuable remedy. I had tried other very highly recommended medicines, but they did me no good. My physician told me that I could not expect to be cured of my trouble, as I was getting to be an old man (57 years). I feel thankful for what Pe-ru-na has done for me."

Catarrh of the bladder is, unfortunately, a very common disease. The symptoms are too well known to need description. Pe-ru-na is the most reliable remedy yet devised for this catarrh. Its cures are prompt and permanent.

Catarrh of the Head and Nose.

"I suffered with catarrh of the head, nose and throat for three years. I could get no relief until I began taking Pe-ru-na. Independent of curing my catarrh, it has greatly improved my general health. I cannot describe the change. Any one suffering from catarrh, and knowing that it can be cured, would be very unwise not to take Dr. Hartman's advice. Follow directions. Pe-ru-na does the rest."—Miss Linnie Wiggins, Berlin Heights, Ohio.

This was a case of catarrh in its most ordinary form. Catarrh of the head and nose occurs oftener than catarrh of other organs. Indeed, catarrh has been so frequently located in the head that some people suppose that catarrh is always located in the head, nose or throat.

Catarrh of Stomach.

"I would be in my grave now if it had not been for your godsent remedy—Pe-ru-na. Everybody says I am looking so much better. I have recommended it to a great many people and they think it and the Man-a-lin are grand medicines. No doctor could help me as Pe-ru-na did. For la grippe and colds we use nothing but Pe-ru-na. I was a broken down woman, had no appetite; what little I did eat did not agree with my stomach. It is now seven years past that I used Pe-ru-na and I can eat anything."—Mrs. Eliza Wike, No. 190 Iron street, Akron, Ohio.

A United States Senator's Wife.

Mrs. F. E. Warren, the wife of Francis E. Warren, United States senator from Wyoming, says the following in regard to Pe-ru-na: "The sample bottle of Pe-ru-na sent to my husband came when I was suffering with a cold, and I used it with good results."

Catarrh of the Lungs.

"My little boy was sick with lung trouble for seven weeks, when the physicians said they had done all in their power, and all gave no relief. I then resorted to the use of Pe-ru-na. After using it for three or four days I could see a decided change in him. I continued its use and he soon got entirely well. I have recommended it to others, who have used it with favorable results. I don't think any one can speak too highly of Pe-ru-na."—Joe R. Howard, Black Jack Grove, Tex.

Congressman Snover.

Horace G. Snover, congressman from Michigan, writes: "I have found Pe-ru-na a very efficient and speedy remedy for a persistent and annoying cough resulting from catarrhal trouble."

Congressman-at-Large of Kansas.

Congressman Botkin.

Hon. J. D. Botkin, congressman-at-large, of Kansas, says of Pe-ru-na: "It gives me pleasure to certify to the excellent curative qualities of your medicines, Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin. I have been afflicted more or less for a quarter of a century with catarrh of the stomach and constipation. A residence in Washington has increased these troubles. A few bottles of your medicines have given me almost complete relief, and I am sure that a continuation of them will effect a permanent cure. Pe-ru-na is really a wonderful remedy for catarrhal affections."

Catarrh of Liver.

Mrs. S. E. Robbins.

Mrs. S. E. Robbins, White Wright, Tex., writes: "Eight years ago my liver and stomach began to give me trouble. I had what is called colic, at times, and six years ago this spring I began to have colic every day, more or less. That fall I got so bad I had to take medicine, and five years ago this spring I took jaundice and gall-stone. It seemed to me that I was diseased from head to foot. There were several weeks that I could not sit up any, and I was as yellow as an orange. Last spring I got so bad that I was in bed most of the time for several weeks. Finally, when I heard of Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin, I had eaten nothing for several days, I quit taking the doctor's medicine and began to take Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin. I gained 25 pounds and now I can eat anything I want to."

Catarrh of the liver gives rise to the various forms of liver complaint. It is frequently the cause of dyspepsia, jaundice, constipation and biliousness. Pe-ru-na cures these cases by removing the cause.

Catarrh of the Ear.

"I write to let you know how I am getting along. I have taken about five bottles of Pe-ru-na and am proud to say that I have fully recovered. At first the catarrh was so bad I could scarcely hear; but now there is no difficulty in hearing and all the symptoms of catarrh have disappeared. Many thanks for your kindness and for your wonderful medicine."—Mr. Lee Stephens, Bailey, Tex.

Thousands of cases of catarrh of the middle ear are cured every year by Pe-ru-na. Before Pe-ru-na was known these cases nearly always ended in total deafness. How many have been saved from a life-time of deafness by Pe-ru-na can never be known, but the number must be very great, indeed. All such cases should write Dr. Hartman.

Member of Congress from Ohio.

Congr. Meekison.

Hon. David Meekison, member of congress from Ohio, says of Pe-ru-na:

"I have used several bottles of Pe-ru-na and feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head and feel encouraged to believe that its continued use will fully eradicate a disease of thirty years' standing."

Catarrh of Bowels.

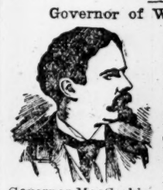

Mr. Charles Betts.

Mr. Charles Betts, of Burr Oak, Mich., writes: "I had been troubled for a long time with chronic diarrhoea, which produced great despondency; sickness at the stomach, pain between the hips and in the back, and increasing weakness of the whole system. I commenced taking Pe-ru-na. I can now do work that I could not do at all before taking Pe-ru-na. I began to improve at once, felt more cheerful and animated, stronger and buoyant, firmer nerves, freedom from pain in the bowels and stomach, and quiet sleep Pe-ru-na cured me so that I stayed cured. Many medicines help temporarily, but the disease returns. Not so with Pe-ru-na Its effect continues."

Catarrh of the bowels may produce diarrhoea or dysentery. Catarrh of the upper bowels is known as diarrhoea, summer complaint, cholera infantum and so forth. Catarrh of the lower bowels is called dysentery. Pe-ru-na cures catarrh in any location. Therefore it can be relied upon as a remedy for these cases.

Governor of West Virginia.

Governor MacCorkle.

W. A. MacCorkle, governor of West Virginia, says: "Your Pe-ru-na as a tonic is certainly unexcelled, and in a number of cases that have come under my observation, where it has been used for catarrh, or any disease which had its origin in that malady, it has been of very great benefit. Pe-ru-na has my hearty commendation, both as a tonic and catarrh remedy."

Pelvic Catarrh.

Miss Lizzie Peters.

Miss Lizzie Peters, of Mascoutah, Ill., writes: "I would like to let the world know what a wonderful medicine Pe-ru-na is. I am perfectly cured of female weakness by taking Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin. I have gained 37 pounds since taking Pe-ru-na. My friends are wondering what makes me look so bright and healthy. Before I knew what Pe-ru-na was I had told my parents that I would never get cured, and that I could not live much longer. It was Pe-ru-na alone that brought me back to health. Those who have been suffering for years, whether young or old, should not give up hope, but should try Pe-ru-na at once."

Catarrh of one or more of the pelvic organs is the cause of that long list of ailments known as female disease. No permanent cure for these cases can be expected unless the cause is removed. Pe-ru-na cures catarrh wherever located. Pe-ru-na has become a favorite remedy for female diseases because it reaches the source of these ailments, and its cures are therefore permanent.

Hon. J. L. Hampton, of Ohio.

Hon. J. L. Hampton.

Hon. J. L. Hampton, executive clerk in the governor's office, Columbus, O., writes as follows to Dr. Hartman: "I have been using Pe-ru-na for some weeks and want to testify to its value in cases of catarrh and stomach trouble. I have been a sufferer from catarrh for years, and my whole system was permeated with it, thus causing me much stomach trouble. Pe-ru-na has cured the catarrh and I am in every way much improved."

Female Catarrh.

"I began to take Pe-ru-na when I lived in Columbus, Ohio, in 1887, and have used it and the Man-a-lin ever since whenever I needed medicine. I have never found an equal to Pe-ru-na for regulating the menses, and before I began to take it I was never regular and always had more or less pain. I had tried many different medicines before I saw Pe-ru-na, but without success."—Mrs. C. C. Naeve, 386 Morrison street, Portland, Oregon

Catarrh of the womb and other female organs is the cause of most of the ills peculiar to women. It is to be regretted that the catarrhal nature of these complaints has not been better understood in the past by the medical profession. It is never too late to mend, however. Catarrh is catarrh wherever located. Pe-ru-na cures catarrh wherever located. Therefore Pe-ru-na cures the peculiar ailments of women.

BOARD LEFT FRIDAY NIGHT

At Anniston, Ala., Two or Three Days Will Be Spent in Inspection.

HUNTSVILLE WAS VISITED NEXT

Captain E. P. Howell, of the Commission, Remained Over in Atlanta and Leaves This Morning.

The war commission left Atlanta Friday night for Anniston, Ala., where investigation will continue.

THE UNITED STATES WAR COMMISsion, which spent the day in Atlanta and at Fort McPherson Friday, left the city on the special train in which the members are traveling Friday night at 11 o'clock.

The visit of the commission to Atlanta was a hurried one, since very little was open for the commission to do at Fort McPherson. Only one complaint of any character had been filed with the board against the conduct of the post hospitals, and until that was received it was not intended by the commission to include Atlanta in the itinerary. From here the commission went direct to Anniston, Ala., where two days or more will be spent in taking evidence establishing the manner in which the army camp at that place has been controlled.

Several complaints have reached the commission from Anniston, some of them being it is known, of a serious nature, and more time will have to be taken by the board in hearing the evidence than was taken at Fort McPherson. From Anniston the commission will go to Huntsville, to the camp in command of General Wheeler, who was recently placed in charge of the corps stationed there. After leaving Huntsville, the board will go to Chickamauga, where the hardest work of the trip will be taken up in the investigation of the numerous complaints that have come to the war department from Camp Thomas. The work entailed here will probably require a week of close attention from the board, since complaints and petitions of almost every character have come in from officers as well as civilians.

Probably more objections have come from Camp Thomas than from all the other camps in the south put together, and one of the main objects of the administration in appointing the commission was to bring about an inspection of the record of the camp, as well as it can be done from evidence of an oral nature.

Captain Howell in Atlanta.

Captain E. P. Howell, one of the most prominent members of the commission, did not go to Anniston with the board, but remained over in Atlanta for the purpose of visiting his family. He will go to Alabama this morning to be present at the meeting of the commission when the work of inspection is being conducted.

Since accepting a position on the war commission Captain Howell has been closely confined with his work and is beginning to feel the effects of the close confinement. With General Wilson he composed the subcommittee appointed to visit the camp site at Fernandina and report on the condition of the camp at that place. The report, which was handed to the committee some days ago, completely exonerated the officers of the army, who were charged with having located the camp on property owned by young Alger. The sub-committee found that the land was in the possession of the state of Florida, having reverted to the commonwealth only a year ago, for the reason that the taxes were not paid on it.

Captain Howell refused to talk of the work of the commission, since being a member of it, he is not permitted to speak regarding the intentions of the members of the board.

After leaving Chickamauga the commission will be divided and half of the members will return to Washington, while the other half will go to Cincinnati and Detroit, after which they will return to Washington and formulate the report to be presented to the president.

COLONEL BERNER COMMISSIONED

Major Spence Lieutenant Colonel and Beck Senior Major.

A commission was issued yesterday to Colonel Robert L. Berner to succeed Colonel John S. Candler in command of the Third Georgia regiment.

Colonel Berner was in the city and remained until afternoon, when he returned to camp at Griffin. Colonel Berner was appointed lieutenant colonel by Governor W Y. Atkinson when the Third Georgia was being organized. He had previously been a member of the local company at Forsyth. He is well known all over Georgia, having been a member of the house for several years, chairman of the democratic party, president of the last state senate and a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor last spring. He is said to prefer military life to political life and his friends state that he will remain in the army for two years unless mustered out earlier.

Major R. E. L. Spence was commissioned lieutenant colonel yesterday and Major Marcus Beck was commissioned senior major.

No appointment has been made by the governor to the vacant place. Captain Amos Baker and Captain Hugh M. Comer are most prominently mentioned in connection with the place.

ONE IN EVERY FOUR.

One Person in Every Four Suffers from Piles.

About one person in every four suffers from some form of rectal disease. The most common and annoying is itching piles, indicated by warmth, slight moisture and intense, uncontrollable itching in the parts affected.

The usual treatment has been some simple ointment or salve which sometimes gives temporary relief, but nothing like a permanent cure can be expected from such superficial treatment.

The only permanent cure for itching piles yet discovered is the Pyramid Pile Cure, not only for itching piles, but for every other form of piles, blind, bleeding or protruding. The first application gives instant relief and the continued use for a short time causes a permanent removal of the tumors or the small parasites which cause the intense itching and discomfort of itching piles.

Many physicians for a long time supposed that the remarkable relief afforded by the Pyramid Pile Cure was because it contained cocaine, opium or similar drugs, but such is not the case. A recent careful analysis of the remedy showed it to be absolutely free from cocaine, opium, or in fact any poisonous, injurious drugs whatever. Sold by druggists at 50 cents per package.

Send to Pyramid Co., Marshall, Mich., for free book on cause and cure of piles.

WAR DEPARTMENT OPENS LUMBER BID

Large Contract Will Be Made for Lumber To Be Used in Cuba.

SOUTHERN MILLS TO COMPETE

One of the Largest Supplies of Lumber Ever Collected Is Asked For.

LARGE PART OF IT GOES TO HAVANA

Firms That Can Put the Lumber in Seacoast Towns at Lowest Price Will Be Awarded Contract.

Department of the gulf has opened bids for over one million feet of lumber to be used in Cuba.

THE WAR DEPARTMENT HAS OPENed bids throughout the country for a gigantic order of lumber to be sent to different points in Cuba. It is the beginning of the work of reconstruction in the principal towns of Cuba and preparation for the reception of the United States army that will soon occupy the island.

It is understood that the mills in every part of the country will be given an opportunity to secure the contract, but especially in the states over which the department of the gulf has supervision the bids will be sent out in every direction.

Hard pine wood is wanted by the government and the firms that can deliver the material at the southern sea coast towns cheapest will be awarded the contract. Under the circumstances, it is probable that some southern mill near the south Atlantic or gulf coast will be given the work, although the government reserves the right to reject any bid, whatever the agreement.

Colonel Simpson, quartermaster of the department of the gulf, to whom the bids will be directed, has sent out circulars giving the amount of lumber needed to every principal mill in this section and the bids will have to be in his office by 11 o'clock on the morning of November 1st.

Altogether the contract calls for 1,350,000 feet of lumber of different sizes, the largest amount of any one kind being 600,000 feet of one-inch boards. It is proposed to have this lumber delivered to any of the following seaport towns: Savannah, Brunswick, Charleston, Newport News, New York, Tampa and Miami.

In addition to the lumber bids that have been opened, proposals have been made in the same order for 25,000 pounds of nails, all of them to be of wire.

Material Goes to Havana.

The larger part of the lumber and nails will go to Havana, another supply to Matanzas and others to Cienfuegos, Neuvitas and Gibara.

Since the materials have been ordered to these points on the island of Cuba, it is likely that these towns will be landing places of the army of occupation which will take military charge of the island until the last vestige of authority can be removed.

While the war department has not signified what use the lumber is to be put to, it is the impression at the department of the gulf that the wharves will be built for the reception of the troops and storehouses and temporary barracks erected for the comfort of the men, instead of putting them in tents for such a length of time as htey will be required on the island.

THE SENATE AT THE Y. M. C. A.

Body Will Be Organized at Building Tuesday Night.

The senate of the Young Men's Christian Association of this city, which will embrace the literary work of the association for the fall and winter months, will be organized next Tuesday night at the building.

The senate is to take the place of the old debating society, which was one of the strongest organizations of its kind ever known in Atlanta. The body will be conducted on the same plan as the United States senate and will be attended by some of Atlanta's most prominent young debaters.

The election of officers will occur at this first meeting. It is not yet known on whom the honor of president will be conferred. From present indications, however, there will be a large membership and the senate bids fair to be a decided success.

COMMITTEE WILL DEPART TONIGHT

Citizens Will Ask President To Attend Peace Jubilee.

IT IS BELIEVED HE WILL COME

Party Will Arrive in Washington Tomorrow Afternoon.

MAY PROCEED AT ONCE TO WHITE HOUSE

Atlantians Will Give Chief Executive a Royal Reception if He Accepts the Invitation.

Party to ask President McKinley to attend jubilee will leave for Washington at midnight tonight.

THE PEACE JUBILEE COMMITTEE appointed by Chairman Hemphill to call on President McKinley and ask him to attend the exercises on the occasion of the jubilee in Atlanta, will leave this city at midnight tonight for Washington.

The party, headed by Colonel Hemphill, will consist of the following prominent citizens: Governor-elect Allen A. Candler, Mayor Charles A. Collier, Dr. R. D. Spalding, Alderman Frank P. Rice, Captain T. B. Neal, W. R. Hammond, Colonel A. J. West, Dr. Joseph Jacobs, ex-Governor R. B. Bullock and H. H. Cabaniss.

The party will arrive in Washington tomorrow afternoon, and will in all probability call on the president at once. They will extend to him a most cordial invitation to visit the Gate City during the Peace Jubilee, and it is thought that as he has expressed a desire to visit the south in the near future he will accept.

Much interest is being manifested in this jubilee, and if the president comes it will be one of the biggest events not only in the history of Atlanta, but in the history of the entire south. Appropriate exercises will be held and it is probable one of the largest crowds ever known in Atlanta will be present.

The citizens of this city earnestly hope President McKinley will consent to come, and they will give him a royal welcome. The result of the committee's visit will be awaited with great interest.

FUNERAL WILL OCCUR TODAY.

He was well known in the state and had many friends, who admired him for his manly qualities. The following gentlemen are requested to act as pallbearers and will meet this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the undertaking rooms of H. M. Patterson: A. E. Shulafer, J. A. Forsythe, H. E Lowry, T. P. Perkins, J. A. Anderson and John B. Goodwin.

SITE HAS NOT BEEN DECIDED.

The Prison Commissioners Are Still Working on Convict Farm Matter.

The state prison commissioners held two sessions yesterday, but did not reach a decision in regard to the best location for the convict farm. Judge Turner, General C. E. Evans and Colonel Beach studied the maps and descriptions of the properties and the propositions made by the owners or their agents, but could not settle the question yesterday, so they adjourned until tomorrow morning, when they will meet again at the capitol. They hope to reach a conclusion tomorrow.

ATTORNEY GENERAL AND STATE LIBRARIAN BOTH SUBMIT THEIR ANNUAL REPORTS

Colonel James E. Brown Recommends Reprinting of Georg'a Reports.

SHOWS HOW STATE CAN DO IT

Copyrights Are Expiring Every Year on the Early Reports.

WILL COLLECT BOOKS BY GEORGIANS

He Proposes To Get Together All the Works Written by Authors of Our Own State.

COLONEL JAMES E. BROWN, STATE librarian, makes some suggestions of especial interest to lawyers in his annual report. He advocates the reprinting by the state of the earlier volumes of the Georgia Reports. The ultimate life of a copyright is forty-two years. Colonel Brown says that the copyright has expired on the first twenty volumes and in the course of a few years the copyright will expire on all the reports up to the sixty-sixth. From that volume on the reports are copyrighted by the state.

The librarian says on this subject:

"In pursuance of this policy the state should, in my opinion, reprint all of the reports prior to volume sixty-six that are not protected by copyright, to the end that the cost of these books may be so cheapened as to be within the reach of every court official and lawyer who needs them. The prices now charged for the earlier volumes of Georgia Reports—from volume one to volume sixty-five, inclusive—are so exorbitantly high, by reason of their scarcity, that many lawyers have been unable to provide full sets for their libraries. This is a serious hardship upon the younger members of the profession, especially; because, even if they have the means with which to buy, it is only by chance that they will find complete sets of the reports for sale at any price. I believe these volumes can be reprinted and electrotyped, in editions of 500 each, at a cost that will not exceed $900 or $900 for each edition. If this were done, the state could sell the reprints as low as $2 per volume, and still have a margin of profit in the transaction. While the money thus expended would not immediately return to the treasury, yet the profit accruing from sales would make the investment sufficiently remunerative to warrant the undertaking, without taking into account the benefit conferred upon the public by cheapening the cost of these important and valuable publications. The state would likewise be enabled at a nominal cost to supply clerks and ordinaries with the earlier reports, many of whom have now only incomplete sets.

Sold at Cost.

"Under the law now of force, original editions of Georgia Reports are sold at actual cost. About 475 copies of first editions are distributed gratuitously by the state—374 copies to ordinaries and clerks, forty-seven to states and territories in exchange for similar publications, one to each judge of the superior court, and additional copies to the supreme court, to the United States court for the northern and southern districts of Georgia, and to certain designated statehouse officials. To defray, in part, the cost of the books thus distributed, I suggest that first editions of all reports be sold at a profit to the state—say 50 or 75 cents per volume. Reprint editions are now sold at a profit of 50 cents per volume, and the profit on original editions ought not to be less.

"I find do this or fix a uniform price of $2 per volume for all reports—first as well as reprint editions. They are now sold at $1.50, $2 and $3. Only the 90th, 91st, 93d, 94th and 95th are sold at the last named price, and these will soon be reprinted. The $2 volumes are the 96th, 97th, 98th, 99th and 100th."

Colonel Brown advises that 5,000 copies of the acts of the general assembly should be printed each year in order to supply the demand. That number would be none too few, he states. The state has been publishing only 3,250 copies a year and after supplying the members of the general assembly the state and county, officials and judicial officers, there are hardly enough left to supply the Atlanta bar, much less the attorneys over the rest of the state.

It is recommended by the librarian that the reprints of the Georgia Reports be reduced from 500 copies to 250.

Colonel Brown suggests that the department reports and similar books from other states be disposed of, as they are of no use and are taking up valuable space in the library.

The librarian has a plan in mind to make a collection of all books by Georgia authors, and says of this matter:

Books by Georgians.

"During the coming year I shall undertake the collection and classification of a complete list of the works of Georgia authors. Every Georgian, of whatever renown, who has written a book should be represented in our state library. As a nucleus for such a collection we have already quite a number of rare and interesting volumes, and in my judgment it should be made as complete as possible. Georgia authors have added much to the reputation of the state in the literary world, some of whom take rank with the best writers in the country, and all deserve the honor of having their productions catalogued in the state's repository of literature, history and biography."

In conclusion, the librarian says:

"The state is to be congratulated upon the excellence and value of its library. The shelves devoted to law textbooks are being constantly replenished with the works of the best authors, while the court reports and statutes of other states are added as fast as published. The various encyclopedias, law reports and other useful helps to legal erudition, are likewise found in the collection. Indeed, I do not deem it an extravagance to say that ours is the most modern, most extensive and best assorted law library in the south, and believe a comparison with other state libraries in our section will justify this claim."

FRANCHISE STILL IN DOUBT.

Mayor Has Not Yet Signed the Consolidated Papers.

Mayor Collier has not yet acted on the papers passed by council granting west side franchises to the Atlanta Consolidated Street Railway Company.

When seen yesterday he stated he had not sufficiently investigated the matter to arrive at a conclusion. It is probable he will take the full time allowed him by council in which to approve or veto the measure.

The Atlanta Railway Company, which has already been granted the franchises it asked for, has ordered material for the new lines and will go to work in the next few days. President Amorous says there will be no delays if he can help it in the construction of his cross town system.

Col. J. M. Terrell Makes Impartial Suggestions About the Laws.

HE SAYS SOME NEED AMENDING

Advises That State Treasurer Be Empowered To Examine Private Banks.

HE IS UNDER AN INJUNCTION NOW

Recommendation Also Made That Railroad Commission Law Be Amended to Strengthen Board.

HON. J. M. TERRELL, ATTORNEY general of the state, has completed his annual report to the governor. In this paper the attorney general reviews the work of his office for the past year, and he joins with the state librarian, Colonel Brown, in recommending that the state republish the early volumes of the Georgia Reports so that they may be placed within reach of every lawyer.

The attorney general advises that the railroad commission law be so amended that the commission shall have power to compel a railway to issue bills of lading over connecting lines. He also recommends that the law be so amended as to fix the venue of all suits brought by direction of the railroad commission for violations of its orders requiring the erection of depots in the county where the order is to be executed.

The prison commission is reviewed, and it is recommended that the law applying to the examination of private state banks by the state treasurer be amended to confer upon the treasurer that authority.

Below is the attorney general's report in full, with the exception of a recapitulation of the capital cases now pending in the state supreme court:

Railroad Commission Cases.

"At the date of my last report there was pending in the supreme court of this state a bill of exceptions to the judgment of the superior court of Laurens county sustaining the demurrer in the case of the state vs. Wrightsville and Tennille Railroad Company. This case arose from a failure of the Wrightsville and Tennille Railroad Company to obey rule 32 of the railroad commission. The principal question presented by the pleadings was whether the railroad commission had the power under the law to compel a railroad to issue a through bill of lading beyond the terminus of its own line. Rule 32 was construed by the commission as covering this question, and upon the refusal of the Wrightsville and Tennille Railroad Company to issue such through bills of lading to shippers along its line, unless the shipments were made over the line of the Central of Georgia Railway Company, the commission directed the filing of a suit to recover the penalty of $5,000 for violation of rule 32. The defendant demurred to this suit upon the ground that the railroad commission had no right to require the issuing of through bills of lading to points beyond its own terminus. This demurrer was sustained by Hon. John C. Hart, judge of the superior court of the Ocmulgee circuit, at the July term, 1897, of Laurens superior court, and on June 7, 1898, the supreme court affirmed this judgment in the following language:

"'There is no law which confers upon the railroad commission of this state the power to compel a railroad company to make a contract for the shipment of goods beyond the terminus of its own line, or to issue a through bill of lading binding such company so to do; nor is the fact that a railroad company actually contracts for the shipment and delivery of goods beyond its own terminus to a designated point, and issue bills of lading accordingly, when the same are routed over a particular one of its connecting lines, to be treated as unjustly discriminating against another connecting line, because the company first mentioned refuses to issue through bills of lading for the shipments over the latter of goods consigned to the same point of destination.'

"In view of this decision, I respectfully suggest that the law be so amended as to confer this power upon the railroad commission.

"There was also pending in the supreme court at the date of my last report a bill of exceptions filed by the Central of Georgia Railway Company to the judgment rendered by Hon. Marcus W. Beck, judge of the superior courts of the Flint circuit, at the August term, 1897, of Monroe superior court overruling the demurrer in the case of the State v. Central of Georgia Railway Company. This was a suit brought in Monroe superior court by direction of the railroad commission to recover the prescribed penalty for failure of the Central of Georgia Railway Company to comply with an order of the commission relative to the erection of a new freight and passenger depot at Forsyth. The defendant filed a demurrer to this suit upon the grounds that the superior court of Monroe county did not have jurisdiction of the action; that the railroad commission did not have authority to pass an order requiring the location and erection of depots; that the act of October 29, 1889, which sought to confer that power upon the commission was unconstitutional in that it contained subject matter different from its title and injected into the original railroad commission act matter not covered by the title; that the act of 1881 amendatory of the title of the original commission act amended only its title and, therefore, did not cure the defect in the act of 1889; that the original commission act was embodied in the code of 1882 and, therefore, no amendment could be made to that act, except by an amendment to the code of 1882; that no penalty was prescribed for violation of the orders of the commission with reference to the establishment of depots, and that the act conferring the authority upon the commission to order the erection of depots is contrary to both the constitution of the United States and the state of Georgia, in that it deprived the defendant of its liberty and property without due process of law. The questions arising under this bill of exceptions were argued at considerable length before the supreme court in May, 1898, by Messrs. Hall & Boynton, Messrs. Lawton & Cunningham and Hon. Washington Dessau for the plaintiff in error, and myself for the state. Upon the argument both before the superior court and supreme court I took the position that notwithstanding the unconstitutionality of the act of 1889, by reason of the defect in its title, the commission had the power, at the time the depot was ordered to be erected at Forsyth, to make such an order as the provisions of the unconstitutional act of 1889, which sought to confer such power on the commission, had been codified in the code of 1895, which had been adopted as the code of Georgia by the act of December 16, 1895, and that the effect of this act was to make as part of the statute law of the state all new matter embodied in the code which could be constitutionally enacted by the legislature. This contention brought before the court for adjudication the question as to whether or not the provisions of our constitution as to the title and subject matter of an act and the reading of bills on three separate days in each house were such as to prevent the legislature by one act from adopting a code of laws. The many changes in the code of 1895 and the incorporation therein of many statutes which were unconstitutional by reason of defective titles, or upon the ground that the same contained more than one subject matter, rendered this the most important question that had been before the court for determination in many years. On July 27th the court reversed the decision of Judge Beck upon the first ground set out in the demurrer, viz., that the superior court of Monroe county did not have jurisdiction of the suit, but sustained his position upon all of the other grounds of the demurrer, and in a very able and well considered opinion by Mr. Justice Lewis settled the question as to the status of the code of 1895, the following being the conclusion:

"'1. If a railroad company of this state refuses to comply with an order passed by the railroad commissioners requiring it to erect a depot building in a given town or city through which the line of its road passes, such refusal, in contemplation of law, is at the company's principal office or place of business, and consequently the superior court of the county in which that office is located, and it alone, has jurisdiction of an action by the state against the company for the recovery of the penalty incurred by the company in refusing to yield obedience to such order.

"'2. The intention of the act of December 16, 1895, adopting the present code and making same of force as the code of Georgia, is to enact into one statute law all the provisions embraced in the code.

"'3. This act is not unconstitutional because it did not incorporate in its body the various sections of the code, nor because these sections were not read three times and on three separate days in each house of the general assembly before the passage of the act.

"'4. The act in question does not, within the meaning of article 3, section 7 and paragraph 8 of the constitution of Georgia, refer to more than one subject matter, nor does it contain matter different from what is expressed in the title thereof.

"'5. The effect of this act is to make as part of the law of the state all new matter embodied in the code of 1895 which could be constitutionally enacted by the legislature.'

"It follows, therefore, that an act, though unconstitutional as originally passed on account of containing matter different from what was expressed in its title, if otherwise constitutional, became valid law by its incorporation in the present code upon the passage of the act first above mentioned.

"Under section 2198 of the code a penalty of $5,000 is prescribed against any railroad company doing business in this state for a violation of the rules and regulations of the commission, which may be recovered by suit in the superior court of the county where such violation has occurred or wrong has been perpetrated. This section is construed by the supreme court in the above mentioned case as not authorizing the bringing of a suit against a company in the county where the depot is ordered by the commission to be erected, unless the home office of the company is located in such county, for the reason, as stated in the opinion of the court by Judge Lewis, that the 'wrong was perpetrated by the company through its principal officer, who failed or refused to obey the order in question. The violation, therefore, occurred in the county where the company's principal office is located, and there the wrong was perpetrated.' Every good reason in favor of fixing the venue of suits for violation of orders of the commission as to overcharges of freight and similar orders in the county where the order is violated by making the overcharge or other similar violation exists in favor of fixing the venue of suits for the failure to comply with an order as to the building of a depot in the county where such depot is to be erected. The expense to the state of a trial in the superior court of the county where the depot is ordered built would be much less in most cases than in the county of the home office of the company, and to the defendant the expense would be less in a great many cases and only in rare instances would it be more. In cases where the reasonableness of the order is called in question the witnesses to sustain the action of the commission, who are generally residents of the county where the depot is located, would have to be carried to the county of the home office of the company or be therefore respectfully recommend that section 2196 of the civil code be amended so as to fix the venue of all suits brought by the direction of the commission for violation of its orders, requiring the erection of depots, in the county where the order is to be executed.

Northeastern Railroad.

"The suit in Fulton superior court against the lessees and their sureties for $8,060, the amount of the rental due the state at the time of the seizure of the Northeastern railroad by the governor for non-payment of rental, has not yet been disposed of. The case has not been reached in its regular order upon the docket, and I have not sought to advance the hearing as provided by section 24 of volume one of the code, for the reason that I have been notified that the defendants would petition the general assembly at the approaching session to grant them relief by allowing certain equities claimed by them which the court would have no authority to allow.

"The proceedings in Clarke superior court under which a receiver of the lessees was appointed, and in which I intervened in behalf of the state, claiming that the state was entitled to preferential payment out of the assets of the lessees will be heard at the October adjourned term of that court to be held during December next. Employees of the lessees engaged in operating the Northeastern railroad immediately prior to its seizure by the state claimed a preferential lien on these assets. After a thorough investigation of the questions involved I feel quite sure that the contention in behalf of the state will be sustained. I make this statement for the reason that I have refused from the attorneys of these employees that a petition will be presented to the general assembly asking that the state withdraw the claim made to the assets of the lessees in the hands of the receiver.

Prison Commission Case.

"Last April the Southern Mining Company filed a petition in Fulton superior court against W. B. Lowe and the prison commission, by which it sought to restrain the commission from entering into a contract with W. B. Lowe under a bid submitted by Lowe for a certain number of convicts upon the ground that the Southern Mining Company was interested in the bid made by Lowe, and for that reason claimed that the commission should contract with it for a portion of the convicts. I filed a demurrer, in behalf of the commission, to this petition, which was sustained by Hon. J. H. Lumpkin, judge of the Atlanta circuit. The case was then taken to the supreme court, where the judgment rendered by Judge Lumpkin sustaining the demurrer was affirmed, on July 24, 1898. The following being the head note to the decision which states fully the questions involved and decided:

"'The right of injunction does not, under any circumstances or at the instance of any person, lie against the prison commissioners of this state to restrain them from entering into a contract for the hiring of convicts, nor against any person or persons with whom the commissioners are about to make such contract, when the granting of the injunction would either directly or indirectly, interfere with the performance by the commissioners of the duties devolved upon them by the act of December 21, 1897, creating a prison commission for this state.'

"The questions involved in this case were of considerable importance to the state, as upon their determination depended in a large measure the control and disposition of the convicts which were directed to be hired under the provisions of the act of December 21, 1897. Under this decision the prison commission cannot be interfered with by injunction or restraining orders in the performance of the responsible duties imposed by the act creating same.

Bowen et al. v. Clifton, secretary of state.

"By the act approved November 6, 1897, relating to contest cases growing out of elections for the removal of county sites, it is provided that such contest cases shall be heard and determined by the secretary of state. In December, 1897, an election was held in the Wilcox county upon the question of the removal of the county site to Rochelle. The face of the returns made to the secretary of state did not give to Rochelle the requisite two-thirds majority, so certain persons favoring removal instituted contest proceedings, as provided by that act, before the secretary of state, through their attorneys, Messrs. E. D. Graham and D. B. Nicholson. Objection was made by Messrs. Butts & Lawson, and J. L. Bankston, representing the contestees, to the secretary of state hearing and determining the contest, upon the ground that the act was unconstitutional, in that it sought to confer judicial powers upon the secretary of state, an executive officer. The secretary of state consulted with me as to his duty in the matter, and after a thorough investigation of the question I thought the act was constitutional and advised him to proceed with the hearing. Upon being notified of this advice, Bowen and other citizens of Wilcox county, the contestees, filed a petition in Fulton superior court seeking to enjoin the hearing of the contest by Hon. William Clifton, secretary of state, upon the ground that the act of November 9, 1897, was unconstitutional, as claimed before the secretary of state. Judge Lumpkin, of the Atlanta circuit, refused the injunction, and the case was taken to the supreme court, where the judgment rendered by Judge Lumpkin in refusing the injunction, was affirmed. This decision having finally settled the constitutionality of the act of November 9, 1897, the secretary of state proceeded to hear and determine the case, as directed by law.

Private Bankers' Case.

"Under the act of December 21, 1897, providing for the examination of private banks, the treasurer, who is ex-officio bank examineer, undertook to make the examination of certain private banks required by this act, when F. M. Coker, Jr., and a number of others engaged in private banking, filed a petition in Fulton superior court, asking that Hon. W. J. Speer, state treasurer, be enjoined from making such examination, upon the ground that the act of December 21, 1897, was unconstitutional for several reasons, viz: First, because the act was passed by the general assembly on a day which was more than fifty days from the meeting thereof. Second, because it contains more than one subject matter. Third, because it applies only to persons and not to corporations engaged in private banking. Fourth, because it is an invasion of private rights. Other objections were made to the act, but these four were the principal ones insisted upon in the argument. I filed a demurrer on behalf of the treasurer, and the questions arising thereon were argued before Judge Lumpkin, of the Atlanta circuit, at the March term of Fulton superior court, when he disposed of same by sustaining the demurrer, thereby holding the act constitutional. The petitioners then took the case to the supreme court, and the bill of exceptions therein is now pending in that court, and will be heard during the present term.

"There is considerable doubt as to whether private banks can be taxed under existing laws with their proportion of the salary and traveling expenses of the bank examiner, and if the private banks may be so taxed, no provision is made for ascertaining their proportion of these expenses, as they have no capital stock. No good reason exists why the same should not be collected from private banks as from chartered banks. I, therefore, suggest that the act of December 21, 1897, be amended so as to make the provisions of section 1923 of the code apply to private banks. Linton, tax collector, et al. v. Childs.

"Some time since the comptroller general requested my opinion as to the liability of presidents of national banks in this state under the general tax act for the payment of the $10 professional tax levied by the second section thereof upon 'every practitioner of law, medicine or dentistry, president of bank or banker in this state,' etc. This tax upon bank presidents was first incorporated in the tax act in 1886, and had never been enforced against presidents of national banks. After an investigation of the question, I came to the conclusion that the tax was collectable, but inasmuch as there was some doubt, and as the law had not been enforced, thought best to have the question passed upon by the courts. I, therefore, advised the comptroller general to instruct one of the tax collectors in some county where a president of a national bank resided to issue a fi. fa. for said tax and make a test case for the courts to finally determine. In accordance with this advice, H. H. Linton, tax collector of Clarke county, issued fi. fas. against A. K. Childs for taxes for the years 1891, 1892, 1893, 1894, 1895 and 1896. Upon the fi. fas. being levied Mr. Childs petitioned the superior court of Clarke county for an order restraining the tax collector and the sheriff from enforcing the fi. fas., upon the grounds that the language of the tax act did not include presidents of national banks, and that if the language was broad enough to include them, the act was null and void, as it levied a tax upon national banks not authorized by the act of congress relative to national banks. When the petition was presented to Hon. N. L. Hutchins, judge of the superior court of the Western circuit, he granted a temporary restraining order and set the case for a hearing. After argument by brief submitted by both sides, Judge Hutchins granted a permanent injunction against the tax collector and sheriff. The case was then taken by bill of exceptions to the supreme court, where it was argued last June, but has not yet been decided, and under a recent order of the supreme court will be re-argued at the present term.

Merchants and Traders' Bank.

"The Merchants and Traders' bank of Brunswick, one of the state depositories, failed, and its assets were placed in the hands of a receiver by Hon. J. L. Sweat, judge of the superior courts of the Brunswick circuit. At the time of its failure this bank, as one of the depositories, was indebted to the state in the sum of $11,446.05. As soon as knowledge of the bank's condition was received I went to Brunswick to investigate the assets of the bank, and to take such steps in the matter as might be necessary to protect the state's interest. After investigation I was satisfied that enough money could be realized from these assets by this fall to pay off the state's claim, so I thought it unnecessary to harass the sureties with a levy of the executive fi. fa., which I prepared and had issued under the act of 1879, until the receiver was given an opportunity to realize upon the assets. Since the issuance of the fi. fa. I have collected $7,000, and paid same into the treasury. I expect to collect the remainer by November 1st, and if it is not paid by that time I will proceed with the fi. fa. against the sureties.

Capital Cases in Supreme Court.

"During the past year, in obedience to the constitutional requirement, I have represented the state before the supreme court either by brief or orally, in twenty-two capital cases.

Georgia Reports.

"I have lately received a great many letters relative to Georgia Reports being furnished county officers. Very few counties have a full set of reports. Some claim never to have been furnished with the earlier volumes, and others that the books and records were destroyed during the war or since by the burning of the courthouse. There is no provision of law authorizing the state librarian to furnish these reports, and if there was the librarian could hardly find enough of the earlier volumes upon the market to supply the demand, and should he find them the price would be from eight to ten times as much as the present new page for similar books, published upon the state's account under the act of 1879. To meet these complaints the librarian will, I understand, recommend the passage of a bill authorizing the republication under the provision of the act of 1879, of all the earlier volumes of reports not now protected by copyright. I desire to join the librarian in this recommendation.

Official Opinions.

"Since my last report I have furnished the different departments of state a large number of official opinions, both written and oral. Work of this character has increased rapidly during the last few years.

"I beg, in concluding this, my final report to you as chief executive, to say that your excellent administration of the affairs of state during the last four years will ever be a monument to your wisdom and faithfulness to duty, and I am sure that, in your retirement to private life, you will be esteemed as one who has always been true to Georgia, and devoted to the best interests of her people. Very respectfully,

J. M. TERRELL,
"Attorney General."

Catarrh, Bronchitis and Consumption CURED BY ABBO'S TREATMENT.

A system of medicine that reaches every part of the mucous membrane and going deep into the lungs, soothes, heals and cures every form of catarrh and all diseases of the lungs and bronchial tubes, can alone cure these complaints. By this treatment thousands of sufferers have been rescued from a life of misery and annoyance and restored to a healthy and happy condition.

Thousands who have existed under the blight of being an "incurable," have been released from all indications of their disease and given a new life.

A Treatment That Is Powerful, Yet Pleasant and Wonderful.

The treatment controlled and used by Abbo in curing diseases of the nose, throat, vocal chords and bronchial tubes is not now an experiment, but its efficacy has been proved in thousands upon thousands of cases in the past ten years.

To those who do not possess the secret its influence over disease is a mystery, while its soothing and pleasing method is marvelous.

The victim of catarrh of the head, whose life is made miserable, and his mental condition impaired by the dull pains across the head is relieved almost immediately. The hawking and spitting, the sneezing and snuffling, the disagreeable odor of the breath, that makes the victim of catarrh feel that he is a nuisance to those around him, is rapidly cured by Abbo's Catarrh Treatment.

When the disease attacks the vocal chords, and the voice loses its natural tones, and when, as in many instances, to speak at all causes great pain, Abbo's treatment is wonderful in its effects.

In the course that catarrh runs, the bronchial tubes are invaded, and added to the other annoying effects to the victim made pass restless and sleepless nights. Then comes a harrowing and painful cough. Hemorrhages follow, the appetite is lost, and the patient assumes the form of a living skeleton. The lungs are attacked. Then fevers are of daily occurrence. Night sweats begin. He is looked upon as near subject of the grave. He becomes despondent. His friends fear the worst. Consumption is stamped on every feature, and his condition is really critical. Physicians have been consulted. Large sums of money have been expended on patent nostrums. No relief has been obtained. Nearer and nearer to the grave goes the unfortunate. At last with little hope he seeks Abbo. A consultation gives him information that makes him feel there is a chance of life. He decides to take the treatment offered him by Abbo. He inhales the soothing vapors and medications that have made Abbo known the world over. The discharge from the ears and nose disappear. The voice becomes stronger. The sense of taste and smell returns. The dry, parched feeling in the throat is removed. The fever is checked, the night sweats become unknown. The sharp pains that were felt under the shoulder blades and behind the breast bones have passed away. The cough is checked. The appetite returns. The color of health mounts the cheeks. Flesh begins to cover the skeleton frame. Night after night is passed in sweet repose. The step becomes buoyant and gay. Abbo's treatment has scored a triumph over the deadly disease, and its intended victim goes forth absolutely well and perfectly healthy.

Have You Catarrh?

Go over the symptoms carefully. If there exist any indications, do not delay the treatment. Catarrh in its incipiency is easily cured. In its advanced stages, unless you secure the proper treatment, it may cause you years of suffering and annoyance, and bring you to an early grave. If you are interested, it is only necessary to remember that

BILL TO ABOLISH DEKALB CITY COURT

One Will Be Presented to Next Session of General Assembly.

BILL WILL PRECIPITATE FIGHT

At Last Session Similar Measure Was Proposed, but Failed.

DISPOSES OF MANY MISDEMEANORS

Has Jurisdiction Over Civil Cases Involving Much Money—Has Disposed of Much Litigation.

A bill will be presented to next session of legislature to abolish city court of DeKalb county.

FOR THE SECOND TIME A BILL will be introduced before the legislature for the abolishment of the city court of DeKalb county. At the last session of the general assembly a similar bill was presented, but failed in passage as it was not pushed by Representative Henderson, of DeKalb.

The court has been in existence since 1894 and disposes of much business that would be taken up by the superior court, if the city court was not a part of the county machinery. The salary of the judge is $1,000 and there is no solicitor. The jurisdiction of the court extends to civil cases not involving several thousand dollars and tries all misdemeanors.

The objection raised to the court is in the fact that the $1,000 which is paid the presiding judge is said to be a useless expense on the county. It is claimed that the superior court can dispose of all the business that is transacted by the city court at the regular terms of the former and that the $1,000 expense will be saved to the county.

On the other hand, it is argued that the city court is a saving to the county. If the business was all brought up at the terms of the superior court it would require long sessions, and as the expense of keeping the superior court running is much more than the city court, the terms would be so lengthened that the expense of the superior court would increase more than $1,000 over its present expense.

It was claimed, during the fight over the existence of the court at the time the bill for its abolishment was pending in the legislature, that the court was unconstitutional. It was said that the court was, from the beginning, illegally organized and that the business which had been disposed of by it for several years would have to be relitigated.

This would have brought about endless confusion, as the court had rendered many verdicts and judgments affecting a great amount of property and had adjusted many claims on valuable real estate and other properties which would have caused the parties interested to remain in the courts for a long time. The amount of property involved was over $700,000.

A large number of persons convicted of misdemeanors were at that time in the chaingang and others had served their terms and had been liberated. These would have had to have new trials and if any were found not guilty who had served a term, it would have raised an interesting question if they demanded damages from the county.

Judge Harvey Parry is now presiding over the court and convenes his court about once a month.

EXTEND MARINE QUARANTINE.

Order Making Service Operative Until November 15th.

Washington, October 22.—Acting Surgeon General Ballbache, of the marine hospital service, today ordered the extension of the maritime quarantine service until November 15th. The action is of a precautionary nature and designed to avoid any possibility of entry of yellow fever from the ports in the West Indies.

The regular inspection period heretofore has been from May 1st to November 1st, but the fifteen days at the close as well as antedating the season last spring by commencing April 1st, are felt to be measures of caution necessary because of the unusual spread of the fever this year.

VANDERBILT WILL PLAY UNIVERSITY

Crack Football Teams Line Up in Atlanta Next Saturday Afternoon.

TEAMS ARE IN GOOD CONDITION

University of Georgia Has a Heavier Eleven Than the One of Last Year.

CRUTCHFIELD ON VANDERBILT'S TEAM

The Boys from Athens Have Had a Great Deal of Practice and Look for Victory.

Vanderbilt and Georgia will meet on the gridiron at Piedmont park next Saturday afternoon.

THE FIRST INTERCOLLEGIATE gridiron contest of the season in Atlanta will be held at Piedmont park next Saturday afternoon and will be between the teams of the University of Georgia and Vanderbilt college.

Since the opening of college and for two weeks before that time the captains and coaches of the two teams to meet in Atlanta have had their men on the field in constant practice, passing the ball and becoming familiar with the code of signals. Both elevens are strongly developed in material for this time of the season and have had more coaching up to this time than during any previous year.

The University of Georgia team has so far met two opponents and in each contest the palm has fallen to the Athens boys with ease.

The first game was with Clemson college, and although the South Carolina athletes outweighed the Georgia boys in almost every position, the superior training of the University team was too much for its opponent and the game resulted in a score of 20 to 8.

The second game was with the Atlanta Athletic Club on the university campus and resulted in a victory for the Athenians by a score of 14 to 0.

Vanderbilt has met with equal success in the contests she has taken part in so far, her practice games being with inferior teams, and in each case the Tennesseeans have badly defeated their opponent.

Of the strong team that represented Vanderbilt on the gridiron last year seven of the members are back this season and the remaining places on the team are filled with strong and capable men.

Goodson, one of the fastest ends in the south, is captain of the Vanderbilt team and has brought his men, with hard practice, up to a fair state of perfection. Playing left guard is Crutchfield, the giant who threw the sixteen-pound hommer away at the intercollegiate track meet held in this city last spring. Crutchfield weigas 230 pounds and is active on his feet, getting into the interference with energy.

University Team a Strong One.

The representatives of the Universitp of Georgia on the gridiron are stronger this season in many ways than in any previous year. Under the able coaching of Charles McCarthy, the Brown university full back, the eleven has done conscientious training, with the result that more has been accomplished than ever before for this time of the season. Of the 1897 team seven of the men are back on the field, with Captain Walden at right tackle playing the star game of the team. The eleven has an average of 163 pounds, ten pounds heavier than the team of last year, an advantage in weight that will add much to the chances of the team during the season.

At center Captain Walden is trying a new player, Thrasher, a man of 210 pounds, with practically no experience in the game, but with great strength and activity, who is sure to develop into one of the best linemen in the south. Lindsay and Ritchie, filling the places of right and left guard, have both had considerable experience in the game and can be counted on for some hard work in the game with Vanderbilt.

Probably the best filled places on the eleven are those of right and left tackle, where Captain Walden and Bond, the center of last year's team are located. Walden has played tackle on the team for two years, but long before that he became familiar with the rocks and hard places on the athletic field and is no novice at the game.

The two ends are in the hands of McCutcheon and duBignon, both of whom are fast ball players, with enough weight to stop anything that comes their way. McCutcheon was at end last year, but did not show up very well. This season he has developed into one of the best backs on the team, and at tackling he has no superior in college. Huff at quarter back is a fast runner, and despite his weight, manages to make his opponents know that he is in the interference.

Jones, the big full back of the 'varsity, is the crack man back of the line and manages to buck through the strongest center that can be put up against him with ease. He was on the team of last year and played the star game before the team disbanded.

Assisting Coach McCarthy in the work of bringing the eleven into good condition is Nally, the well known half back of the 1896 team, who is probably the best football player that ever received his training at the University of Georgia. Nally is greatly encouraged at the work of the men so far and has expressed the opinion that the team as it now stands is far superior to the one of last year and second only to the victorious eleven of 1896.

McCarthy is undoubtedly the most energetic coach in the south and possesses what many good football players lack, the art of imparting his knowledge of the game to the men under him. McCarthy was full back on the Brown team for five years and during his last year at college was a substitute full back on the All-American team. He always appears on the field in his uniform and teaches each man his position not by theory, but by experience.

The enthusiasm of the college in the game has not decreased, and with the team that comes over for the fall with Vanderbilt next Saturday will come a delegation of yelling college boys and Athenians who never fail to see the representatives of the university play.

The occasion of the game with Vanderbilt will be a social one and the contest will be witnessed by fair friends of the college men, decked with the orange and black of Vanderbilt and the red and black of the University of Georgia. From every indication, the game will be a close one, as the weight of the two teams is practically the same and both have had capable coaches and abundant practice.

In offensive work the Georgia boys were never in better condition, but on the defensive side the team was slow in the last game with the Atlanta club, although changes have been made since then and the friends of the 'varsity can have no fear that Vanderbilt will walk away with the Georgians.

The game will be played at Piedmont park, where the football field has been leased for the season by Manager Pomeroy, of the Georgia team.

CURE DRUNKARDS

Eloquent Words from a Wife Who Rescued Her Husband from a Terrible Habit.

Secretly Gave Him a Remedy In His Coffee and He Now Rejoices with Her.

Who can doubt that there is a cure for drunkenness when we have such an eloquent and emphatic statement from Mrs. Katie Lynch, 329 Ellis street, San Francisco, Cal., she says: "My husband was a hard drinker. There was never a doubt in my mind but what liquor had so worked upon his nerves as to actually control his appetite. Like most men who drink he was kind and generous when sober, but the rum demon usually had the better of him and his wife had to suffer. One day I concluded to try a remedy called Golden Specific, which it was said would cure the liquor habit secretly. So I mixed some of it with Mr. Lynch's food for a few days and put a little in his coffee. I could scarcely conceal my agitation and fear lest he should suspicion me, for he had suddenly taken a dislike to liquor, said he despised the stuff, and was the most remarkably changed man you ever saw. I kept bravely at it, determined to not waver in my attempt to cure him and I soon found out that my mission was a complete success and that Golden Specific had wrought almost a miracle for me. I want other women to profit by my example and am glad to learn that Dr. Haines who discovered Golden Specific will generously send a free trial package to every woman who writes for it.

"Send your name and address to Dr. J. W. Haines, 623 Glenn building, Cincinnati, O., and if you wish you are at liberty to refer to me as having told you about this marvelous remedy."

COMMISSIONERS TO ASK LEGISLATION

State Organization of County Commissioners To Present Bills.

WANT FEE SYSTEM ABOLISHED

To Place County Officers on Salary and Excess Into County Treasury.

TO HAVE FULL PROPERTY RETURNS MADE

Uniform Tax Receipts To Be Provided for Tax Collectors—Legislation for Stationary Engineers.

Through instrumentality of county commissioners of Georgia important bills will be presented to legislature at this session.

IMPORTANT MEASURES FOR FUture legislation will be presented to the next session of the legislature through the state organization of county commissioners. At the convention of that body held in Atlanta last July resolutions were passed regarding many regulations as to the conduct of county affairs, and these resolutions were referred to the legislative committee.

In some cases the entire executive committee of the organization has undertaken the work of drawing the bills and using its influence for their passage. The county commissioners' organization of Georgia is growing in power and has now become, after an existence of three years, a stable and influential organization of county officials.

One of the pieces of legislation which the commissioners of the state will push before the legislature is that affecting the fee system. It is proposed that the officials of the county, instead of securing the revenue of their offices from the fees that come into it, be placed practically on a salary.

The plan that will be in the bill is that all county officials be allowed to retain a certain amount of fees, up to a specified amount, and all moneys coming into the office in excess of the stipulated amount be turned in the county treasury.

It is expected that this will be one of the most important measures introduced into the general assembly during the coming session. There will be very strong opposition to it, as the present county officials do not think it a good law and it would have the effect of cutting down the present amounts which the officials in some of the large counties secure by the fee system.

The commissioners at their last convention discussed methods by which every county in the state will secure proper and full returns of all the taxable property in the state. It was said that there is a quantity of property in almost every county that is not returned for taxation at all and the object of the bill will be to have that property returned. It is suggested that a commission be appointed in each county to investigate the property returns. The bill has not yet been drawn.

Another bill that will probably be presented through the instrumentality of the county commissioners is a measure to have a uniform receipt for all tax receivers of the counties. It is proposed that this receipt be issued by the comptroller general of the state, and that no tax receipt will be valid unless written upon the form prescribed. It will be a provision of the bill that a receipt written by a county tax collector not upon a uniform receipt will be a misdemeanor.

The tax collector will be required to fill out his stub in the receipt book and when the state does its checking up of the tax returns these stubs will show how much each county is due the state.

This plan is highly favored and it is thought by many that such a law would work to the benefit of the state and the different tax collectors of the county. There would be no chance for a mistake in any of the returns, as the stubs would show for themselves, and these would be the basis of calculation on the returns of each county.

If the tax collector returned too much to the state, his stubs would show it and the excess would be returned to him; if he returned too little a similar adjustment would be easily made and the deficit accounted for.

A bill will be presented asking for local legislation on the board of examiners of stationery engineers of Fulton county. The present law allows the examiners to be paid by the fees which they secure from the issuance of licenses. The new law will place the examiners on a salary and the amount received from the licenses will be turned into the county treasury.

The present license is $5 and $1.50 for a renewal. There were fifteen licenses issued during the year and thirty-eight renewals. The board of examiners consists of the following: W. C. Shearer, H. F. Wallace, W. B. Willson, H. J. Burnap and J. B. Warren.

Among their patients are people belonging to all stations of life, and from every locality through the south.

The effect of the treatment of DR. HATHAWAY & CO. upon the afflicted in truly wonderful. Thousands have gone to them weighted down under a secret load of disease, despondency and despair, but have come away from them full of hope, confidence and joy, and feeling better in every way. From the very start they begin to permanently improve. What the great specialists do to them, or the kind of treatment they administer to them, is a secret known only to themselves, and upon which their remarkable success is founded.

A reporter, thinking that a few words from DR. HATHAWAY & CO. would be of interest to the reading public, called upon them in their elegant offices in the Inman building, 22½ South Broad street.

To the question, "What class of diseases do you treat, doctor?" the physician in chief replied:

"A review of our testimonial file will answer your question. Here you see letters from people in every station of life, whom we have cured of the different diseases coming within our specialty. Some were suffering from ailments of the eye, ear, throat or nose; some from diseases of the heart, lungs, liver, stomach, kidneys, bladder or urinary organs; some from drains, irritations, stricture, blood impurities, varicocele or hydrocele; some from piles, fistula, rupture, rheumatism or chronic catarrh; some from the most aggravated forms of female weakness."

"I understand, doctor, that you have a private formula of your own for weak men, which has been highly spoken of in various medical journals. Do you care to say something about that?"

"Some physicians, you know, look upon this subject as something too delicate to discuss. Even my college teacher used to say little about it, giving the impression that true impotency was incurable. I made up my mind to devote my life to originating a positive cure for this disease. The formula or treatment you inquire about, therefore, is known to no other physician. It is distinctly of my own origin or discovery, and is the result, I might say, of a lifetime of hard work and persistent study, diligent research and scientific investigation in this and foreign lands. I regard it as the crowning glory of my professional career. The treatment is purely vegetable in its composition and perfectly harmless in its effect. It does not stimulate temporarily, but restores permanently. During the past twelve months it has been tested on more than 7,000 young, middle-aged and old men, who, as the result of errors and excesses, were tortured by the woes of nervous debility or sexual decay. Its success has been but little less than miraculous. It has never failed, even in the worst of cases, to bring back manly power and to remove every trace or symptom of weakness."

"To what do you attribute your great success?"

"To qualification. My diplomas—there they hang—(the doctor pointing to them) are from the best medical colleges in the world. My experience in specialty practice covers nearly a quarter of a century. My consultation and operating rooms, as you can see, contain every instrument, apparatus and scientific device essential to the most modern methods of medicine and surgery. Moveover, I go thoroughly into each and every case, separately and scientifically, and carefully follow it through every stage until a perfect cure is effected."

J. Newton Hathaway, M. D.

"Do you wish me to publish a few of your testimonials?"

"No, indeed. My patients desire as little publicity as possible in connection with their cases. Absolute secrecy in all my professional dealings is one of my ironclad rules."

"Have you much of a mail practice?"

"You would think so if you should see the number of letters I receive daily. I have developed a system of home treatment that is absolutely perfect and always satisfactory to patients living in the interior. Let the sick people who cannot call at my office sit down and write me their symptoms, and I will soon start them on the road to recovery, if their cases are curable, and incurables are extremely rare."

The doctor's afternoon office hours having arrived, he politely excused himself from further conversation to attend a large number of patients then awaiting in his reception rooms. He is an upright, conscientious, high-minded man, as well as a great physician and surgeon, and his merit is being duly appreciated by the people of Atlanta and throughout the entire south.

A NEW INDUSTRY.

A Furnace Factory in Atlanta and What It Is Doing.

The people of Atlanta will be glad to know that a plant for the manufacture of furnaces has been located in Atlanta. The Moncrief Furnace Company began work a few months ago in a moderate way, yet so popular are its goods that the factory is running night and day to fill orders. Mr. S. P. Moncrief, the head of the establishment, is well and favorably known in this city. He is an expert in the furnace business, and those that he turns out from his factory are guaranteed in every particular. There is a great deal of trouble about furnaces smoking and refusing to radiate the heat. This is not so with the Moncrief Furnace Company's furnaces. They are reliable in every particular, and if you buy one of them and it does not give satisfaction, another will be put in its place.

The pretty part about it is these furnaces are built and put up at a much lower price than those coming here from the north.

Patronize home industry and buy your furnaces from the Moncrief Furnace Company. Write for catalogue and particulars.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

McCullough Bros. 10 N. Broad and 9 N. Forsyth streets, are headquarters for everything embraced in the line of fruits and produce. HAIR ON THE FACE, NECK, ARMS OR ANY PART OF THE PERSON
QUICKLY DISSOLVED AND REMOVED WITH THE NEW SOLUTION
÷ MODENE ÷
AND THE GROWTH FOREVER DESTROYED WITHOUT THE SLIGHTEST INJURY OR DISCOLORATION OF THE MOST DELICATE SKIN.

Discovered by Accident.—In Compounding, an incomplete mixture was accidentally spilled on the back of the hand, and on washing afterward it was discovered that the hair was completely removed. We purchased the new discovery and named it MODENE. It is perfectly pure, free from all injurious substances, and so simple any one can use it. It acts mildly but surely, and you will be surprised and delighted with the results. Apply for a few minutes and the hair disappears as if by magic. It has no resemblance whatever to any other preparation ever used for a like purpose, and no scientific discovery ever attained such wonderful results. IT CAN NOT FAIL. If the growth be light, one application will remove it permanently; the heavy growth such as the beard or hair on moles may require two or more applications before all the roots are destroyed, although all hair will be removed at each application, and without slightest injury or unpleasant feeling when applied or ever afterward. MODENE SUPERSEDES ELECTROLYSIS.
—Recommended by all who have tested its merits—Used by people of refinement.—
Gentlemen who do not appreciate nature's gift of a beard, will find a priceless boon in Modene, which does away with shaving. It dissolves and destroys the life principle of the hair, thereby rendering its future growth an utter impossibility, and is guaranteed to be as harmless as water to the skin. Young persons who find an embarrassing growth of hair coming, should use Modene to destroy its growth. Modene sent by mail, in safety mailing cases, postage paid, (securely sealed from observation) on receipt of price, $1.00 per bottle. Send money by letter, with your full address written plainly. ☞Correspondence sacredly private. Postage stamps received the same as cash. (ALWAYS MENTION YOUR COUNTY AND THIS PAPER.) A Stylish Figure nowadays means the "Nemo" Good Form Corset.

A woman who wears one can't help looking stylish—and the woman who does not will find it hard work to acquire the present popular "figure."

THIS CORSET is made of strong material. It is well shaped and provided with patent triple strip reinforcements, which prevent bones and steels from cutting through. It is made with a bustle, which adjusts itself to the figure of the wearer, filling out all defects, and doing away with that flat look which every woman dreads. The corset may be used with or without the bustle, but in any way it is used it will prove the biggest value of the season. In white, drab or black, choice tomorrow, $1.00

WOMEN and SOCIETY

Who Will Be the Next President of the Georgia Federation?--Mrs. Ottley's Plea for Women on the Board of Education.

BY ISMA DOOLY.

At the forthcoming meeting of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs in Columbus, one of the most exciting and interesting features of the closing session will be the election of officers for the ensuing year. Heretofore the election has amounted to little more than a mere matter of form, since Mrs. Lowe was elected as president at the first meeting of the Federation without opposition, while her re-election the second year was in the nature of unanimous acclamation.

To her wonderful qualifications as a leader, the Georgia Federation may attribute its great development and now that she has stepped from the highest office in Georgia to that of the highest office in the National Federation, her successor in Georgia will have no easy position to fill. The strength of any body lies to a great extent in its efficient leadership, no matter what the force of certain individual members may be, and the club women of the state have a serious event before them in the choice of their next leader. Their should be no question of personal friendship, no ideas of precedence or courtesy, no preference as to district or section of the state governing choice in this election, but the "right woman" should be elected to the place.

Present position and their strength as club women point directly to three women as eminently qualified for the office—Mrs. John King Ottley, of Atlanta; Mrs. J. Lindsay Johnson, of Rome, and Mrs. Robert Emory Park, of Macon.

Mrs. Ottley, however, positively declines to be a candidate for the office, notwithstanding the efforts made by her friends in all parts of the state to induce her to permit the use of her name in the nominating convention. She is not only one of the most enthusiastic club women in Georgia, but one of the most brilliant and highly educated women in the south. She is especially interested in the educational problems of the day and in close touch with the most approved methods and systems in the matter of the practical educational needs. She has been strongly instrumental in bringing about the present status of library development in the state, and is closely espoused to all the reform movements undertaken in the federation.

Mrs. Ottley at present holds a national office, being secretary from Georgia of the national federation of clubs, which office requires a great deal of work and responsibility.

This reason she gives as one for not desiring the use of her name as a candidate. Another, she states, is that the next president of the federation should not be from Atlanta, as this city has been twice honored, and the honors of leadership should be more generally distributed throughout the various sections of the state.

Mrs. Ottley's declining the use of her name in the candidacy leaves, therefore, Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Park, the two most prominent women officially and by reason of their earnest work, as logically the women to be looked to for leadership.

Mrs. Johnson is at present vice president of the federation and associate editor of The Rome Georgian, which is one of the official organs of the federation. The Atlanta Constitution being the other. Mrs. Johnson is in every respect an able, progressive and earnest club women and has been a recognized factor in the development of the club movement in the state. She was a delegate to the national convention in Denver in June and was largely instrumental toward bringing into prominence the strength of Georgia club work. She has worked assiduously to impart the club spirit and its advantages especially among the women of the rural districts and is a woman beloved for her unselfish interest in all that pertains to the betterment of her sex. She is at present especially interested in the industrial work of the federation undertaken in the farm and garden committee, although she well distributes her interest in all departments of the club work and is closely allied to all phalanthropic movements.

Mrs. Robert Emory Park, of Macon, through her phenomenal work in the educational committee of the Georgia Federation has acquired national prominence and has done more than any individual woman in the state, in the club or out of it, toward the educational development of Georgia. She is a woman of great intellectual strength and has since her girlhood been closely identified with all movements hinging on educational progress.

As chairman of the educational committee of the state federation she reviewed the educational facilities of the state. She issued an outline covering the ground from the university to the kindergarten so well that it elicited the admiring comments of the educators of the country. In consideration of its excellence she was made one of a committee of five on education in General Federation of Women's Clubs.

She had introduced a bill in the general assembly of Georgia providing for the opening to women of the State university with all its related schools. She secured from the trustees and chancellor of said university a favorable recommendation upon this bill. She enlisted the interest of nearly every county superintendent in Georgia in helping to form reading circles in remote districts, where the teacher and parent can meet and confer. She has directed an educational committee in nearly every federated club in Georgia.

These committees have inaugurated all sorts of good educational work from the reading circle to the kindergarten.

The educational committee has received marked recognition from the educational authorities. The State Teachers' Association invited them to hold a round table at their convention last summer and nearly every educator of prominence in the state has expressed by letter or in person his appreciation of the work over which Mrs. Park has presided.

The Georgia Library Association

Elaborate arrangements are being made for the second annual meeting of the Georgia Library Association, which will occur Thursday and Friday of this week at the Young Men's Library, 101 Marietta street.

Miss Anne Wallace, the president of the association, is preparing for the reception of the delegates at the library, and they will be warmly welcomed by the city. The library will be prettily decorated for the occasion, and the visitors will be shown all over the building. The local committee, composed of Mrs. J. K. Ottley, Mrs. George M. Traylor, Mr. R. C. Alston, Mr. J. R. Nutting and Mr. F. J. Paxon, will be at the library at 9 o'clock Thursday morning to welcome those attending the morning session, and this committee will accompany the visitors in their inspection of the Young Men's library and the state library at the capitol.

On the morning of the 27th, at 10 o'clock, the president, Miss Anne Wallace, will make her address, and the reports of Major Charles W. Hubner, secretary, and L. A. Field, treasurer, will be read.

A discussion will follow on the "Relation of Library to Other Educational Work; to the Public School, to the College, to Study Clubs, to Other Libraries."

In the evening at 8 p. m. there will be a public meeting at the library and a number of prominent people will speak. Messrs. Alex C. King and H. C. Peeples will discuss "Library Legislation and Library Commissions;" Mayor Collier and Mayor-elect Woodward will speak of "Municipal Aid to Libraries;" Mr. Henry Richardson and Professor J. H. T. McPherson, of the state university, will deliver addresses upon "The Value of the Library to the Community."

After the programme there will be an informal reception, at which the Atlanta people may meet the prominent visitors who will be present. Among these distinguished guests who are expected will be Governor-elect Candler, Governor Atkinson, Senator Clay, Rev. Frank Willis Barnett, an eloquent orator; Iverson L. Harris, one of the most prominent lawyers of Macon, who is actively interested in all movements for the advancement of the higher education, and is popular socially and in the world of letters, and Professor McPherson, one of the best known educators of the south. Mrs. Robert E. Park, of Macon, whose brilliant intellect is recognized in all educational movements, will address the convention on the subject of the "Library as the Student's Laboratory."

On Friday morning at 10 o'clock the convention will discuss "Special Training for Librarians; The Children's Room; How to Advertise a Library; Traveling Libraries." The election of officers for the ensuing year will follow and much interest is already being manifested in the probable result.

On Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock the history class will give a reception at the residence of Mrs. E. G. McCabe, who is a member of the class, and has offered the hospitality of her home for the occasion. It is most fitting that the entertainment should be given by this organization, which is in close relation to the library, and ever ready to contribute its influence and work to the advancement of library interests. The members of the nineteenth century class, the reviewers and the executive board of the Woman's Club are invited to be present on the occasion of the reception.

Miss Wallace states that within the last few weeks she has received communications from all parts of the country in reference to the state convention, since it is in part preparatory to the national convention which will take place in Atlanta next May. The fact that this national assembly will be held here in 1899 has centered the library interests of the whole country in Atlanta and the attention of all those people who are interested in library work throughout the United States is focused upon the library here.

"We can bear the scrutiny, however," said Miss Wallace, "for what we have done is the result of consultation with the most approved and modern ideas. We began the work in accordance with the correct principles and as a result it has not been difficult to continue with this plan. Many northern libraries have labored under and overcome disadvantages with which we have not had to contend, since we have profited by their example and have foreseen these difficulties and provided for them. Our library is only approaching the condition we wish to exist, but we have had to erase and begin over again none of our work, as has been the case with many other libraries, because we started right. We have no money and the library commission is without funds, but our establishment has been systematically accomplished and we hope for early improvement and progress. The library commission will hold a meeting next Friday at 1 o'clock to elect a chairman and secretary. Although the work of the commission has not yet been outlined, it will more than probably include the preparation of a bill to be placed before the next legislature, this bill providing for the betterment of library conditions throughout the state."

Mrs. Ottley Makes a Strong Plea for Mr. Mayson's Ordinance.

The proposition made by Councilman Mayson to place two women upon the school board of Atlanta is a timely one. No less so because a technicality prevents its immediate adoption. Sometimes it is well that the "mills of the gods grind slowly."

The delay will give more opportunity for thought, and in this case, to think is to be converted. You ask me why I think school boards should be made up of men and women.

The arguments seem to me so patent that I hesitate to give them, but I will say, first, that I do not find the main reason in the oft-stated fact that nine-tenths of the public school teachers of America are women. This is a reason and a forcible one, and another is the fact that probably six-tenths of the children are girls. But the basic argument lies in the fact that ten-tenths of the mothers are women. Differ as we will about the boundary lines of "woman's sphere," no one questions her call to rear and direct the child.

This great task is, indeed, almost entirely relegated to her, and since her children are her children, no less in the schoolroom than the nursery, her responsibility follows them there and becomes greater, not less, as the problems concerning their physical, mental and spiritual well-being increase in complexity.

Should she not, then, be given the authority to back this responsibility?

If "taxation without representation is tyranny," responsibility without authority is worse. There is, indeed, something absurd in our failure to call into this educational work representatives from this class who have served their apprenticeship in child study and grappled at first hand with the problems in physiology, psychology and hygiene with which all mothers deal, oftentimes no less intelligently because they don't know these problems by their Christian names. Supreme interest in the subject, backed by the fullest experience with children and time to add to her native fitness the knowledge of a specialist, constitutes woman's claim to representation on school boards. The fact that women have ample time at their disposal is an unanswerable argument. Men will always be the bread-winners, and as society becomes more complex the financial struggle for existence presses harder upon them until little of either time or strength is left for any other interest.

The men of ability, talent and culture are the successful and therefore the busy men.

It is only the busy man that the school board wants.

Just the reverse is true of women.

The women who have had the greatest opportunities are those who have the most leisure and some of them could be always found ready to devote this leisure to the exhaustive study and constant visitation which is required of those who are to mold a great educational system. Even that "busiest woman" whom The Journal maliciously proposes to nominate for the place will surprise them by being able to shift her duties and devote a great deal of time to her new and onerous duties! You may be inclined here to exclaim: "In view of such fitness for the work and such opportunity to undertake it, why not have women do it all? Why put any men on the school boards?" I answer, because the plans of an all-wise providence are very hard to improve upon and since the child has been placed in the home with a father and a mother in close relation with him we may pretty safely assume that what we need for his guidance is not the male or the female thought alone, but the harmonious blending of the two.

The home is the model upon which society must be built and particularly in all that concerns the child the paternal and the maternal must be united.

I often think how odd and unreasonable it will seem to future generations that there was a time when women were earnestly asking to be allowed to render to their city services which, in reality, are entirely for the city's benefit. It is important that we should realize that the move to place women upon school boards is not woman's fight. It is society's. There have been many objects for bettering woman's economic or social or civic position. This is not one of them.

It will help woman only as it helps society at large. She gains no personal advantage by the reform.

She only gains a larger opportunity to be found fault with.

The shoe is on the other foot. It is society that gains the advantage. And now, what will this advantage be?

As in most social reforms, the best results will be the indirect ones. Every thoughtful student of conditions will tell you that we must arouse a clear co-operation between parent and teacher. That means between mother and teacher, because few fathers have time to co-operate in the details of a child's education.

Nothing will do more to invite and enlist this from women than to give them representation upon the governing board of their children's schools.

Three women upon the school board of Atlanta would mean 3,000 women who would visit the schools of their children, understand their methods and help to carry out their aims. As to the direct results I believe they would be far-reaching, and altogether good. I believe so for the reasons I have adduced above, and because this has been the result in the many cities east and west, where the experiment has been tried.

But I do not believe that two women or three women or any number of women placed upon the school board will bring about an immediate educational millenium.

I say this because we are so prone to jump to long conclusions in matters of proposed reform. Already you may hear it said of every manner of complaint educational: "Oh, yes, we need women on the board!"

As if, were that achieved, all the tangles would instantly smooth out.

It is never wise to enter upon a "pledged administration," and the advocates of this measure must not commit themselves to the righting of all wrongs, while we cry, "Presto, change!"

No two infallible women will be found at large, and were such found, no perfect educational system could be evolved, even by them, in a day or a week or a year.

By every law of logic or reason, it is right that women should be placed upon school boards.

Let us take our stand firmly on this ground, and the results will take care of themselves.

Fashion Talk.

Madame's organdies, her dainty summer silks and all the accessories of summer toilets have been laid away this week and if she has not her winter trousseau she is very busy getting it together now.

If she has nothing to put on for street wear and wants a serviceable and at the same time genteel gown then I should advise her to go at once and buy her one of the very stylish ready made suits that Monsieur le Marchand can show her in every variety.

"Here they are, silk lined and not silk lined," he says, "and I defy any of your tailors to produce a more stylish garment."

Then he shows you figure after figure, each one exhibiting the ready-made gowns, fashioned according to the latest mode.

The regulation tailor gown, one is told, has its skirt made with the paquin flare at the bottom and fitting closely about the hips. The stylish coat or reefer to go with it is rounded at the bottom and double-breasted, having two rows of smoked pearl buttons giving the finish. A velvet collar completes the nobby costume and it can be procured in any color in the favored autumn shades—blues in Manila, royal, navy and army, and the popular stone blue. Then there are the castor shades in the same fashioned gown and the browns, dark greens and now and then a novelty in the ox blood color trimmed in black braids.

The handsomer ready made suits are lined with the plaid, striped or plain taffeta silk and the stylish woman of this season will have her silk underskirt as near like the silk lining of her gown as possible if not off the same piece.

Going hand in hand with the tailor gown or "reefer suits," as they are sometimes called, is the ever stylish silk waist which seems almost a part of it. These are still very popular, made of the bright plaid and striped silks or of the plain taffeta made up elaborate. A novelty in the ready-made silk waists shown this season is in Manila blue taffeta silk with a V-shaped yoke of white tucked silk.

To add to its adornment and finish is an applique work of white silk flowers outlined with white braid. Familiar waists are seen in the shades of green and volet silk, pale rose and yellow, making pretty garments for afternoon card parties and like occasions.

Another pretty waist shown as a model is of violet silk of full effect with a plastron front braided in black and the revers turned back from it similarly braided. Black satin waists trimmed in ecru lace are also very stylish and are frequently finished with plaited fronts of white mousseline de soie.

"But what must be worn as a wrap with these stylish walking gowns?" is the question asked by many as the breezes grow cooler. Heavy cloth jackets are always stylish and are especially attractive this season, the shades of castor or tan being largely in favor.

They are of medium length, the longer jackets that are asserting themselves gradually, not being altogether popular as yet. These castor jackets, many of them are heavily braided about the shoulders, front and upper sleeves and have upon them, if double-breasted, smoked pearl buttons.

Velvet coats heavily embroidered in jet and rather long are among the season's novelties. Many of them are made double-breasted with the revers turning back and revealing a full bow and scarf ends of white mousseline de soie lace edged. A very swagger garment attracting a good deal of attention is the black velvet top coat, double-breasted and not trimmed save with a narrow knife plaiting of black satin that gave a dressy finish.

This is to be a great season for fur collarettes. They are to be worn morning, noon and night, and are always handsome and dressy.

The different furs are combined to make effective garments, as, for instance, a stylish collarette has its body of electric seal, and its trimming and storm collar of stone marten. An elegant collarette, shown for the first time this week, is of china seal, with a rolling storm collar caught together at the throat with two heads and ten or twelve skunk tails, hanging almost to the waist.

Krimmer and electric seal is another favored combination for collarettts, the yoke and storm collar being of the krimmer toned down with its finish of electric seal. A combination of electric seal and chinchilla made another pretty wrap, finished in front with the long tab ends.

A stylish cape combines effectively electric seal and Hudson bay sable. Box coats in electric seal are among the novelties, while collarettes of the genuine mink and beaver are wraps any woman would like to select from and find herself stylish in either this season.

Among the latest novelties in belts shown by an Atlanta merchant are those of rubber over worked elaborately with jet and cut steel, and finished with buckles of the same or those jeweled. They are exceedingly pretty and dressy and will give a stylish finishing touch to any style of gown. The fact that they cannot be duplicated in cheap material renders them an exclusive novelty and therefore are worth having.

To Meet This Week.

The meeting of the general assembly of Georgia, which will take place this week, will be an important event.

One of its first duties will be the inauguration of Hon. Allen D. Candler into the office of governor, and the installation of the new statehouse officers. It is but seldom that a governor-elect has come to the discharge of his duties under more favorable circumstances and so strongly backed by the voters. That the expectations of the people will not be disappointed is assured from the character of the man.

This work over, there is much important legislative work pressing for attention. The reform of antiquated tax laws, the final disposition of the convict question, the amending of our ballot laws, and finally, the consideration of the wisdom of calling a constitutional convention, will afford a wide field for legislative prudence and development.

The new administration comes in most auspiciously. Party spirit has dwindled away, harmony prevails among Georgians, and an era of fraternity is ahead of us. All of this makes the occasion fitting for a general overhauling of our affairs, not that there has been anything wrong in the past, but that they may be brought up to the requirements of the present day. The legislature will be composed of able and discreet men, who, with our excellent governor-elect, cannot fail to fulfill the hope of the people.

That Hidden Property.

The mystery which surrounds the "hidden property" of Georgia, as disclosed by a falling off of fifty millions of taxable revenue since 1892, is not so great a mystery as it might seem.

Cotton statistics show that in 1892 the average price per pound of the staple was 7.71 cents, while in the season now on, the price has fallen to 4 7-8 cents. The wonder is, when these figures are contrasted, that the hidden property is not much larger in volume than it is. When we recollect that everything begins from the farm; that as the farmer is prosperous so are the commercial centers, we may have a very good clew as to the causes which have led to property shrinkage. When the farmer goes home on one of these October afternoons with half the price in his pocket which he carried home in the corresponding month of 1892, he is forced to a little economy with which politicians do not seem to have become acquainted. While these politicians may look over their appropriation sheets, and declare that it is impossible to reduce a single item, the poor farmer who has the bill to foot is compelled to go home and to slash right and left in order to make ends meet for the crop of the following year.

As all business depends upon the farmer, it must suffer in the same ratio. When Jonathan Hayseed, as he is often called, comes to town on half rations, he can only give half his previous trade to the merchant and manufacturer, and they in turn have to apply the same remedy all along the line until the tax collector is reached, when a stone wall of indifference presents itself, and they are all, from the farm to the workshop and the counting room alike, compelled to pay not only the same old figure but to meet largely increased rates imposed by state, county and city.

All of this presents the singular anomaly of a man insisting upon living highest when his wages are lowest. To take a supposable case: If a man is getting $75 a month, of which he devotes $60 to household expenses, having his wages cut to $60, he should immediately decide to make his expenses $75, what would be thought of him? Suppose further, that when puzzled by his inability to meet these bills, he go home to consult his wife as to how they may live within their income, her reply should be, "Oh, you must hunt up your hidden resources!" This certainly would not be esteemed business, but it seems to be the favorite way of meeting difficulties in tariff raising.

As has been stated before, it is idle for the people to discuss the state rate of taxation without taking into view at the same time the rates of county and city. All are blended together as one issue, and the best results will be obtained when they are considered together. For the purpose of arousing the people to a consideration of this most pregnant question, it might be well to have a legislative inquiry into the tax burdens of the people, considered in their entirety. It is true the legislature does not control the local taxation, but it can secure such an official exposure of the facts as to lead to a united determination to have a tax reform which will be a tax reform indeed. In this way the public expenses may be so reduced that there may not be sufficient taxes necessary to be paid to induce men to resort to hiding out—a custom, by the way, which is very much exaggerated when the facts are looked into. As an illustration that there is no real property behind much of the items charged as being hidden out, and that they only furnish burdensome additions to taxation on commerce, a case will suffice. John Smith has $1,000 which he loans to William Jones, taking a mortgage therefor. William Jones in turn builds a house and sells it to Henry Jenkins, taking his short-time notes for the same amount. The tax collector comes in and imposes a tax for $3,000 upon but $1,000 actually present. The effect of this is that, in one city in Georgia, at least, where the united city and county tax is $28 on the thousand, this particular $1,000, which can only bring 6 per cent interest, has to pay a tax of $84 a year. This system, continued to its last analysis, would compel every man to pay tax on the one thousand dollars who happened to look at it but once.

Let us get down to facts and hard pan, and the honesty of the people would settle the rest. At the same time see to it that no property escapes taxation which is justly liable to it.

Queen Wilhemina's Choice.

When Queen Wilhelmina of Holland formally assumed her crown several days ago we made the prediction that she would not continue long in the state of single blessedness, and incidentally we enumerated some of the royal bachelors of Europe who would be only too glad to share her lot for the privilege of dividing her revenues.

We were not far away from the truth in thus anticipating the matrimonial affairs of the young sovereign. Rumor has been engaged for some time past in divulging the secret plans of Queen Wilhelmina, and the information thus furnished is at length semi-officially confirmed by recent dispatches received from Holland. These authorize us to state that Queen Wilhelmina is engaged to Prince William Frederic Henri, of the Prussian Guards, and that the nuptials will be celebrated early this winter. There is nothing to warrant the fear that the work is not Cupid's. From what we can learn, the young people are devotedly attached to each other.

Prince William Frederic Henri is twenty-two years of age, and holds the rank of lieutenant. His mother is the Princess Marie of Holland, who married the prince of Weid in 1871. He is well spoken of in the foreign telegrams, and is said to possess good character as well as good looks. He is certainly fortunate to win the hand of Queen Wilhelmina, who, in addition to being young and beautiful, possesses one of the securest little thrones in Europe. There were hundreds of suitors for her hand, some of the number being among the foremost royal bachelors of Europe, but apparently she has refused them all to accept the modest offer of the young lieutenant of the Prussian Guards. We waft our best wishes across the water to Queen Wilhelmina. Seldom is it the lot of queens to love and to be loved without jar or friction, and we certainly congratulate her upon the good fortune which takes her out of this category.

More Junketing Necessary.

If it is not true that the republican campaign is in very bad shape in many parts of the country, appearances are certainly very deceiving. There can be no question of the great anxiety felt in administration circles over the outlook. The president's swing around the circle out west can have no other significance; and now it is announced that it is the purpose of the campaign managers to send him to the east, particularly to New Jersey and New York, in the hope of awakening the dormant republicanism of those states.

The wail put up by Chauncey Depew is a sample of those which have come from leaders generally. The republicans are undoubtedly scared. Their scare is not confined to any one state or any one section, but is general, for they see unfavorable indications all along the line.

Of the outlook in New York they are particularly dubious, and this fact accounts for the presidential trip east as well as for the Chauncey Depew wail. Roosevelt and his Tough Rider contingent have not set the state on fire as was expected. The enthusiasm for Roosevelt and his command has died out to a great extent, and the people are inclined, according to the newspaper reports, to regard this wild west display as very much beneath the dignity of a gubernatorial race, and ridicule is getting in its deadly work.

The efforts of the republican organs to create dissension among the up-the-state democrats by crying Tammany control have failed utterly for the very good reason that Van Wyck is not a Tammany man and for the further reason that the Tammany bugaboo has, since the excellent administration of the present city government, ceased to scare even the purists.

Recognizing the utter failure of this Tammany cry, the republicans are now endeavoring to stir up an anti-Croker sentiment because the democrats decided to nominate a candidate for judge of their own selection rather than indorse the man picked out for them by the fifty-one members of the Bar Association who conceived themselves to be the 8,000 lawyers of New York city. This is about all the republican managers and the republican newspapers have to fall back on now, and no wonder they are calling for help.

Roosevelt's defeat seems practically assured. From a democratic standpoint the outlook is all that could be desired. From the republican standpoint, the outlook is so chaotic that the appeal to the president for the aid of his personal presence has been made.

The republicans doubtless have a gigantic campaign fund, for they are in a position to get it, and what is more, they know how. There is a chance, of course, that the will of the people can again be nullified by the use of money, for in these piping times of McKinley prosperity a dollar looks mighty big to many a poor devil of a voter who would scorn the suggestion of corruption were it not a question between that and starvation. A fair election means democratic victory, and there are good grounds for the belief that even Hanna's gang of corruptionists will fail in their designs this year.

Under the American Flag.

Since the American flag has been formally raised over the island of Porto Rico we may pause in the onward march of events and consider briefly what we have gained in this important acquisition. At the risk of repeating information which we have already furnished to our readers, we will undertake to review some of the facts in regard to the island.

Porto Rico is ninety-five miles in length and thirty-five miles in width and contains 3,668 miles. In area, it is about one-half the size of the state of New Jersey; and consequently it adds but little to our national domain.

With respect to population, the island contains 950,000 inhabitants, of which 300,000 are negroes, 90,000 Spaniards and 560,000 native Porto Ricans. The principal cities of the island are San Juan, with 30,000 inhabitants; Ponce, with 15,000 inhabitants; Mayaguez, with 20,000 inhabitants; Aguadilla, with 5,000 inhabitants; Arecibo, with 7,000 inhabitants; Fajardo, with 9,000 inhabitants; Naguabo, with 2,000 inhabitants, and Arroyo, with 1,200 inhabitants.

There are 470 miles of telegraph lines on the island and 137 miles of railway lines in addition to 170 miles under construction. Porto Rico is rich in possibilities. In the lowlands and valleys the soil is exceedingly rich and fertile and well adapted to agricultural purposes; and in the mountains there are extensive deposits of gold, silver, copper, lead and coal.

San Juan, the principal harbor of Porto Rico, is 1,420 miles from New York, 1,190 miles from Charleston, 1,000 miles from Key West and 1,200 miles from Tampa.

With respect to the commerce of Porto Rico, the figures for the past year show the following operations: Products imported, rice $2,180,064; fish, $1,591,418; meat and lard $1,223,104; flour, $982,222; manufactured tobacco, $663,464; olive oil, $327,801; cheese, $324,137, and wine, $305,656. Products exported, coffee, $8,789,788; sugar, $3,747,891; tobacco, $646,556; honey $517,746; molasses, 3,178 tons; cattle, 3,178 head, and hides, 169 tons. Of course these figures do not include everything; they simply cover the principal operations.

While Porto Rico is densely populated, it is not more densely populated than some of the sterile New England states; and besides in view of the great wealth of the island, there is still room for thousands of immigrants of the right sort. Under the stimulating effect of American ideas Porto Rico will soon begin to astonish the world with her growth. So long as she was fettered by the tyranny of Spain she could not do this, but now that she is permitted to inhale the atmosphere of freedom, she will speedily make up for what she has lost. We will miss our guess if Porto Rico within the next few years does not become one of the most coveted gems on the breast of the ocean.

Anxious developers would do well to remember that there is more promise in Georgia than in Cuba, and not half the risk.

The legislators have the freedom of the city now. They are privileged from arrest.

Li Hung Chang married the dowager empress of China, it is said, on the American plan—by elopement.

The Christian Scientists claim that Harold Frederic flickered at the last moment, and hence the funeral.

Mark Hanna is keeping mighty quiet these days.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Miss Nannie Leiter, the young lady who dedicated the battleship Illinois, is the sister of the unfortunate ex-wheat king, Joe Leiter, and also of Mrs. Curzon, the wife of the newly appointed viceroy of India. Miss Leiter is one of the brightest figures in American society, and is well known in both eastern and western circles. For the purpose of better acquainting our readers with the personality of Miss Leiter, we quote the following from The Chicago Inter-Ocean:

"Miss Leiter has been at Lake Geneva all summer. She will remain until she starts for Newport News and her European trip. She has been a familiar figure on the drives about the lake this summer, where, with her younger sister, Miss Daisy, she is seen every day, either driving or on horseback. Both are expert horsewomen, and they frequently drive alone. Miss Leiter is tall and fair, much resembling her older sister, Mrs. Curzon. She is distinguished among her friends as caring far more for study and travel than for society. This is not saying, however, that she is not a society belle, both in Washington, where she spends the winter in her father's home, and in New York, where she is almost as well known as in Chicago. But outside of entertaining the numerous guests who are received at Linden Lodge, the Leiter summer home at Lake Geneva, Miss Nannie Leiter chooses to take small in the society doings at the lake. The Leiter summer home is distinctively a place for rest, and Mr. Leiter, Sr., has tabooed even the telephone, in order to have his rest without interruption. Miss Leiter is oftenest seen driving behind the dashing team of bay ponies that was bought a little while ago from P. A. B. Wildener, the Philadelphia street car magnate. People declare they are the smartest pair of driving ponies in the United States, and they vie in Mr. Levi Leiter's eye with the sacred Indian cows that feed on the Linden Villa pastures.

"The French artist, Carolus Duran, some time ago painted a full-length portrait of Miss Leiter. This portrait was exhibited in the Paris salon, and excited much admiration. Duran has been quoted as saying the subject of this painting was one of the three most beautiful women in the world."

THE CONSTITUTION'S POETS.

Friday and Thirteen.

Oh, Friday is my lucky day; of all days
'tis the best,
When other folks are scared to work, and scared to take a rest
For fear some dire confusion, or microbe come to town,
Will fasten on their vitals, or turn 'em upside down.

On Fridays at the race track I always bet and win,
For then I back the favorite with my little pot of tin;
'Tis then I find the talent and the rooters all agreed
That the winning of a favorite on Friday ain't decreed.

And then the number thirteen, tabooed
since time begun,
For some idiotic reason by some prehistoric man,
I count my lucky number, and 'twas never known to lose,
For it counts the letters of my name, and the number of my shoes.

One of thirteen at a dinner, regardless of the sign,
I'll sit me down and stuff me on the terrapin and wine.
What matter if the bucket some other fellow kicks,
So I am fat and hearty an' a-taking of the tricks?

Good friends, when everybody else is scared to make a deal
Is when I find an opening to score on fortune's wheel;
And if ever Luck shall ride me in her airy palanquin
I shall owe it all to Friday, and the virtue of thirteen.

My Old Man Josiah.

We was settin' by the fire,
Me an' my old man Josiah,
An' sez he to me, "Maria
It's mighty quare."
Josiah ain't no hand to talk,
Just try to make him an' he'll balk;
Put on his hat an' take a walk,
Seek the fresh air.

He does a heap of thinkin' though,
An' if he don't make no great show
There's many folks 'twould help to know
As much as him.
Folks that'll most talk off your head,
An' when they leave you nearly dead,
Your notion of what has been said,
Is mighty slim.

Josiah's such good company,
When we are settin', him an' me,
Close to the fire after tea,
In winter time.
Josiah takes a smoke always,
An' rarely anything he says,
I knit, an' think of all the days
He has been mine.

He's kept a plenty always roun',
The Lord has blessed our patch o' groun',
An' comfort in our house is foun'
Day after day.
No fuss does my Josiah make,
About the things I stew an' bake,
In quiet he has let me take
My peaceful way.

He surely has been good to me,
So thoughtful-like an' kind is he.
Some may be purtier, none can be More good an' wise.
Josiah always takes great care
To make our baby's grave look fair,
An' sweet the flowers all bloom, where
Our darling lies.

And a-thinkin' by the fire,
Up spoke my old man Josiah,
Sez he to me, sez he, "Maria
It's mighty quare
The way some folks do bluster roun'
Like they would dig up all the groun'
An' the result, it can't be foun',"
I think it air.

The Return of Our Boys in Brown.

Hark! 'tis the sound of the drum
And the voice of the bugle clear;
The onward march of the tramping feet
And the ring of that mighty cheer.

The distant notes of the band,
As the echoes fly through the air;
The gallant forms of our honored brave,
The memory of those not there.

We see our colors afar
Firmly borne by a stalwart hand;
On, on they come with the nation's flag,
The safeguards of liberty's land!

Nearer and nearer they come,
While our loving hearts beat with pride;
Some ranks are thin as they pass along,
Brave comrades we miss from their side.

Listen! There's a softer drum
And the call of a bugle clear,
The forward march of those steady feet
And the ring of that heavenly cheer.

The distant notes of their band
As soft echoes float through the air;
The gallant forms of our unseen brave
In white shining armor are there.

With gleaming banners so bright
Borne aloft by a martyr's hand,
On, on they come with the Red and Blue,
Our heroes from the spirit land.

Nearer and nearer they come,
With laurels they've recrossed the tide;
Filling the ranks as they pass along
With the boys they march side by side.

The ringing tones of the band
And the roll of that softer drum;
Sweet silver echoes above the ring,
As in full solid ranks they come.

Their banners wave in the breeze.
The white in the lines with the brown;
As the bugles sound the forward call
God's pure heavenly light shines down.

Not there in the garments of earth,
No, not there to our mortal eye.
But silently there those unseen forms
In bright shining armor pass by.

The Glorified Way.

What boots it how we walk the weary way—
Or clad in homespun or in garments gay?
For lo, there shines about us, haloed light,
That wraps us in a glory, soft and bright
And tints to beauty, garbs of dun and gray!

What matter if the way be rough or dark?
For in our hearts there burns that heavenly spark
That dazzles all the firmament afar,
So our glad eyes see naught but Love's bright star,
And find no space the stones and steeps to mark.

And what if thorns beset the pathway, dear?
Shall we draw back or falter, faint or fear!
Ah, no! Love's tender touch is everywhere,
And briers burgeon into blossoms, rare;
Love's sacrifices bind us closer year by year!

The little maid stood there in tears;
The boy, he could not bear
To see her weeping, so he said:
"Here, Maggie, take 'em—do!
They're violets and smell so sweet—
I picked 'em all for you."
Just then the dark clouds passed away,
The sunshine came again;
She smiled and thanked him—then two hearts
Were lighter for one heart's pain!

THREE DAYS BEFORE THE LEGISLATURE.

A conscientious canvass of all the members of the legislature in town on the proposition to revise the state tax laws shows that not one of them is opposed to the revision. On the contrary, all express anxiety to have the present system remodeled and brought up to date, and while many are cautious in the matter of advancing individual ideas a clear majority say that they will support a bill that is framed on the recommendations of Comptroller General

HON. JOHN T. BOIFEUILLET, With Glad Hands Confronting Him.

Wright. On no other subject are the lawmakers that are to meet in Atlanta next Wednesday so heartily in accord, and it is probable that the financial committees of both houses will meet with the comptroller general as soon as the legislature is organized, and that the good work will be inaugurated at once. General Wright is already prepared to devote a large portion of his time to the matter, and Speaker-elect John D. Little will not only help him in person, but will select a chairman of the house finance committee who will see that the work does not lag. President W. A. Dodson, of the senate, will do the same.

It seems safe to predict, therefore, that Georgia will have a new tax code, and that it will be in operation within the next twelve months. Just what its provisions will be no man knows, but it is certain to be a plain and simple law that will brush aside all the perplexities and inequalities and double meanings of the present system. Mr. Little said yesterday that he had not yet completed his bill, and did not know whether or not he would have it ready for introduction next Wednesday. He said he was working on it whenever time permitted, and that he proposed to give it his personal attention after it was launched in the legislative sea. If Representative Roland Ellis, of Macon, is appointed chairman of the house finance committee, as now seems probable, the bill will have another champion just as able and watchful. That it will pass, in some shape or other, is not doubted by those who keep pace with legislative conditions.

Governor-elect Allen D. Candler will be in town tomorrow morning.

An indorsement of unusual quality and quantity has been filed by the friends of the Rev. C. S. Owens of Jonesboro, for chaplain of the house. He is recommended as peculiarly fitted for the place, and his admirers have had a large number of letters from prominent people who favor his election printed in a neat little pamphlet for distribution among the members. He is likely to get the place.

Chairman William Bradford, of the democratic county executive committee of Polk, has sent the following letter to each member of the legislature:

As chairman of the executive committee of Polk county democrats, I desire to say a few words to explain recent political events in this county.

At the outset of the recent campaign we found ourselves with two candidates in the field for representative—J. H. Sanders and R. W. Everett—both claiming to be democrats. The voters of this county being about equally divided between the three parties, the folly of this situation was apparent. With a view to correcting it, the democratic executive committee, through a subcommittee, of which Senator-elect W. C. Bunn was chairman, addressed to each gentleman a letter asking if they would submit their claims to a party primary. Colonel Sanders replied promptly that he would. Mr. Everett ignored it and the populist newspapers here vigorously boomed his candidacy. These events, in the opinion of the committee, eliminated any necessity for party action, as Sanders was now recognized as the only democrat in the field. Everett, knowing that a fusion of all the anti-democratic elements in the county was always successful here, quickly rallied about him both populist and republican leaders, who, with his personal followers, were able to defeat the democratic candidate. Everett was actively supported by the official organ and every official member of the populist and republican parties in Polk county and their recognized bosses.

Flushed with this success, we are advised that Everett now contemplates posing before the legislature as a democrat in an attempt to defeat the re-election of Hon. Charles G. Janes as judge of the Tallapoosa circuit, although during the campaign both he and his prominent supporters protested that he, if elected, would support Judge Janes over either of his opponents, Colonels Bartlett or Edwards.

I state these facts briefly, believing them to be more eloquent than an elaborate argument. The faithful democrats of Polk, who, with varying fortunes and against overwhelming odds, have fought the party's battles for a quarter of a century, appeal to you for your vote and influence in retaining a most worthy and competent official in a place he so worthily fills.

Rear Admiral Hill will be urged for collector of the port if the scheme goes through, and Hon. Mel Branch will run a lighthouse on top of the Kiser building. But the matter is in dispute through the efforts of Hon. Gus Morrow, of Jonesboro, to obtain exclusive carshed privileges during the winter months and use it as a skating rink.

Representative Mayson, of DeKalb, is a quiet and observant visitor to the political clearing house these days, and a good deal is expected of him when the legislature meets. FULTON'S RURAL SCHOOLS BEGIN A NEW ERA WITH NEXT OPENING Thorough Education Is Offered to the Children of County's Public School System.

SESSION BEGINS OCTOBER 31

Great Changes Have Recently Been Made and System Extended.

NORMAL WORK BEGINS TOMORROW

What Has Been Done by the Board of Education for the Establishment of a Complete System of Schools in Fulton County.

★ Within the last three years the public schools of Fulton county have successfully been enlarged and systematized. ★

By Shirley Brooks.

THE YEARLY SESSION OF THE PUBlic schools of Fulton county will begin on Monday morning, October 31st. This will begin a new era in the public educational institutions of the county, and means much to the people of the rural districts. The school year will begin under brighter prospects than ever before, and the attendance will be larger. The preliminary work has already been done by Commissioner Guinn and his assistants, and the doors of the houses of education will be thrown open on the last day of the month.

Tomorrow morning the Teachers' institute of Fulton county will begin operation. The sessions will be held in the public school building at Oakland City, and all the teachers of the public schools of the county will be in attendance. Only normal class work is done at the sessions of the institute. The best methods for teaching are discussed, and the aims and objects of the institute are to equip the teachers as far as possible with the necessary qualifications for teaching the children of the county in the most felicitous manner.

Dr. A. A. Marshall will be the conductor of the school, and he will be assisted by Mr. Guinn. There will be three gatherings each day—a morning session, an afternoon session and a lecture in the evening.

The pupils of Oakland City school will be used as the material for the practical instruction of the teachers. Tomorrow morning the subject will be organization. Three teachers will be assigned to organize the school. The pupils will come with their books, and the teachers chosen for the work will begin in the presence of the other teachers, so that all may profit by the same examples, organize, classify, get the advancement of the pupils, assign lessons, get acquainted with the pupils, take their names and addresses, and do all the preliminary work that is attendant upon the opening of a school.

The morning session of the institute during the remaining days of the week will be devoted to model school work. At the afternoon sessions the regular institute work will be the programme. This will be conducted by Dr. Marshall and his assistants. A portion of the time will be devoted to a criticism of the morning work. General school work and methods will be discussed and studied. The evening sessions will be devoted to lectures. A series of addresses on school subjects have been arranged to which admission will be charged. The proceeds will go toward a fund for purchasing a library for the Oakland City school.

All the teachers of the institute, the teachers of the public schools of Atlanta and the children of the Oakland City school will be admitted free. The lecturers are as follows:

Lawton B. Evans, superintendent of schools, Augusta, Monday night.

Dr. A. A. Marshall, of Atlanta, Tuesday night.

Dr. HenryQuigg, Wednesday night.

Professor Euler B. Smith, Thursday night.

Professor G. G. Bond, Friday night.

To the programme for each evening musical features will be added.

The teachers will be entertained by the citizens of Oakland City, and they are expected to spend the week in the little city, so as to be in easy access to the sessions of the institute.

The institute will close on Friday night, and the next Monday morning the teachers will go to the schools where they have been assigned for the year and organize them for work.

Rally in November.

A grand educational rally of the people of the northern portion of the county will be held at the R. L. Hope school, near the county almshouse, early in November. The object of this is to bring the people of the county together and arouse more interest in the subject of education. By the rapid march that has been made within the last two years in educational advancement, the county board of education has become enthusiastic over the work, and wants to do even more in the next two years than what has been accomplished in the last two.

The board of county commissioners will be present at the rally, the board of education, the county and city officials and other prominent citizens will be invited, and the occasion will be a memorable one. At this time the new school will be dedicated. Practical work in teaching a school will be shown to the visitors in the morning, and in the afternoon there will be a number of short talks.

Speeches will be made by Mr. W. P. Patillo on behalf of the county board of education, by Mr. Forrest Adair for the board of county commissioners and by Dr. A. A. Marshall. A basket dinner will be spread at noon.

The R. L. Hope school is one of the new institutions among the schools of the county. It is a gift to the county from the commissioners, and was formerly used as the asylum in connection with the county almshouse. This is one of the many handsome and serviceable school buildings that have been obtained by the county within the last two years.

Fulton's Public School System.

There is no other county in the state that can boast of as complete and thorough a system of public schools as that in Fulton county, and few counties in other states have the same instruction for the children of the rural districts as the county of Fulton. Time, work, money and thought have been expended to build up the present system, and the intelligence and culture of the children of the country districts stand as an example of the splendid methods used in the schools.

Within the last few years in no direction of public advancement has rapidity been so evident as in the development of the public schools of the county. There is no better example of the reformation of a system to be found than that which in the midst of the busy population in and around Atlanta has been wrought in the public school system of this county.

The corps of teachers has been almost completely changed in the last three or four years, and with this change has come new methods and ideas, and the system has accordingly advanced. The courses of instruction have been changed and bettered by the selection of the best text books for the instruction of the young and the grading of the schools. The latter change is the first time the grading of country schools has been done in this state, and statistics do not show that there are many other counties in the south where a systematic grade is sustained in the education of the children of the rural districts.

Two years ago the common schools of the county operated without a systematic plan. Teachers were permitted to teach such branches and such books as they chose, and the teachers themselves were not elected by the county board of education as required by law, but were selected by the patrons of the school to be served.

The schoolhouses of the county were owned and controlled in every case either by churches, school trustees or individuals. As a matter of fact on May 7, 1896, the Fulton county board of education did not own a single dollar's worth of real estate or school furniture. At the present time it has acquired by donation and otherwise property, real and personal, to the extent of about $13,000 at a total expense to the county of $3,000. County School Commissioner Guinn in his last report to the grand jury of the county says:

"That county boards of education should own and control all of the school property and necessary appliances is a matter of great importance to successful school operation. No school system can do its best work unless the ownership of all property and the control of all arrangements is vested in the hands of the board of education. Since this is true, the board has undertaken this work with the ultimate purpose in view of acquiring title to all the school properties in the county. This must necessarily take time, but we are encouraged and gratified at the success which has already been achieved in this important feature of our work.

"While the board is deeply gratified at the showing thus made in the matter of acquiring school property, the most encouraging results have come from the efforts which have been made to grade and systematize the work of the schools. It has long been considered impracticable to do graded work in the average rural school, but the experiment which the Fulton county board has made along this line clearly establishes the fact that country schools can be graded and that with results quite satisfactory as those which come from grading in urban schools."

The Teachers of the Schools.

Within the last few years the teaching force of the county has been very materially elevated in character and efficiency. To them the credit for the increased interest in the schools and the success of the graded system is due. The teachers are selected and chosen not only after the most rigid examinations in all branches which they have to teach, but in normal school methods and the plans for instructing pupils and getting them interested in the work of the classes.

Out of forty-one teachers in the county, twenty-one have had special normal school training. This is considered a very unusual average and without this training and the hearty co-operation they have given to the work of systematizing the schools the present system would not have been obtained.

The teachers of the schools for the present year and the schools over which they will preside are as follows:

Antioch—Miss Maud White, principal; Miss Annie Johnson, assistant.
R. L. Hope School—Miss Fannie Brown, principal; Miss Jane Bennett, assistant.
Battle Hill—Walker White, principal; Miss Effie McFail, assistant.
Ben Hill—I. O. Kimberly, principal; Miss Grace Putnam, assistant.

Public Interest in Rural Schools.

The interest shown by the people of the county in the establishment of graded schools and the erection of comfortable and healthful buildings for the education of the children is very great. This accounts largely for the system as it exists. The board of education has been encouraged in every move it has made to better the system. Every aid has been given by the citizens of the county to have a school in every neighborhood.

In this fact lies the secret of the success the board has attained in securing a great quantity of valuable property without any expense to the county. In many instances the board has secured land for the erection of a school building free. Deeds for this property have been accepted and made in the name of the county from the donor. Public subscriptions were then begun and it is said that in no instance has the amount needed to erect a school building failed to come from the pockets of the farmers when it was wanted. The money was given to the board and the school building constructed.

More money was raised for the furnishing of the building with modern appliances for instruction and comfort. Modern desks, blackboards and charts have been placed in every building and gradually within three or four years much personal and real property of the county has been obtained—almost imperceptibly when the work commenced—but at the beginning of the present scholastic year amounts to a very large sum. Within the last year the following buildings have been erected:

New building at College Park, $1,500.
Chattahoochee school, made of brick, $3,000.
Battle Hill school, $2,250.
Bolton school, $750.
Ethel street school, $2,500.

The recent donation by the county commissioners of the large building known as the R. L. Hope school, in the northern portion of the county, is a very valuable accession to the school property of the county. The building is a very large one and will accommodate several hundred pupils. It has been equipped with every modern appliance and numbers of visitors have seen and spoken highly of the generosity of the county commissioners. There are now in the county twenty-six schools for whites and fourteen for negroes.

Attendance of Schools.

The school population of Fulton county is larger than that of any other county in the state. There are nearly 4,000 children that for six months of each year secure the advantages of the schools. The following shows the attendance in numbers:

WHITE—
Males, 1,344.
Females 1,233.
COLORED—
Males, 646.
Females, 663.
Total, 3,886.
White teachers, 41.
Colored teachers, 17.
White schools, 26.
Negro schools, 14.
Total valuation of property, $13,000.
Expense to county, $3,000.

The foregoing figures give a concise idea of the extent of the system of schools of the county. It is expected that the beginning of this scholastic year will show many changes and an increase in attendance.

Course of Study.

The course of study that runs through the schools extends over nine years. It begins at the earliest moment that the mind of the child begins to receive and retain impressions and continues until a thorough and competent common school education has been attained. To the studious pupil the courses offer rich fields for learning and if a higher education is desired the foundation laid in the course of the county schools is considered a very excellent one.

The curriculum is divided into three grades—the primary, which takes the child when he begins to learn his alphabet and runs for three years, when the third reader, the spelling book, primary arithmetic, grammar, geography and history have all received some attention.

The intermediate grade is then entered and here the studies which were taken up in the primary grade are continued and the gradual steps are followed until the completion of the advanced grade which is the extent of the course. In the last year such studies as civil government, higher arithmetic, advanced geography, higher lessons in English and the history of the United States are taken up and completed.

The pupil is considered, if he has been diligent, by this time to have had a sufficient education to intelligently understand questions and by self-study profitably seek further knowledge. Large tables are made with the prescribed course of study upon them and these are placed in every school building and strictly adhered to. No deviation is allowed, the books to be used and the time to be spent in the mastery of each is prescribed and followed according to the regulations. This is the system that has been instituted. A scholar may move to the extreme ends of the county and will have an opportunity to begin the work that was thus broken off in a new county school at the same place where the studies were interrupted.

Literary Societies.

As a part of the course of study, a literary society is organized in each school and the attendance upon the session of the organization and participation in the deliberations of the body are compulsory. The regulations of the system require it.

In some of the schools the literary society has become the most popular feature of a week's work. The regulations on this are issued by the board of education as follows:

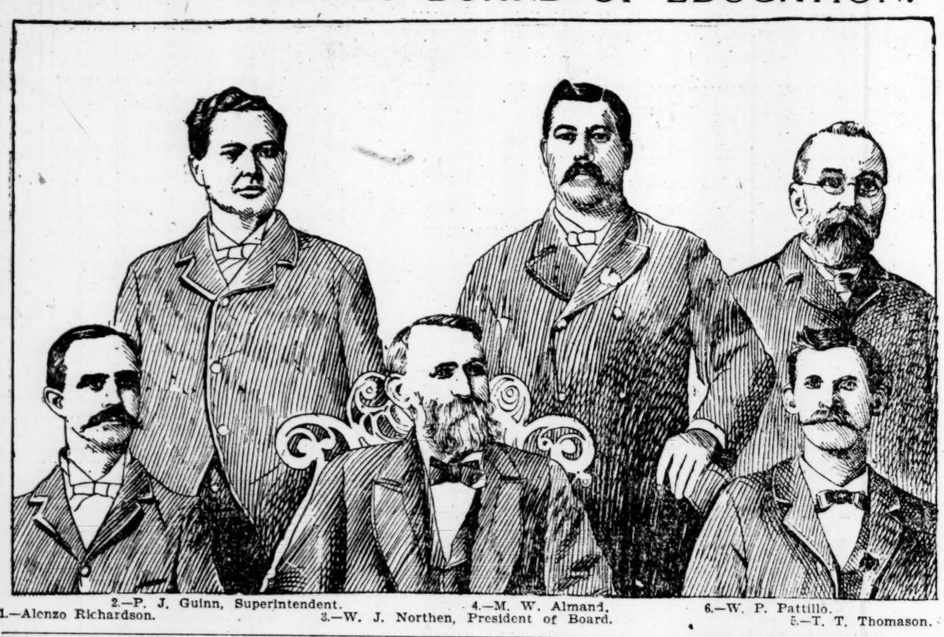

"Each school shall be organized into a literary society, officered by pupils of the school but under the supervision of the teacher, officers to be changed each month. One hour and thirty minutes each Friday afternoon shall be devoted to the exercises of the society. The programme for the same shall be made by the teacher so that each child in the school shall have some part in the exercises at least once a month. The exercises shall consist of declamations, readings, recitations, debates, etc. At these meetings the teachers shall see that parliamentary usages are observed."

The School Regulations.

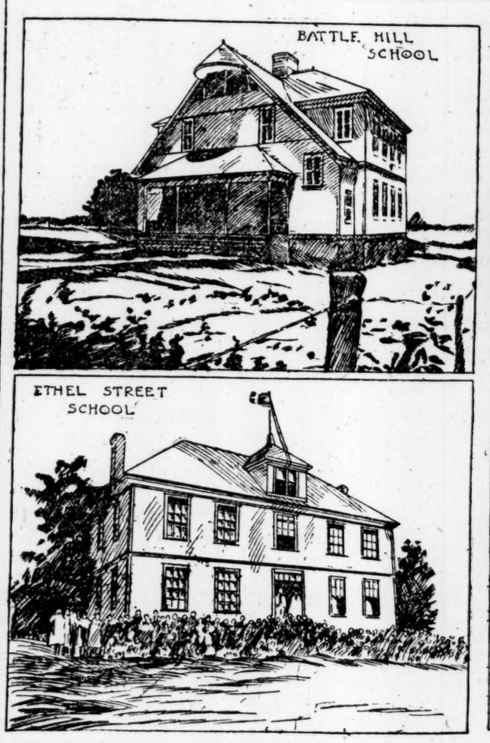

An important part of the system of the schools is the regulations which are issued by the board for the conduct of each school and daily hours that must be maintained. The regulations are not only for the pupils but for the teachers and County School Commissioner Guinn is empowered to enforce the regulations. The outline of the year's work is laid down in the regulations and the manner in which

INHALER SENT FREE

Dr. Worst's Famous Catarrh Treatment Sent FREE to Readers of The Constitution.

Sufferers from Catarrh, Hard of Hearing, Bronchitis and Sore Thoat Invited To Give the Treatment a Trial.

DR. E. J. WORST, Ashland, O.

Dr. E. J. Worst, of Ashland, O., has made himself famous in a few years by a treatment for Catarrh and Bronchitis, of which he is the originator. While physicians generally were treating these very common diseases with sprays and douches, Dr. Worst perfected his dry air treatment. Air is the only agent that is fine enough to reach the air cells of the head and respiratory organs. It was the agent that carried the disease there, and it must be the one to successfully remove it. Vapors, sprays and atomizers are all dangerous. Nature never intended them for the windpipe, and instantly repels them. When you get a drop of water down "the wrong way," how soon you cough and gag. This is because nature has placed a very sensitive valve in the windpipe, which closes the instant water in any form comes in contact with it. The only way to reach the inflamed membranes of these organs is by properly medicating the air you breathe. Not one person in fifty was ever cured by the old method of treating catarrh, now everywhere condemned. Dr. Worst has been so uniformly successful in curing patients that he writes, asking us to make the following announcement:

SPECIAL OFFER.

"I will for a short time mail any reader of The Atlanta Constitution one of my new scientific Catarrh Inhalers and medicine for one year, on three days' trial free. If it gives satisfaction, send me $1; if not, return it. It cures more cases than all others combined, hence this offer."

Thousand of people have been cured by Dr. Worst's treatment after suffering for many years from Catarrh, Asthma, Hay Fever, Colds, Pains and Roaring in the Head, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Headache, Partial Deafness and all diseases of the air passages. The treatment is indorsed and used by all leading physicians.

Space forbids printing a long list of testimonials. Persons can receive descriptive pamphlets and testimonials by writing, if interested. Below are given two testimonials from grateful people who have been cured by Dr. Worst's wonderful dry air treatment:

"I have received and tested the inhaler. I am happy to say the longer I use it the more I esteem and consider it the most effectual treatment I have ever used for catarrh and lung affections. It has relieved a constant cough I have had for eight years." PROF. E. S. NASON, 6027 Main St., Germantown, Pa.

"I have been using your Catarrh Inhaler, which I consider a little wonder. I have had Catarrh for seven years and had taken so many remedies that I had become discouraged. I am almost deaf, but your Inhaler is restoring my hearing and stopping the discharges." Respectfully yours, H. V. HAWKINS, Algona, La.

Dr. Worst's cure by inhalation treatment is the only one that has sufficient merit to inspire enough confidence in any manufacturer to send it to the public on trial, to be paid for if satisfactory. If you are afflicted with any of these diseases or have an afflicted friend, do not fail to write at once and accept this generous offer. Address,

To make our advertisements clever without having them dashed with large conceit. There is no air of about them. The effect of such a style is wearisome. It pervades a great deal of advertising, and strange to say lurks in the announcements of many very good merchants. The spirit seems to be infectious. They incessantly tap the reader on the shoulder and say to him,

"Say, you, don't forget,
You know how wonder-

We have an enormous stock of Ready-to-wear Clothing. Suits and Overcoats with style, and workmanship, and quality, and handsomeness, and prices that are far and away beyond the disfavor of the most exacting critic. There are sorts for every taste.

Showy, swell, nobby effects and quiet, unobtrusive, elegant effects—all in the height of fashion.

FULTON'S RURAL SCHOOLS BEGIN

the schools are to be managed. The regulations for 1898 and 1899 are:

1. The school year will consist of six months of twenty days each.

2. There will be two terms of three months each; the first beginning October 31, 1898, and ending January 27, 1899; the second beginning January 30, 1899, and ending April 21, 1899. A vacation from December 23, 1898, to January 2, 1899, will be taken for Christmas holidays.

3. Two sessions will be taught each day, opening not later than 8:30 o'clock a. m., and closing in the afternoon not earlier that 3 o'clock.

4. Intermissions must be allowed as follows: Fifteen minutes in the morning session; one-half hour at noon, from 12 to 12:30, for lunch, and fifteen minutes in the afternoon. Teachers must remain at the schoolhouse during all intermissions.

5. A teachers' institute, or normal class, for white teachers, will be held on the first Saturday in each month during the public school term, at such place as shall be designated by the county school commissioner. All teachers are required to attend regularly and promptly. The institute for the colored teachers will be held on the second Saturday of each month, beginning at 10 a. m. All teachers are required to perform such service at these institutes as shall be requested of them by the commissioner.

6. Reports from each school will be required as follows: (a) A weekly card report showing aggregate attendance each day and the average for the week. (b) A monthly report containing a transcript of the school register. These reports must be forwarded promptly.

7. During the public school term all teachers will be required to have their residence in the communities they are serving.

8. A daily programme of class work must be furnished to the commissioner by the teacher during the first two weeks of the term.

9. The management and discipline of schools will be left entirely to the teacher in charge, subject to the rules adopted by the county board of education.

10. Teachers must be at the schoolhouse at least fifteen minutes before the regular hour for opening, and they must remain until all the pupils have left the premises.

11. All pupils must be entered during the first two weeks of each term, unless sufficient cause shall be shown for failure so to enter.

12. When a pupil has been entered in one school he cannot be transferred to another except by permission of the commissioner.

13. A pupil who is absent from school two consecutive days, or as many as five in any one month, without sufficient excuse may lose his place in the school.

14. In all cases of absence pupils must bring a written excuse from the parent, or parent must render an oral excuse to the teacher.

15. Teachers shall promptly notify parents of the textbooks, scratch pads slates and pencils, etc., which are needed by the pupils, and unless they are procured within one week from such notice the pupil may lose his place in school.

16. In extreme cases, where for the sake of proper discipline expulsion is deemed necessary, the teacher may suspend a pupil and refer such case with a statement of facts and recommendations thereon to the commissioner, and if the circumstances warrant, an order of expulsion shall be issued by him.

17. The following holidays will be observed: Thanksgiving and Arbor days. On these days the morning session shall be devoted to appropriate exercises and the afternoon shall be a holiday. Upon Washington's and Lee's birthdays the regular programme shall be carried out in the forenoon. In the afternoon of each of these days one hour shall be given to appropriate exercises—the remainder shall be a holiday.

18. All schools must have public exercises at the close of each annual session.

19. At the end of each term all pupils must undergo written examinations prepared by the commissioner. Upon these, together with the class standing, shall depend the promotions of the pupil.

20. Certificates of graduation shall be issued to all pupils completing satisfactorily the full course of study.

21. No teacher will be permitted to devote any portion of the time set aside for common school work to giving instruction in any branches not specially named in the course of study.

22. Blanks for monthly report of the standing of pupils will be furnished to teachers. These reports must be filled out by teacher at the end of each month and delivered to pupil. After the same has been signed by parent or guardian the card shall be returned to teacher.

School Libraries.

The work of establishing libraries in each school has been one of the most recent things undertaken but has met with great popular favor and some of the schools now have a nucleus of a library on hand. A co-operative plan will be inaugurated it is thought among the schools and books will be bought as rapidly as funds can be secured for the purpose.

A large and magnificent teachers library has been established in the office of Commissioner Guinn in the courthouse annex. This contains a valuable collection of books on normal training and the instruction of children.

The books in the library are open at all times to the teachers of the county and many of them avail themselves of the opportunity to study the special subjects that come under their observation in daily work.

Monthly School Journal.

What will be an innovation for the school children and a new experiment in school work will be the publication every month of a journal devoted to the interest of the public schools of Fulton county. The first issue will be made early in November and Commissioner Guinn, who will be the editor of the new paper, has made arrangements for a copy to be placed on the desk of every child in the schools.

The journal being published in the interest of the schools the contents will be almost solely for the teacher, the pupils and the parents of the children who attend the school.

The teachers will contribute, short compositions by the pupils will be used, thus creating a desire among the scholars and a friendly rivalry for honors, as the honor rolls will be printed each month. The parents and brothers and sisters and friends of the pupils will be brought closer together and the publication will be so distributed that every home will receive one or more copies.

There will be no charges for subscription to the pupils. The journal will be the official organ of the schools and when an appeal to the hearts of the mothers and fathers of the children is wanted it will be made through the columns of the paper. It is believed that the paper will bring the teachers in touch with the homes and the children of the different schools in touch with each other.

Exhibit at Omaha Exposition.

Reports have been received by Commissioner Guinn that one of the most attractive school exhibits at the Omaha exposition is the one made by the schools of Fulton county.

An immense frame is on display and in the frame are pictures of the schoolhouses, the children, the property, the board of education of Fulton county. Every feature of the work of the schools is explained to such a complete extent that the exhibit has attracted much attention. Commissioner Guinn has received many inquiries regarding the system in use here by virtue of the exhibit, and Hon. W. J. Northen has written that many people have been favorably struck by the good showing made.

The Schools for Negroes.

In the reformation of the school system the negroes have not been overlooked. They have been given a great deal of attention and the system of schools that has been established is very complete and thorough. The same course of instruction, the same regulations, the same requirements are made of the colored teachers as of the white teachers, and the only difference is that the children attend school in different buildings.

The teachers for the negro schools have not yet been assigned, but will be on next Thursday. They are as follows: Mrs. S. H. McCain, W. H. Lee, Mrs. S. H. Avery, L. S. Wingfield, Minnie L. Perry, J. N. Bowers, N. S. Carey, W. E. Carey, Lula M. Hill, Ophelia G. Strobert, Mrs. O. A. Marion, Mary A. Logan, C. L. White and Corine Sims.

The negroes have fourteen schools in different parts of the county and for these the colored population has furnished a great part of the money for buildings and equipment. The cost to the county has, in the case of the schools for white children, been almost nothing. The negroes of the country are pleased with the system and are in many places preparing to have schools erected and opened.

Guinn on Rural Education.

Commissioner Guinn has very decided ideas on the development of the rural districts for educational purposes and the system in force in this county is largely due to his exertions. He is known as an organizer of schools and daily receives many inquiries regarding the best methods to be used in developing the country schools and the education of the farmer's sons and daughters. He says:

The solution of the educational problem for the country district is the greatest question now confronting this state. Upon the proper education of the masses depends the future growth and destiny of our great commonwealth. Speculate and theorize as we will as to what is holding us back from the prosperity and happiness which we as a state should now be enjoying, as to what is producing discontent and unrest among the great body of our people, we will never have a happy people, and we will never be able to reach the proud position or witness the wonderful development of which this section is capable, until we educate the masses.

I long to see the day in Georgia, and in our whole country as to that matter, when not a farmhouse in our land will be vacated in order to insure educational facilities. The exodus from the country into the town to secure educational advantages has worked incalculable injury to all of the interests of our country. As I see it, there remains but one great educational question to be determined in our state, and that question is the education of our country people. High schools and colleges are already provided in easy access to all who are able to reach them.

Towns and cities, mindful of the absolute necessity of educational facilities to true prosperity, have, throughout the state, established splendid systems of schools. The percentage of illiteracy in the incorporated towns and cities of Georgia today amounts to nothing, and yet, taking the whole state, including these very towns and cities, and the degree of illiteracy is simply appalling—a reflection on our civilization and a standing disgrace to our state. It is the country districts that should have our best efforts and energies. They need it.

Convinced of the true value of public schools by actual test, our towns and cities will go forward unaided by outside efforts until they reach a degree of perfection fully up to the standard of the best systems of the day. But what of the country? We have talked proportionately too much about our higher institutions of learning, and have devoted proportionately too much time and means to providing schools for our business and commercial centers, while the rural school has languished and almost died from sheer inattention and neglect.

While all other departments of the county are of great importance, and are necessary to our material prosperity, still we submit that there is not one which opens up the field for usefulness or gives promise of such far-reaching results as does the educational department. It is above and beyond them all. The destiny of our county and state is being shaped in our schools. Characters are being made. Immortal souls and minds are crying for light. Shall we not all unite in giving it to them?

SOME WONDERFUL SCENERY

Cape Froward the Lowest Continental Point of the World.

NAKED ALACALUFES OR CAVE INDIANS

How They Looked and Live—Queer Experiences of a Tour Through Tierra del Fuego.

Cape Frorward, Strait of Magellan, September 30.—At the tail end of our hemisphere. At the lowest continental point of the world. Three thousand miles nearer the south pole than the foot of the Siamese peninsula at the end of Asia. More than a thousand miles below the Cape of Good Hope at the bottom of Africa, with a distance almost equal to the thickness of the earth between myself and the northern parts of the United States, I write for my American readers. I am on the steamer Itauri in the Strait of Magellan. Just opposite me the black, rocky walls of Cape Froward, the southernmost point of South America, rise almost straight upward to a height of 1,200 feet, and behind them, glistening in the moonlight, are the glacial snows of Mount Victoria, 2,000 feet high. I am at the bottom of the great Andean chain. Those hills are the end of the mighty ridge which ties the continent together. Loaded with copper, silver and gold, they crawl from here on their sinuous way toward the north pole. They span the equator, they drop their heads at the Isthmus of Panama and end only at the Arctic ocean, beyond the gold mines of Alaska and the Klondike. The hills to the southward are a part of Tierra del Fuego, above Cape Horn, and that great white frozen pyramidal cone which rises among them is Mount Sarmiento which pierces the southern sky more than 1,000 feet above the altitude of Mount Washington. Behind and in front of my ship, here as black as ink under the shadows of the hills, there turned to silver by the full moon's rays, flows the Strait of Magellan that salt water river, in which, moved by the tides, the great oceans, the Atlantic and the Pacific, rush together and clasp their hands to bear up the commerce of the world.

The Strait of Magellan.

The Strait of Magellan makes the passage between the oceans shorter by almost 1,000 miles. Cape Horn is less than a couple of hundred miles south of it, but its waters are always tossed about by terrible storms. Tonight the Magellans are almost as quiet as a mill pond, and the Itauri is steaming as smoothly through them as the boat which carries the hero away in the Swan song of Lohengrin. We are now almost midway between the Atlantic and the Pacific. We entered the strait by what is known as Smyth's channel, opposite Desolation island, about thirty miles from Cape Pilar, which marks its western end. We could see the two massive rocks of the cape as we turned to the eastward. They rise almost precipitously for a distance of 1,500 feet, and when the air is clear they are in sight for many miles. Beginning here the strait runs southeast to Cane Froward. It then turns to the northeast widening here and there as it goes, until it ends at the Atlantic between Cape Virgin and Cape Holy Ghost. The channel is 365 miles long, and its width varies from two to twenty-four miles. At times our vessel has been within a stone's throw of the shore, and again in the misty air, where the channel widened, the waters seemed to almost bound the horizon. This is so only in the eastern parts of the channel, on both sides of which the lands of Patagonia and Tierra del Fuego are low. In the west there is little else than mountains, which are now snow-dusted and in many cases loaded with vast glaciers slowly sliding down them to the sea. Below the Strait of Magellan there is a vast archipelago of islands, the smaller of which are mountain peaks rising above the waves and the largest the island of Tierra del Fuego. The last is bigger than many of our American states and it has mountains and valleys vast forests and extensive plains which have lately been transformed into some of the biggest sheep farms of the world. North of the strait lies the end of southern Patagonia on the east, and on the west a continuation of the archipelago of Tierra del Fuego. These islands, as well as the strait and almost all of Tierra del Fuego belong to Chile. She has an area of land here, which she calls the territory of the Magellan, of 75,000 square miles, half again as large as the state of New York and almost twice the area of Ohio. Some of the Chilean naval vessels are now here engaged in surveying the channels and harbors, but the greater part of this region is almost as unknown as it was when Hernando Magellan, a Spanish navigator, discovered the strait in 1520. The land and the people have been misrepresented by passers-by from Darwin down to within recent years, and it is only lately that opportunities have been offered for careful investigation. Even now the savages I see here are less known than the tribes of central Africa, and only the coasts of a few of the islands have been explored. The sheep farmer, the gold digger and the government vessels are, however, making headway, and within a few years this great archipelago will be a terra incognito no longer.

The Cloud Land of Southern Patagonia

The generally accepted belief regarding southern Patagonia and Tierra del Fuego is that they are something like the coast of Greenland or those of the arctic seas. The geographies represent them as wastes of ice and snow, desolate, forbidding and terrible to the traveler. For the past four days I have been winding in and out of the channels along the west coast of lower Patagonia. My sail has been through a series of scenic panorama that cannot be surpassed in the world. We entered the archipelago by what is known as the Smyths channel route, about 400 miles above here, and coasted slowly along through one channel after another until we came into the strait proper at Desolation island. Darwin compared the glaciers Sarmiento in Tierra del Fuego to 100 frozen Niagaras. The waters along the lower end of western Patagonia present combinations which make you think of a hundred Lake Comos, Lake Genevas and Lake Lucernes tied together in one ever-widening, ever-changing river. Here are the beauties of the Thousand Islands of the St. Lawrence, added to by snow-capped mountains kissed by the sun, and mighty glaciers sliding down into masses of dark green vegetation. Here are giant rocks, cathedral shaped, covered with moss, rising straight upward from the water for 1,000 feet; mountains, their heads lost in the clouds, dropping almost precipitously into the sea; narrow gorges, in which the steamer must tack this way and that as it winds its way through islands of green and islands of rock. Here are fields of floating ice, through which the boat crashes; narrow fiords, in which the black water is 3,000 feet deep, and, in short, such a variety of scenic wonders of clouds, mountain and sea that I doubt whether their like can be found in the world. If you could take the most picturesque parts of the Andes, the Himalayas and the Alps, sink them up to their necks in dark blue water, pull the cloud masses down with them into the sea and wrap their rugged sides far up from the water's edge with a wonderful mantle of green, which is now brilliant in the sunlight, now frosted by snow and now so loaded with ice that it lies in terraces up their sides, you might have a faint idea of nature's wonders in the Magellans.

On a South Pacific Steamer.

But I despair of giving a vivid picture of our ride through this archipelago. It lasted three days, and it was such a series of wonders that only a biograph of the gods worked by their own hands could paint them on the retina of your imagination. All I shall attempt is to take you with me through some few places by a transcript of my notes made upon the ground. We start in the bay of Coronel. Our steamer, the Itauri of the Kosmos line, bound for Hamburg vit the strait, lies in the harbor. She is a German ship of 6,200 tons, lighted and heated by steam. Captain Behrmann, her commander is German and so are all the passengers officers and crew. We speak German at the table and are, in fact, a small slice of Germany in one of the quietest harbors of the coast of Chile. I go to my cabin. It is No. 12, and is as good a room as that of an Atlantic liner. We have our first meals here. The cooking is German. The meats are fresh. As I go down to dinner I hear the squawk of a chicken. Our meats are carried alive on board, so that later on we shall listen to the baa-ing of sheep, the grunting of pigs and the cackling of geese mixed with the crunching of the ice fields as the steamer makes its way through them. Before I pay the $70 which is my fare to Punta Arenas, on the Strait of Magellan, I asked if the ship will go via Smyths channel. The reply is yes. The Kosmos is the only line that takes this route, the other ships going through the strait preferring to stand the storms which sweep up along the west coast from Cape Horn to the narrow, dangerous, slow but more quiet land-locked waters of the Patagonian coast. We shall have to travel very slowly and must anchor at night, but before we start lat us take a look at our ship. What is the cargo? It has 3,000 tons of saltpeter for Germany, 2,000 barrels of Chilean honey for different parts of Europe, hundreds of rolls of Chilean sole leather for Russia and wheat and wine for Punta Arenas and Montevideo. It is now taking on 900 tons of coal. Brawny Chilean peasants are putting it into the ship. They stand in lighters or flat boats and use shovels to throw the coal up to the platforms under the doors of the hold. Here other peasants shovel it in. They swear as they work, and we hear them still swearing and heaving as we go to bed.

In the Land-Locked Seas of South.

We awake far out in the Pacific. The steamer is rolling, the white caps are dancing over the waves and away off to the eastward we can make out the faint blue outline of south Chile. A day later in storm and rain we steam past the long, narrow island of Chiloe, which the government is trying to colonize, and on the evening of the third day we enter the wide Gulf of Petos and come to anchor at the entrance to the channel. The water is like a mill pond. The steamer moves slowly. We seem to be in a great river rather than in the ocean. We are sailing among the clouds through the water-filled ravines of some of the greatest of the world's mountains. On our right are grass-clad islands. On our left are rugged, ragged peaks rising in all shapes out of the sea. There is one clothed in green which reminds you of the Pyramid of Ghizeh, and there is another which is a fair likeness of the smashed nose sphinx. In front of the green hills are climbing over one another like a troop of giants playing leap-frog, and farther on they rise upward in fort-like walls of green a thousand feet high, losing themselves in that mighty white cloud which rests above them. The channel narrows and widens. Now we are in lakes surrounded by snow-capped mountains, now in canons, now we sail by a break in the mountain walls, a deep fiord with moss green walls snow dusted a thousand feet high and filled with black water a thousand feet deep. As we look the sun breaks its way into the gorge and turns the water to silver. It paints diamonds in the snow of its moss-green sides. Over there is as glacier, a great green mass shining out upon the ragged sides of a snowy mountain. See the sun has struck it and it is now a bed of emeralds in a setting of frosted silver.

The weather and the sky change every moment, and before us is an ever-varying panorama of sky and sea and land. We sail out of the sunlight into snowstorms and steam right out of the snow into the sun. Now the sky is almost blue overhead, with fleecy white clouds scattered here and there through it. Cloud masses here nestle in the velvety laps of the hills, there they wrap themselves about the snowy peaks as though to warm them, and there they stoop down and press warm, tantalizing kisses upon their icy lips. Upon the snow-dusted hills and dark water are dashes of silver where the sun has poked its way through the clouds. The varying light makes the channel on one side of the ship black, on the other side it is of a beautiful yellowish green, and behind where the sun strikes it the ship has left a path of molten silver. The hills change even as the water under the sun. Now they are dark. The sun washes them with its rays and the ferns and moss and trees brighten. The ragged volcanic background of the rocks show out and through the green and black falling hundreds and sometimes thousands of feet almost straight down are silvery cascades, some as big as your wrist, others no larger around than your little finger. These are to be seen all along these inland channels. They come from the glaciers and the mountain snows.

A Rainbow Set in Silver.

One of the strangest atmospheric effects I have ever seen happened on our third day in the channel. The mountain-walled river had widened and we were again coming to narrows, when over our pathway in front of us a great rainbow sprang from the snowy summits of a low mountain in the south to that of another mountain almost opposite on the north of the channel, making a great rainbow span over the dark water. It was a splendid many-colored arch of the gods founded on pedestals of frosted silver. As we approached the rainbow faded, the sky was blue overhead, but a great wall of fleecy white clouds had dropped down upon or rather risen up from the water. When I first saw it I thought it was a field of icebergs. It was as white as snow and it extended upward to what seemed a height of several hundred feet, stretching across the channel from mountain to mountain. Above this wall the sky was clear and the only other clouds to be seen were those hovering over the mountain peaks. We sailed out of the light right into this cloud wall, out of the dry air into a mist so thick that we could almost wash our hands in it. A half hour later we were again under a clear sky. At times the masts of the steamer were in the clouds and the deck clear and dry. Again the clouds would form a roof over the channel and again the lower walls of the hills would be hidden and we could look over the clouds at the green and snow above.

Among the Icebergs and Glaciers.

It seems strange to think of green moss, green trees and a mass of dense green vegetation in midwinter, amid the snows and glaciers. That is what we have here. The glaciers slide down into the green, and the snow falls and melts upon it all winter long. In many places the green is clear, in others it is snow dusted, and in others loaded with snow masses. On the highest peaks only it is all snow and ice. Even in the jungles of India I have not seen so dense a growth of trees and plants as along the west coast of Patagonia. We had a chance to go on shore every afternoon when we anchored for the night. Pushing our way into the country was, however, impossible. The trees are evergreens, generally small, but so dense that you could walk on their tops on snow shoes. A bed of moss as deep as your waist covers the ground about them, and great ferns, with leaves as long as your arm, extend out in every bare and rocky spot. The ground is saturated with moisture. The mold and rotting wood of centuries covers it, and you sink in and stumble about more than you would in an Irish bog. It is only on the higher parts of the mountains that vegetation ceases, and only there that the climate is such as to produce glaciers and perpetual snow. The icebergs which we saw in the channel came from these glaciers. They are among the great glaciers of the world, many of them surpassing, it is said, the largest glaciers of the Alps. In Tierra del Fuego they line the channels in places with walls of ice a thousand feet high, and ships must sail carefully not to be struck by the icebergs which in chunks of a thousand tons and upward break off of them, with a noise like thunder, and fall into the sea. Icebergs often fill Smyth's channel, so that it is impossible to get through. This was the case last year, when one of the steamers was forced to go back and where the ship upon which I now am had its bows crushed in by the icebergs. This glacial ice is not like that in our rivers and lakes. It is as hard as a rock and of a crystalline green. During our second day in the archipelago we stopped the steamer, lassoed an iceberg and towed it up to the ship. It was a little berg, not bigger than a Washington city lot, but it was a beautiful opalescent green, with a top of frosted silver. It had many angles and projectiles, and it was with crowbars that the steward and a boat load of sailors attacked it and broke off enough ice to last for the rest of the voyage. One of the great log chains used for hoisting heavy cargo was first coupled about the corner of one of these ice masses. Then a lever in the engine room was pulled and a section of an iceberg was raised by steam by means of a derrick to the deck of the vessel. Some of these blocks weighed many tons, and altogether we must have taken a hundred tons of ice.

The Naked Savages of the Magellans.

During our voyage through these strange islands we saw but few animals and birds. Now and then we passed a small school of seals, which popped their heads out of the water and took a peep at the steamer as it went by. We saw half a dozen whales in the different days of the trip, and now and then an albatross and gull. We had, however, a number of visits from the wild savages of the Magellans, the naked Indians of Patagonian channels, who are perhaps the least known of the wild men of the world. As far as I can learn, no ethnologist has ever lived with them or made a study of them. They are different from the Onas and Yaghans of Tierra del Fuego, among whom missionaries have worked, and several of whom were carried years ago to England. These Indians are known as the Alacalufes. There are, all told, only about 500 of them. They have no chiefs or tribal relations. Each family takes care of itself, living in its own canoe. They are strictly canoe Indians, who live almost entirely upon the sea, and who are found only in these straits and off the coasts of southern Patagonia. They sleep sometimes on land in little wigwams three feet high made by bending over the branches of trees and tying them together. They make a fire in front and crawl into them for the night. Their canoes are well constructed. They are fifteen or more feet long and about three or four feet wide, and perhaps two feet deep. They are made of bark sewn together with sinew. They are cross-ribbed, and so made that they can be easily paddled. In the center of each boat is a fire built on some earth, and about this sit such of the family as are not paddling the boat. Queer-looking people they are. They wear no clothes whatever, in a state of nature, and are apparently comfortable amid the snows of winter, with only a coat of seal or fish oil upon their skins. Since they have seen white men, however, they are glad to get such clothing as they can beg, and they come about the ships and ask for cast-off garments, food and tobacco. Some whom we saw were as naked as Adam and Eve before the fall. Others wore bits of old clothes.

One man, I remember, who was apparently the head of the almost naked family in his canoe, had on only a short vest, open at the front, and a rag apron as big as a lady's handkerchief tied to a string about his waist. His favorite wife, clad in a string of beads, sat in the boat near the fire, with a naked boy of two sucking his fingers as he leaned against her naked legs, and his other wife, a buxom girl in her teens, held a naked baby to her breast with one hand, while she paddled the boat with the other. I was shivering in my overcoat as I looked at these people, but they did not seem cold nor miserable. The children were fat. The young mother at the end of the boat had on nothing but a cast-off sack coat, which she had thrown over her shoulders to partially cover herself and her baby. As she paddled this kept falling off and her person and that of the baby were exposed. They were both plump. Both men and women were rather under than over-sized. They had faces somewhat like those of our Indians. The men's faces were dirty, evidently from paint, and the naked brave in the vest had a thin black mustache. They had black hair; that of the women long, but put up in some way, and that of the men cut off so that it just covered the ears and fell down in a thick black fringe or bang over their eyes. The skins were of a brown coffee color and all had very white teeth, which they showed again and again as they laughed. Their voices were not unpleasant and they mimicked us as we called out to them. The man in the vest had two or three other skins, which one of the officers of the ship tried to buy. He would not come on board and the officer crawled down the side of the ship above the boat and held on there by a rope while he tried to make the trade. He had a big butcher knife in one hand, while he held on to the rope by the other. He wanted the savage to give him two skins for the knife, but the savage thought one was enough. The naked man would not give up the skin until he had the knife in his hand, and in the trade he displayed a wonderful shrewdness and ability to bargain. Of course neither party could understand the other, and neither would trust the other. The naked savage, however, got the best of it. The only things that can be used in trading with these people are bright cloths, beads, tobacco and knives. They do not know the use of money and would rather have a jack knife or a hatchet than a genuine gold brick. They were evidently afraid to come on board, and I am told they are by no means friendly to strangers and will kill them if they can attack them with safety. They use bows and arrows to defend themselves, although they do not hunt. The food for the family is usually got by the women, of whom each man has one or more, as he can get them. The food consists of fish, mussels and of, now and then, a fox, seal or otter. The women fish with lines, but without hooks. A little chunk of meat is tied to the end of the line, and when the fish has swallowed this it is jerked into the canoe. The Alcalufes are also fond of whale meat, and a dead whale, I am told, is cut in pieces and buried to be eaten in its various stages of decomposition as long as it lasts. They understand what tobacco is and those we met were as anxious to get tobacco as food. They had but a few foreign words, one of which was "Frau Lehman," the term by which they designate all foreigners, and the two others, "gallatea," the Spanish word for sweet cakes, and "tabac," the German for tobacco.

CATARRH

Enlargement of the soft bones of the nose, thickening and ulceration of the lining membrane, with its constant discharge of unhealthy mucus and pus; breath tainted, hawking, expectorating, nose-bleeding, headaches, partial loss of hearing, and noises in the head

Caused by Poisoned Condition of the Blood. Cured by Botanic Blood Balm (B.B.B.)

The Great Blood Remedy.

Catarrh is due to an impure condition of the blood, and is one of the numerous offspring of Blood Poison. It may have come from a long way back in the family history, but the general opinion among medical men is that Catarrh is the offshoot of Poisoned Blood, producing bad breath and the above-named symptoms. The fact is admitted by all that it is only curable by constitutional treatment. Botanic Blood Balm (B. B. B.) has scored some brilliant victories in the cure of this loathsome malady, and why? Because B. B. B., when taken as directed, mixes with the poisons in the blood, which produce Catarrh, so as to cause the poison to be expelled from the blood through the sweat glands and excretory organs. R. R. Sautter, Athens, Georgia, wrote us not long ago that he was surprised to observe how agreeable his breath had become since using only three bottles of B. B. B. He was also able to hear better. Mrs. Lula Banks of Alabama wrote us that a friend of hers since using six bottles of B. B. B. that the mucous discharges which she had through the mouth and nose had stopped, and that she was able to breathe freely, and talk without offending any one with her bad breath.

Botanic Blood Balm (B. B. B.) is a scientific vegetable compound used by Dr. Gillam in his private practice for blood diseases, such as Old Sores, Scrofula, Boils, Blood Poison, Catarrh, etc. For sale by all druggists at $1 per large bottle, six bottles, full treatment, $5. Book of cures sent free of charge.

The Troops Mustered Out Have Their Tales of Woe.

WHICH STIR PAST MEMORIES

And Call for Some Reminiscences of the War That Was a War.

For The Constitution.

When I listen to the young soldiers who have been mustered out and hear the grumbling about the conditions and locations of camps, it makes me smile, and I know that every old confederate smiles with me.

But all this minds me of the first camp of soldiers I ever saw, and they, too, grumbled them, but they came to know what fools they were and of how little they knew of what the war was soon to be. This first camp had good tents with plenty of straw and covering, and with the boxes they received from their homes they lived about as the grand United States soldiers of today are living—they looked fine, walked proud and only had to do a little drilling every day to please the ladies and allow their officers to show off.

But I saw that regiment in another camp at a different time, and if any one had told me that fourteen months would have made such a change I would never have believed it. On my first visit I saw the lines of white tents looming up long before I arrived at the place, and big fires were burning and cooking meats were smelling, and the well-dressed soldiers were fat and joking and kicking up their heels like young fillies in playfulness, but my second visit was different, so different that it has impressed me from that day to this whenever it is called back to mind. They were at the "front" now—they were in the trenches, and as I passed over the hill I saw down in the valley what was called their camps.

Dingy brown blankets or oilcloths were stretched over a bush that had been bent for the purpose, and little smouldering fires seemed to struggle with the cold mist that was falling. There was no smell of cooking meats, no rollicking men, but a stillness most like death and a serious desire for rest, sweet rest, even upon the ground with one small blanket for every two.

It was good dark before I found the company I was looking for, and from over a hundred they had shrunk to some eighteen or twenty. These I found and they had gathered, for I had news from their homes, news from Georgia, and some of them cried while some stood stock still and only listened. I had letters for many of them, and I shall never forget how eagerly they kneeled by the dim little fires and read them over and over, and never will I forget how sad the ones looked for whom I had nothing—none but an old soldier can understand how sad it was to receive nothing on an occasion like this.

I was the hero upon that occasion if I never was before nor am ever to be again, and it is hard to tell when I would have stopped talking if the rattle of guns from toward the trenches had not scared me so bad that I hushed. The report was soon spreading that the yankees were moving forward, and there was such a bustle among the soldiers in falling into line that I didn't know what else to do than to go along with them, and go I did. At daylight I found myself in what they called a "trench" and in front of the first line of battle I ever saw.

I had been longing for daylight to come, for I thought our conditions worse than anything that could be, but when it had come I changed my mind and changed it quick. Just as it got light enough to see, a fellow pretty close to where I was said that he would freeze to death anyhow if he did not stir a little, and so he straightened himself and peeped over the bank in our front. This was fatal to the poor fellow; he raised his head most too high and a ball hit him zip, in a twinkling. He just dropped down in the mud, give a few jerks and was dead, but the fight began. Our fellows then began to pick at them, and before sun-up I wouldn't have given a chew of tobacco for my chances—but I didn't have to be told to keep down in the trench; I done it without any telling.

So it went all that day. The men in the trenches kept picking at each other and once and awhile the cannons would turn loose and big shells went squealing over us, which made me lay lower still, and when darkness came again I didn't need any guide to help me away from there. I went and went fast, but I often think of the difference in the first camp I saw and of the camp upon this occasion, and it was the very same men, but they had been through things that they had never dreamed of and I venture that they often thought of what fools they were for grumbling at the good fare at the commencement.

It makes old folks tired to hear all this talk about the hardships of the late soldiers. They have had no hardships and they don't know what war is, and they ought to quit grumbling. But let them grumble, there is none of it in our settlement at this time. The 'possums are ripe and more of them than we ever had before and the fattest. Besides the parties have begun and even as I write I can hear them tramping round in a ring in Brown's big room, singing:

"It rains and it hails and it's cold stormy weather,
Along comes the farmer drinking all the cider;
I'll rean the oats and it's who will be the binder,
I've lost my true love, but right here I'll find her."

These little parties don't cost much and the young people have such a nice time that but few object to them, provided they can suppress Brown and his fiddle, which they do without very much trouble of late, as the blackberry crop was a failure and the old man finds it hard to get a supply of fiddle strings

A SURE CURE FOR CROUP.

Twenty-Five Years' Constant Use Without a Failure.

The first indication of croup is hoarseness, and in a child subject to croup it may be taken as a sure sign of the approach of an attack. Following this hoarseness is a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is used in many thousands of homes in this broad land, and never disappoints the anxious mothers. We have yet to learn of a single instance in which it has not proved effectual. ACTING INDEPENDENT

New York Stocks Disregard Depressing Influences from London.

THAT MARKET STILL SELLING

Offerings Well Absorbed at Advancing Prices—Stocks of Western Roads Were Well Bought.

New York, October 22.—The stock market again showed itself independent of the depressing influence of London and Europe except at the opening, when a few of the international stocks were allowed to fall below the London parity. The selling of stocks on foreign account made up a considerable proportion of the day's business and was well absorbed at advancing prices. The buoyancy of the wheat market made grain carrying roads prominent on the movement, the buying of Atchison securities, particularly the preferred, again occupying a conspicuous place. But the stocks of all the western roads were well bought and advanced in price. Sugar ended its downward course very early and closed near the top with a net gain of 1¼, the underlying strength manifest in the market making the bears timid about leaving short contracts uncovered over Sunday. Tobacco was marked up to 125⅝ with every evidence of violent manipulation, and shorts were driven to cover heavily at every stage of the advance. Even the coalers showed the effects of the uncertain temper developed by the bears, and made recoveries on short offerings. The bank statement was just about as expected, and had little effect one way or the other. The gain in cash has been on imported gold and by the outgo from the sub-treasury and the heavy increase in loans of over $10,000 represents for the most part loans on sterling which is an element in the lending of money abroad. The increase in deposits from this source expended the reserve requirements so far that the increased cash only served to raise the surplus by $3,750,775. Business in both stock and bonds was well distributed and active, and the market showed a decided tendency to broaden out. The amount of business done was larger than for any half day for some time.

The market has shown a growing strength and activity as the week advanced, and has fairly snaken off the lethargy which even the long array of favorable factors in the situation has seemed powerless to awaken from. Even so phenomenal showing as St. Paul's earnings for the second week in October, the largest in the road's history and nearly $140,000 over those of last year, served only to encourage a feeble resistence to the industrious manipulation for a decline of the board from traders in stocks. It is a maxim of professional traders that a dull and sagging market for stocks is bound to produce a general reaction. The uncertainty of the European political situation was cited as additional argument for a season of dullness and declines, but curiously enough the more threatening developments of European politics have, directly at least, given the stimulus to the stock market which enables it to shake off its torpidity. The week's events in financial circles have, in fact, given a striking demonstration of the strength of this country's financial position, and its power to treat with indifference old world developments. There has been nothing in the domestic situation which causes more doubts to financiers than the low price in prospect for wheat when the crop, temporarily held back, should come forward. But this week has seen the crop coming forward in unprecedented volume. Yet so keen has been the foreign demand for our product that the largely augmented primary movement has made put little impression on the visible supply. Even the domestic demand proves unexpectedly keen, indicating that the sweeping out of the world's reserves by last year's high prices had evidently left a void which our unprecedented crop was needed to fill. The latest news of the military and naval preparations in France, and today in England enriched by last year's bountiful land resulted in a feverish demand for wheat which, if maintained, would mean incalculable advantage to this country, although about expansion in the surplus reserve from $4,240,400 to $43,412,325 and swelled the deposits nearly $46,000,000 has been so rapid that their significance is not fully appreciated. They emphasize the return to easier conditions, but in part to the liberal policy of the treasury with respect to public deposits and also the favorable position of the United States with regard to international exchange. While European discounts last week moved up, American money rates receded. As a natural consequence investments in sterling bills, now coming forward rapidly, afforded a safe profit, which was taken advantage of, as is seen in the increase of $10,608,900 in loans reported for the week. Specie receipts, both from Europe and the Pacific coast, were considerable and the sub-treasury's operations were in favor of the banks. This accounts for the gain of $8,105,700 in gold. The interior movement, what little there was of it this fall, seems at an end and the flow of money is again in this direction. The increase of $307,300 in legals is to be attributed to receipts from this source. The heavy gain in deposits in view of the loan and cash changes is just about normal. The statement in detail presents nothing that controverts the analysis already given. The National City, as usual, shows the heaviest gains, and the aggregate expansion of deposits can be traced for the most part to seven banks, the bulk of the new loans falling to the same institutions. It is interesting to note, however, that the Central National, an institution with large common commercial connections, shows up unusually well in the gains for the week, indicating a revival in business activity that is quite as important as anything else the statement reveals. With an assured supply of money and a steadily growing trade in balance, it would not be surprising to see the totals of the New York bank expand rapidly from this time on, even though the course of speculation seems to be checked for the present.

Reserve increase	$ 3,750,775
Loans increase	10,607,900
Specie increase	8,105,700
Legal tenders increase	307,300
Deposits increase	18,648,900
Circulation increase	19,000

The banks now hold $23,412,325 in excess of the legal requirements of 25 per cent rule.

Paine, Murphy & Co.'s Stock Letter.

Atlanta, October 22.—Early cables were more warlike from abroad and London prices for Americans were ½ per cent lower, but the New York market cut loose from foreign influences and the general buying was of a character to indicate that elections were being discounted by shrewd investors. Railway earnings continue large, and the advanced prices in cereals are arguments that offset all foreign complications. Europe at present is not an extensive holder of American securities, and as the credit is so great in our favor the throwing over of securities will not affect financiers here. Going back to the half days market, the best prices of the week were recorded in all railway shares and in the trusts. Tobacco led the van with a net gain of over $6 a share from yesterday. We called especial attention to the inside buying of this stock Thursday. Sugar was strong on the shorts covering and advanced 2¼ per cent on the day. The minor trusts were in full sympathy. We reiterate our views of yesterday, and advise buying the market on any semblance of weakness.

Paine, Murphy & Co.'s Grain Letter.

Atlanta, October 22.—Yesterday's weakness, caused by the more peaceful outlook abroad and large receipts was not in evidence today. Liverpool and London, both sent cables 1½d higher, with orders to purchase American wheat. The world's wheat shipments indicate 7,000,000 bushels. Bradstreet's makes total export clearances for the week 4,582,773, against 5,552,171 last year, while the increase in corn export is over 1,000,000 bushels. Cash prices in western markets advanced 1c. The opening here was at privilege prices 1c above last night's closing, and although realizing and selling against calls followed, the market continued strong, closing at near the extreme top prices with the buying of December better.

Corn sympathized, and we look for higher prices for both cereals.

Curb—December wheat 68 to 68¾.

Calls—December wheat 70¼ to 71. Puts 67, 66¾.

New York, October 22.—By Associated Press: The cotton market opened steady with prices 1@2 points higher, but exhibited very little animation early in the session with scarcely a point fluctuation in quotations. The feature in news was the statement that killing frosts had occurred in nearly every state in the cotton belt with the temperature at 8 o'clock this morning only a few degrees over freezing point. As this condition has been quite generally discounted, sentiment was affected very little by the bullish change. Receipts continued to be the gauge used by the trade in sizing up the crop. The chief support of the future markets here and abroad is still the demand for spot cotton at all points. Today's Liverpool cables had no direct bearing on the market. Later in the afternoon the market improved materially on a burst of covering by those shorts fearing possible sensational developments in the cotton belt abroad over Sunday. During the last few minutes the feeling was mixed, with the close barely steady at unchanged prices to 1 point higher. Estimated receipts at the port, today, 58,000 bales against 54,433 last week and 56,596 last year. This week, 425,000 ago and 421,873 last week and 369,040 last year. Today's receipts at Memphis, 3,900 against 5,221 last year, and at Houston, 22,009 against 13,853 last year.

The Dry Goods Market.

New York, October 22.—The dry goods market has developed little of interest outside of the print cloth market during the week. The demand in general lines has been much restricted, buyers being present in the city in small numbers and mail orders being of only fair size and frequency. The cotton goods market shows a stronger front in selling than was the case a week ago, due undoubtedly to the gain in print cloths during the week. The demand for export goods has shown a gradual improvement during the week. The signing of the print cloth agreement has not resulted in any rises as yet. There is more interest manifested in the market by buyers, but they are inclined to delay buying until they find out how the trust system of selling is to be operated.

Hubbard Bros. & Co.'s Cotton Letter.

New York, October 22.—Frost dispatches covered quite an area today, extending as far south as Houston. The effect upon the market at first was inconsiderable, but finally brought about an advance. Telegrams from New Orleans report a raising of the quarantine in Mississippi and predict an increased movement in consequence. Speculation does not get into the market to any extent. On dispatches that the Pashola incident might lead to political trouble abroad the market declined just before the close.

Southern Exchange Cotton Letter.

Atlanta, October 22.—The only feature in Liverpool is the large spot sales and good reports from Manchester regarding orders. This is having partial effect in keeping the market from declining to prices that in accordance with the large movement which, if continued, will indicate a twelve-million crop. Our private advices, together with public telegrams and the weather bureau, show that frosts have been numerous throughout the belt, but it is claimed that they have so far been rather beneficial, opening the bolls and destroying dead matter. However, the reports have the effect of considerable covering by local shorts, but realizing again carried prices down to those of yesterday, closing weak. The Chronicle weather report as a whole is encouraging. Unless great frosts over Sunday we look for some lower prices.

Estimated port receipts, 58,000 against 66,590 last year.

Estimated Monday for New Orleans, 10,000 to 12,000 against 14,677.

Houston, 16,900 to 17,000 against 13,006 last year.

Paine, Murphy & Co.'s Cotton Letter.

Atlanta, Ga., October 22.—There was no change in Liverpool cables, but the New York market showed early strength on frost news, Mississippi claiming killing frost last night. This had the effect of considerable covering, especially by the scalpers who feared further damage over Sunday. After advancing 5 points the covering seemed over and prices again sagged off to the lowest of the day. Port receipts were about same as last year, but the average in sight to date is above last year, despite the fact that the crop is considered late.

LOCAL BONDS AND STOCKS.

Local Review.

In the south the business situation has not changed materially during the week except with reference to yellow fever. Frost has appeared in the affected districts, and the cooler weather prevailing today brings assurance that all danger from that source will be eliminated very shortly. It is a fact recognized by all who live in the south that danger from the fever is greatly magnified, and that typhoid and other fevers are more malignant and fatal, but our friends in the other sections of the country, all of them being subject to other types of fever, have been impressed that nothing is so disastrous as yellow fever, and we will not believe otherwise.

The weather is again unfavorable to cotton picking, and the yield will be still further affected to a small extent.

The money market in the centers has advanced further toward a permanent condition of ease during the week, call loans on acceptable security ranging around 2½ per cent with time loans at 3½ to 5 per cent, according to the length of time to run and security offered.

Speculative minds have been engaged mainly in the erratic movements of American Tobacco and American Sugar Refining shares. Both of these have developed weakness after an unprecedented advance, and the opinion that neither have touched bottom yet prevails. Other speculatives have not been so active, but the industrial list has sympathised more or less with the two leaders.

Local financial matters are entirely satisfactory, bank deposits increasing steadily and loans being reduced. The winter promises to be one of great ease in money.

Securities of the higher class simply cannot be found to supply the demand.

State and city bonds continue the favorites and command better prices than for several years past.

Railroad securities, which have an established reputation, are also popular, but the supply is so limited that trade in them is almost at a standstill. This state of affairs will soon create a demand for other investments of a purely local character which have heretofore been difficult of sale.

The Post's Financial Cable.

New York, October 22.—The Evening Post's London financial cablegram says: The stock markets here opened dull today, then rallied slightly, but finally closed flat on the political situation. Business here, so far as the public is concerned, is quite at a standstill, and is likely to remain so ideal situation. The professionals are also until some definite turn comes in the political nervous, and are contracting speculation to the narrowest limits.

The London market discount rate is 3 7-8 per cent, and very firm on the Bank of England control of the market. I learn, however, that New York is maintaining advances to this market for about three months.

DECIDEDLY STRONG

Liverpool Set the Pace for the Opening on This Side.

SENT SENSATIONAL ADVANCE

Corn and Oats Were Strong, Each Gaining a Large Fraction—Provisions Slightly Lower.

Chicago, October 22.—A rather sensational advance at Liverpool today in the face of the weakest here yesterday and an excellent decline for cash grain from Europe advanced wheat sharply. December closed 1@1¼c higher. Corn gained ⅜@½c. Oats rose ½c. Pork lost 5c, lard 2½c and ribs 5c.

An advance of 1⅝@2d in the price of wheat at Liverpool and no noteworthy decline in consols made a decidedly strong and higher market for wheat here at the opening. Sales for December were 100½c higher at 67¾@68c and there was a further gain of ¼c shortly afterwards. Accompanying the early news from abroad was a New York report of large additional sales for export and further purchases of December futures by the exporters. There were reports of flour to Italy, the only one on record, and that also houses with Australian connections were making inquiries for flour. St. Louis meanwhile advised that the bids from abroad on wheat were 3c per bushel higher than at the close last night and Minneapolis reported the market quick on hand sales for cash grain sufficient for only a limited period of grinding. Northwest receipts were 982 cars, which was considerably lighter than last week as the result of the recent rough weather. Chicago received 158 car loads, against 139 last year. The primary receipts all told showed a liberal aliquot of wheat received being 1,540,000 bushels as cofpared with 1,061,000 bushels a year ago. The exports for the day from the leading Atlantic ports were equal to 752,000 bushels of wheat. Under these conditions shorts were forced to cover and the fluctuations of December, the other position of the day, were from 67¾@68¾c. There was a liberal volume of business done in pit and 220,000 bushels of No. 1 northern wheat was reported disposed of for export. Near the end the war scare lost some of its influence when it was found that continental markets were all lower and British consols higher and the price of December was forced to 67¾@67⅞c, which was the closing figure.

A good export demand with renewed speculative buying incited by the wheat strength and the foreign situation caused a strong feeling in corn. Receipts were 468 cars. December opened ½c higher at 32@32½c, weakened to 31¾c, then advanced sharply to 33⅜@32½c, caused by an attempt of the shorts to even up all trades for the week. There was considerable taking of profits by longs during the closing hour, and the price was forced off to 32c at the close.

The improvement in wheat and corn caused a general increase of speculation in oats and a substantial advance in prices resulted. There was a good cash demand and 1,000,000 bushels were taken here for shipment. Traders that sold yesterday bought heavily today and the market closed strong at a shade under the high prices. Receipts were 251 cars. December opened at 24¼@24⅝c, rose to 24⅝c and closed at 24½c.

Traders in provisions were bearish on account of the amazing receipts of hogs everywhere and a sharp decline in prices for the same. There was only a slight concession in the general list, however, and the strength in grain checked any concerted selling. January pork opened a shade lower at $9.20, improved to $9.12½, declined to $9.15 and firmed up to $9.17½ sellers at the close. The range in lard and ribs was narrow.

Estimated receipts Monday: Wheat 195 cars corn 410, oats 220, hogs 45,000 head.

WITH THE CHURCHES AND CITY PASTORS

ITEMS OF INTEREST IN RELIGIOUS FIELDS AND MISSIONARY CIRCLES

Interesting Services Announced Today by Pastors---Sunday School Superintendents Extend a Cordial Invitation.

Since the effort to modify the existing divorce canon has failed to meet with the sanction of the triennial convention of the Protestant Episcopal church of the United States, the matter must remain settled for the next three years at least; but such is the vigor and determination with which the champions of the proposed reform have sought to carry their point that they will likely succeed sooner or later. In the recent fight they were defeated only by the most trivial majority and when the time rolls around for the next triennial convention they will probably be strong enough to win without much exertion. For the benefit of our readers who have not kept up with the progress of the movement to modify the existing canon we will state that the existing canon which abhors the granting of divorces except for infidelity permits the innocent party in such divorce suits to contract marriage for the second time with the approval of the church; but the amendment offered sought to prohibit the subsequent marriage of either party prior to the death of the other. Prolonged discussion followed the introduction of the matter into the proceedings of the convention, but it was decided not to interfere with the existing canon for the present. Bishop Potter, of New York, was the leader of the opposition. He took the position that the existing canon was much better than the substitute offered and argued that while it did not reflect the most favorable conditions in the church, it was productive of less evil than could be reasonably expected of the substitute.

"The controversy is really between the party of sacerdotalism and the Protestant party of evangelicalism, re-enforced by the 'broad church' or liberal element, and in essence it is the same as that which is arousing so intense a feeling in the Church of England. The sacerdotal party demands that marriage shall be made indissoluble for any cause, on the ground taken by the Roman Catholic church that marriage is a sacrament. Its representatives in the house of bishops at Washington have used various arguments against divorce as socially injurious, but their real and serious opposition is due to that belief in them and to their determination to enforce it in their church. One of these subsidiary arguments, as presented by one of the party, is very striking. It is that no man ever marries a divorced woman without suffering great anguish of spirit eventually, because of the thought that she has been in conjugal relations with a man still living, the certainty of that fact being more unbearable than even the suspicion of infidelity. Apparently, this clergyman spoke from knowledge acquired by him professionally; but if there are such feelings in the breasts of husbands of divorced women they are kept secret, and fear of them does not deter men in circles of social cultivation or of fashion from taking such women as wives; nor does it appear that they are unpleasant to the imagination of that society. The purpose of this clergyman and of all others who bring up such sentimental objections to divorce, however, is simply to create a feeling in the church which would help along the sacerdotal party by introducing into the canonical law a prohibition involving the recognition of the sacramental character of matrimony. Bishop Potter and his school, representing the more liberal element of the church, brought up an objection to such a radical change, which is likely to command approval in the social circles to which we have referred. It is that if the church should now decree the absolute indissolubility of marriage and make complete divorce a violation of the Christian law, it would cast the stigma of adultery on many existing marriages of divorced Episcopalians. Such marriages, however, have occurred not infrequently where even the present canon has been violated. Men and women who have obtained divorces for other causes than adultery, as allowed by the civil law of most of the states, have entered into new marriages without provoking social disapproval or, so far as we have heard, ecclesiastical condemnation. They go on their way, with their social position unaffected, and they move in society frequented by bishops and other clergy of the Episcopal church. Bishop Potter is reported to have argued that, if his church should pursue the restrictive policy urged by the sacerdotalists, it would run counter to social sentiment, and invite injurious consequences by driving away from it many who are now in its fold or under its influence; but the present restriction of marriage to the innocent party to a divorce for adultery does not seem to have that consequence, in the case of those who violate it by marrying again after getting unopposed divorces for fictitious abandonment, cruelty, or what not. Sometimes both parties to such a divorce marry new mates and all continue to be found in the same social circle, the new wives and new husbands rubbing elbows with the old wives and old husbands. If that is possible under the comparatively liberal canon as it is, would not this tolerated rebellion of inclination against the ecclesiastical law be even more frequent if nobody could get married by the church after having been divorced for any cause whatever?"

While the attitude of the Protestant Episcopal church of the United States toward the granting of divorces is one of pronounced opposition, except in cases of infidelity, the bishops of that church nevertheless recognize the importance to society of uniform divorce laws. They take the position if divorces are granted in the United States the laws regulating them ought to be uniform in character. We quote below some few expressions:

Bishop Potter, of New York: "I am distinctly and positively in favor of a uniform divorce law. It would prevent the possibility of evading the law in some respect or other by persons fradulently seeking divorces. It would tend to make marriage a more permanent institution. Such legislation would be for all classes alike and uniformity alone would be desirable."

Bishop Coleman, of Delaware: "On general principles I am an advocate of a uniform law. It is not only necessary, but imperatively demanded. I am unalterably opposed to divorce upon any ground, but, if it is to exist, then it should be under uniform legislation, so as to prevent fraud and collusion."

Bishop Coadjutor Gilbert, of Minnesota: "The divorce evil can be corrected only by uniform laws. There is so much contradiction between the statutes of the states that opportunity for all kinds of frauds is offered. Divorces in certain states are not recognized in some others, and so on, the result being uncertainty that is evil and destructive."

Bishop Kinsolving, of Texas: "One reason why I believe in a uniform law is because of the divorce statutes in the various states. In my state, for instance, it is almost impossible for a woman to get a divorce on the ground of adultery—the only cause recognized as sufficient by my church. A good national law would win my support."

$1,500,000 FOR METHODISM.

The general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, at its last regular session decided to undertake the task of raising $1,500,000 for the purpose of stimulating the educational work of the church. Plans have already been outlined by means of which it is hoped to realize this handsome sum within the year. Bishop Charles B. Galloway has been designated as the organizer of the campaign and the general board of education has been charged with the details of the work under Bishop Galloway's supervision. There are 1,500,000 members of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, and each member is expected to contribute the average sum of $1. Work will begin in January, 1899, and by the end of the year it is hoped that the sum desired will be in hand. Dr. John D. Hammond, secretary of the general board of education, thus emphasizes the importance of the proposed educational fund:

"Our educational institutions, which are our acknowledged centers for training workers and for building character, have been so long neglected that in looking over our resources for the beginning of the twentieth century campaign, we find ourselves better equipped for all evangelistic and eclemosynary work than we are for the educational; and it is, therefore, necessary to bring this up until it shall be equal in effectiveness to the others.

"The concentration of the whole church on this great work will be of benefit in bringing inharmonious masses into close touch and discipline; and, by practicing them, in the necessary and much neglected art of co-operation. One of our sources of weakness is the habitual lack of power that comes from the aggregation of isolated masses of force into one harmonious movement. Any amount of labor and forethought that will secure this end for our church at this time will be worth whatever it may cost.

"The immediate gain will be found in advancing our educational work throughout every part of our territory at the same time. While this advance may not be very great at any given point, the fact that the whole church has moved up together in its educational effectiveness by the amount of a million and a half dollars, will add to its general power more than can be estimated. As, in the process of nature, the growth of a tree for a single year may not be noticeable; it having been distributed amongst the roots, the bark, the woody fiber, the stem, limbs and leaves; yet when the tree comes to perform its true function of fruit bearing there will be a marked increase in the quautity and quality of its products, so in the general strengthening of the body of the church throughout every part of its territory, there will be found to result a greatly increased power to produce its proper fruit in the conversion and building up of men, and in bringing in the final triumphs of the cross."

THE PRESBYTERY OF ATLANTA.

At the recent session of the presbytery of Atlanta held at Bethany church, in Newton county, Rev. Julian S. Sibley, of Atlanta, was chosen moderator. Permission to preach the gospel was given to Candidates T. C. Cleveland, H. C. Hammond and S. W. DuBose. Commissioners were appointed to install and ordain Rev. J. W. Stokes as pastor of the Austell and Tallapoosa churches. The death of Dr. E. H. Barnett was brought to the attention of the presbytery and a committee was appointed to draft a suitable memorial of the deceased pastor. Several interesting papers were read and several interesting topics were discussed.

Bethany church, where the presbytery was held, is the home church of Congressman L. F. Livingston. He is an active elder in the church, and was present as the representative of the church. What added to the interest of the occasion was the presence of his aged father, Mr. Alfred Livingston, also an elder, and a man of prominence and remarkable vigor, considering his advanced age. Though in a few days of ninety-five years of age, and living three miles distant, he was present at both morning and night services. He still attends the Sabbath school as its nominal superintendent. It was especially to honor to him that this church was selected as the place of meeting, and at the close of one of the services the presbytery was formally introduced and presented to him. Bethany is one of the live churches of the presbytery; its pastor is Rev. T. B. Trenholm. The people seemed greatly to appreciate the presence of the presbytery; they largely attended the services, and at the close did the unheard-of thing to appoint a committee to draft some resolutions expressive of their gratification and pleasure in having the presbytery to meet with them.

The presbytery will hold its next regular session at Decatur in January next.

WRITINGS FOUND AT THE BABEL TOWER

Professor Hilprecht writes to The Sunday School Times that about seventy clay tablets have been recently discovered by Arabs in the ruins of Birs Nimrud, the ancient Borsippa and sister city of Babylon, on the western side of the Euphrates, generally but erroneously regarded as representing the site of the Biblical tower of Babel. These are the first literary documents obtained from this high tower mound, from which Sir Henry Rawlinson many years ago rescued Nebuchadnezzar's inscribed barrel cylinder. The tablets are on their way to Constantinople, where, immediately after their arrival, they will be examined by Professor Hilprecht, acting as curator of the Babylonian section of the imperial Ottoman museum.

Brownville Female college has had the finest opening this year it has had for years. Our two Kentucky teachers, Miss Hutchison and Miss Bent, are winning golden opinions by their efficient work.

Inspired by a desire to honor the memory of her father, who was one of the Bonanza kings of the Golden State, Miss Cora Jane Flood has devoted her property, worth $3,000,000, to the cause of education. Included in the gift to the University of California are her palatial home and grounds at Menlo Park.

TEXAS BAPTIST CONVENTION.

One of the largest gatherings of Baptists ever known was called to order in Waco, Tex., last week when the Texas Baptist convention met in that city. There were 2,500 visitors and delegates present. Says The Baptist Argus, speaking of the growth of the Baptist church in Texas:

"The state board raised and expended during the year $27,033.38. The educational board raised $47,000 in the interest of Baptist schools. Rev. George W. Truett, of Dallas, presented the cause of ministerial education; and $2,307 was given to help young men prepare for the ministry. Professor E. C. Dargan raised for the support of the students in the seminary $1,000. Mrs. W. L. Williams, of Dallas, was elected president of the Women Mission Workers, and Mrs. F. G. Davis, also of Dallas, recording secretary. Mrs. J. T. Walne, of Lancaster, Tex., was elected treasurer.

"It is no easy matter to entertain such a host, but these words from J. M. Robertson, vice president of the convention, show how well Waco did the work: 'I am informed that homes have been furnished to all of the 3,000 messengers to the convention, and that more than 100 homes are indignant because they had no guests. The chairman of the committee on entertainment informs us that when the train loads of messengers began to come in, your people began to realize what the assembling of the Baptist general convention of Texas means, they, within twenty-four hours, voluntarily sent to his office tenders of homes for at least 600 messengers. There is not a city in the south of your size that can show such a record.'

"Nearly $2,000 was raised for the Texas Baptist Orphans' home. President Buckner said that it took $55 a day to buy the food for the orphans.

"Altogether the convention was a highly satisfactory one. R. C. Buckner, president of the convention, said: 'This has been the greatest assembly of Baptists ever gathered in the world, and I feel highly gratified over its work and the decorous manner in which it has been done. It is the most satisfactory session over which I have presided, and I feel rejoiced to say that the results achieved have done more to promote harmony and a feeling of brotherly love than anything that has occurred in years.'

THE ASSOCIATIONS ARE UNIVERSITIES BY GASLIGHT

From The Cumberland Presbyterian.

The educational department of the Young Men's Christian Association finds its ample apology for existing in the fact that millions of young men in our country have never had, and will never have, through ordinary means, adequate advantages to secure either a liberal or technical education. The object of this department is twofold—specifically, to make possible to working men a practical education; and, in a general way to do what every other department of the association does, lead men into a personal knowledge of Christ. That the work along these two lines has been most intelligently planned, and that gratifying results have followed, is clearly shown in Secretary George B. Hodge's report for 1897-98.

That the association has large opportunities for work one is persuaded when he finds that 95 per cent of all the young men in the United States never enter the high schools, much less graduate from them; and a very small fraction of the 5 per cent entering high schools ever pass on to college. Out of every 100 graduates of the grammar schools only eight succeeded in getting enough education to enter the professions or become experts in any science or trade; and the remaining 92 per cent must work with their hands, doing obediently what other men's heads direct.

Large numbers of such young men are most deserving and are ambitious; but the work of the ordinary school or college is hopelessly beyond their reach. Their only hope for an education is through schools conducted in the evenings. The International committee of the Young Men's Christian Association is making a heroic and well-directed effort to extend to this army of young men definite, practical, helpful facilities through the evening industrial schools in the local associations.

There were last year nearly 26,600 young men attending the evening classes which were conducted at 350 associations. The courses presented in all associations are uniform, having been prepared at the office of the international committee, under the direction of some of the most eminent educators in the land.

The courses offered as follows: Arithmetic, bookkeeping, business and commercial law, civil and municipal government, American politics, the Canadian constitution, free-hand drawing, architectural drawing leading to construction, mechanical drawing, carpentry, applied mechanics, electricity, hygiene, chemistry, physics, English, etc.

At the completion of courses examination blanks are furnished students which when filled are sent to an international examining committee who pass upon them according to merit. Such favorable attention is being created for this movement that the faculties of sixty leading colleges and universities of the United States have extended recognition to the certificates of scholarship given by this board of examiners.

The interest in Bible study is quickened by the introduction of the educational feature in local associations. In the Twenty-third street section, New York, there is conducted a course in Bible literature and ethics. Toronto has a class of eight in New Testament Greek. Oakland, Cal., has a class of twenty-eight in Bible study; Indianapolis, one of fourteen in fundamental Bible work; Dayton, O., a class of twenty-eight in the English Bible, and Brooklyn a class in the literary study of the Bible. In Chicago such Bible classes are attended by 102 students. Scores of other cities have similar work.

Every city and almost every town in the United States can easily maintain a Young Men's Christian Association and every association should have a well-equipped educational department.

COUNTESS SCHIMMELMAN.

In Her Royal Yacht She Sails American Waters in Search of Souls.

A COUNTESS WHO IS SEARCHING FOR LOST SOULS.

(Written from Notes Sent by the Countess Schimmelmann.)

On the very day that war was declared between the United States and Spain there set out from the other side a little craft bearing a message of peace, and captained by a titled lady of Europe who is one of the most picturesque and interesting figures in this country today. All unnoticed during the excitement attending the firing of great guns and the sinking of warships, the little vessel pursued its course across the Atlantic and arrived, strange to say, about the very time that the strife between the two nations had ended.

The little vessel was the mission ship Duen, and her captain was Adeline, Countess Schimmelmann, daughter of one of the proudest peers of Denmark, and favorite of the empress of Germany, grandmother of the present Emperor William II.

Before speaking of this interesting woman it will be well to describe her pretty boat. On the day that the countess, coincident with the declaration of war, set sail for this country, she hoisted the stars and stripes on a yacht eighty feet long, eighteen feet broad, and drawing eight feet of water. The yacht was a stanch little boat, built of oak, schooner-rigged, fast sailing, but no racer. She had formerly belonged to the youngest brother of the princess of Wales, Prince Waldemar, of Denmark, who gladly exchanged the strong but slow craft for a racing cutter.

On this little eighty-foot boat, with Old Glory flapping in the breeze at the masthead, the Countess Schimmelmann, accompanied by a picked crew and a staff of servants, set sail for America. Contrary winds delayed the voyage, and it took many weeks to make the trip from Falmouth to Quebec.

And for what reason did this titled woman of Denmark come sailing over the seas in her little eighty-foot boat? On no diplomatic mission came the countess; she carried no message from royal court to the people of the warring western world, no errand fraught with significance to international peace was behind the unheralded arrival at Quebec. The countess came to preach the gospel to American sailors. To American sinners, her grace would probably say, but primarily her efforts are directed toward the conversion of the seafaring man.

Since her arrival in this country the countess has been sailing the lakes and passing up and down the canals, holding meetings on her boats, in halls where possible, sleeping aboard the little craft with her staff of women helpers and servants. Today she may be in Buffalo; next week her handsome little craft will be moored alongside the dock of a lake-side town; anon she will be at Chicago inviting seamen of all nationalities to come and hear the gospel preached in their native tongue, for the countess is an accomplished linguist, and can adapt her exhortation to the understanding of six different nationalities. Is it not a queer change from the court of Denmark to the lake towns of America, with her home the cabin of a yacht? Queer or not, the countess is enamored of the life and says she would not change places with the wealthiest resident of the most select quarter of the finest town in the world.

On her little boat, which she calls "My Movable Home," Countess Schimmelmann says: "Thanks to an English friend, the cabins have been made as comfortable as possible for me, and give me the opportunity of staying on board even in winter when mild. This is a great advantage in saving my strength, being able, after my work, to retire to my own little nook, instead of staying in noisy hotels, or of visiting constantly from place to place. The cabins also afford a home for workers helping me, as well as to the lads staying on board; so that the work is not interrupted whenever we sail. We can also carry with us our stores of books and tracts in ten different languages for distribution or for sale."

And of her work! "Going from harbor to harbor we naturally come in contact with many ships of all nations and being able to speak six different languages, the sailors gather readily around me, attracted by their own language in a foreign country, and so we have improvised gospel meetings with great blessing. It is most touching often to see the sailors sitting on the railings, coils of rope, or tubs, and listening with all their souls. But as my time is limited, most of the ships are not visited by myself, but by those of my young sailors who are truly converted.

"A socialistic editor wrote: 'Nobody and nothing in Denmark except our 1st of May meetings are able to gather such crowds as the meetings held by Countess Schimmelmann. Yesterday the largest hall in the town filled to overflowing, and perhaps as many as were inside were waiting patiently outside, blocking the streets until they saw her going to her yacht.' This is evidence enough that it is not I for whom they wait, nor I keeping them spellbound. Our undemonstrative people in Jutland would not be moved to this, neither for royalty nor for the popular heroes of the day."

It is a difficult matter to get the countess to speak of herself, although of her work she will discourse by the hour at almost any one's invitation. She has, however, consented to give the following details of her life:

When the countess first came to the court of the king of Denmark she was eighteen years of age. Up to the age of thirty she saw little of the world but the purple and fine linen of the royal circle. The poverty of the outside world was a sealed book to the court favorite. Shortly after the death of her father the countess was asked by the empress of Germany to take part in her work of visiting the prisons of the kaiser's realm. She entered eagerly into the work and for the first time had her eyes opened to the wretched side of life. Her grace was so touched by what she saw in the jails of Germany that she soon left her father's castle and gave herself up wholly to missionary work among the Baltic fishermen.

At the points where the fishing fleets had to pass she established two shelters in the Baltic sea, where every fisherman could, at any time, day or night, get as many mugs of warm coffee as he pleased without pay, and if he wished a free dinner. Then the countess started a little cutter that sails with the fishing fleet and has on hand at all hours a supply of steaming coffee. About thirty villages on the Pomeranian coast have been transformed to better moral conditions through this work, and some poverty-stricken towns have become prosperous places.

From the fishermen the countess extended her work to the sailors, starting an international sailors' mission. Before coming to this country the countess was well known to the crew of the American gunboat Gresham, having held meetings on the American men-of-war when they passed Copenhagen for the opening of the Kaiser-Wilhelm canal.

Early next spring the countess hopes to visit the northern shores of Lake Superior in search of reliable information about the advantages for intended settlers in north Canada, because she thinks it an excellent thing for the overcrowded parts of north Germany to send good farmers over. They want work and the world wants bread, and why shouldn't they sow and reap the corn where it grows so abundantly? After that she hopes to take her yacht through the Erie canal to New York.

In appearance the countess is a sweet and winsome woman, gentle and attractive in her work, and possessed with but one thought—how best to further her chosen mission.

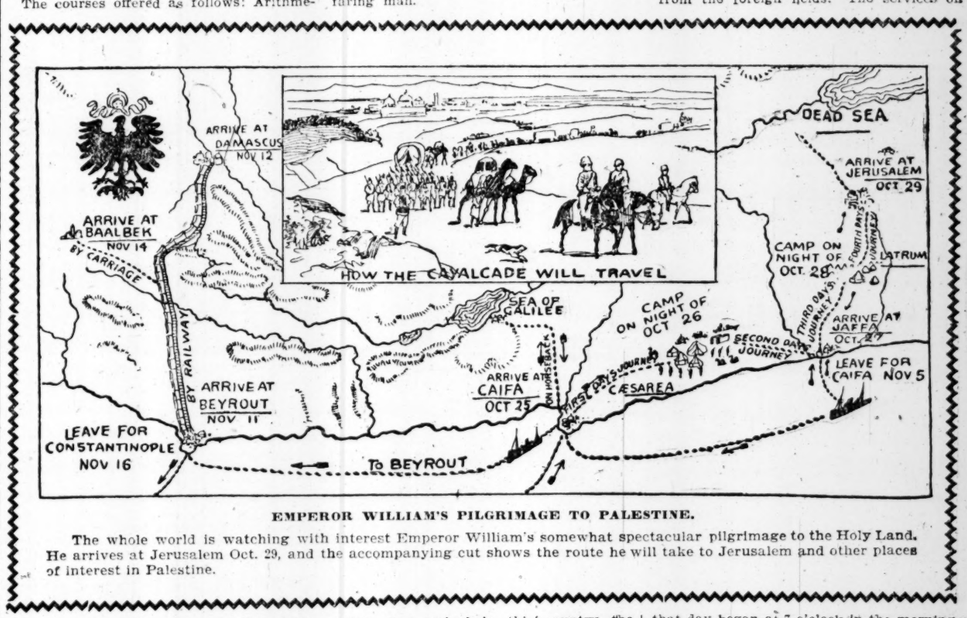

$113,000 GIVEN FOR MISSIONS IN ONE DAY

All the great New York dailies tell in lengthy columns with large double headings of the wonderful contribution to missions made last Sunday by the people attending the regular October convention of the Christian and Missionary Alliance at the Gospel tabernacle, corner Forty-fourth St. and Eighth avenue, New York. The convention had been in session for ten days. Sunday, October 16th, was the closing day.

The morning services were held at the Gospel tabernacle, and in the afternoon and evening at Carnegie hall. People in all parts of the world had been praying for weeks for that meeting. Alliance people were there from different parts of the United States and Canada, as well as from Europe, and many returned missionaries from the foreign fields. The services on that day began at 7 o'clock in the morning and lasted until 2 o'clock in the tabernacle. The first was a praise service, led by Rev. Dr. Henry Wilson, of the Protestant Episcopal church. Though the hour was early the crowd was large, and the services inspiring. At 10 o'clock, the regular preaching service, Rev. Dr. A. B. Simpson, the leader of the Alliance, preached to a packed audience of 3,000 people, from Ephesians v, 16: "Redeeming the time because the days are evil."

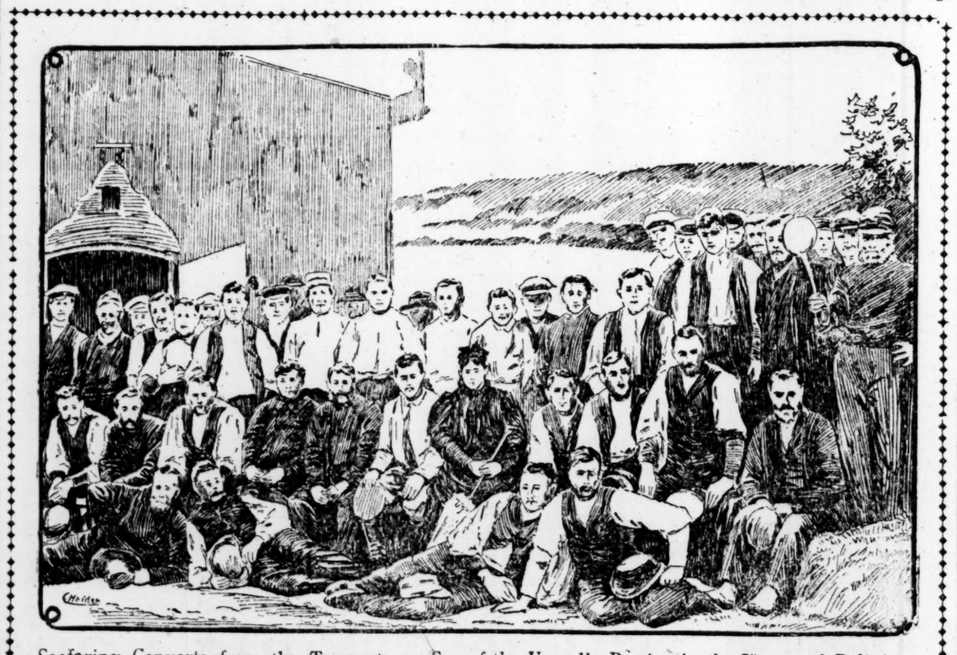

He made no attempt at pulpit oratory, but towards the close of his remarks he grew eloquent, and was forceful throughout. During his closing exhortation an aged lady dressed in faded black walked down the aisle to the platform and handed him a paper. He read it, and said: "We might as well stop right here. Here is an offering by a poor woman who made it by washing. This is a sacrifice offering, brethren. It is $20." Then a praise song was sung, the congregation joining in. Then printed cards were handed through the audience to be filled out by individuals with amounts for the support of missions, as the Lord shall enable them to give during the year. And then baskets were handed around to receive the cards and cash given. The baskets were filled and emptied over and over again many times, the service lasting until 2 o'clock. The missionaries present were asked to stand up, which they did. The gifts ranged from $1 up to $10,000, the latter being the amount of one gift. There were many of $500 and $1,000. One man arose and said he had nothing but an oil painting worth $200 and he gave that. Many gave gold watches and costly jewelry. At the close of that service it was found the contributions amounted to between $56,000 and $57,000.

Many of the people had their lunches with them and remained in the tabernacle to eat them before the next service. At the two later services enough more was contributed to raise the total for the day to $113,000, which surpasses any day's giving to missions in the history of such things. Ninety per cent of these pledges are paid

EMPEROR WILLIAM'S PILGRIMAGE TO PALESTINE.

The whole world is watching with interest Emperor William's somewhat spectacular pilgrimage to the Holy Land. He arrives at Jerusalem Oct. 29, and the accompanying cut shows the route he will take to Jerusalem and other places of interest in Palestine.

every year. In the morning, just before the sermon, while they were praying, a slip of paper was handed Dr. Simpson, upon which was written, "Pray quick, for a soul in sinking." This was read out during prayer and produced a profound sensation.

The Christian and Missionary Alliance was organized about fifteen years ago in New York by Dr. Simpson and other earnest Christian workers of all denominations. Now it has 330 missions in China, Japan, India, Palestine, Africa and South America. These cost about $300 each to maintain. They are now preparing to send a number of missionaries into Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Dr. Simpson is strongly in favor of the United States holding the Philippines. Dr. Le Dacheur, superintendent of missions in China, and who last fall led the advance of the first missionaries to enter Thibet, and has established permanent missions in that hitherto forbidding country, lately visited President McKinley and the secretary of state at Washington, and urged that the interests and safety of missions and missionaries be fully provided for in the peace negotiations with Spain and in the settlement of the Chinese question in the east. He was promised by the president that it should receive due attention.

There is a branch of the Christian and Missionary Alliance in Atlanta. It meets every Wednesday at 3 p. m. at 72½ North Broad street. In 1897, at a convention here, this branch gave over $4,000 to foreign missions, and this year over $700 were given. The meetings are public and are well attended, the Holy Spirit's power being always felt at these meetings.

God is moving the people to take advantage of the result of the late war with Spain, and later of the situation in China, and still later of the English victories in the Soudan, to spread the gospel and Kingdom of Jesus Christ in the world.

ULYSSES LEWIS.

ITEMS OF INTEREST FROM FOREIGN FIELDS

The dedication services at the new buildings of Union seminary are in process when we go to press. Dr. Cuyler, of Brooklyn, arrived in Richmond last evening, and many guests and friends of the seminary are in the city. A full report of the exercises will be given our readers next week. Dr. Cuyler urges, and with much force, that our seminary would be wise to drop the name Union, as leading to unnecessary and harmful confusion with the seminary of that name in the city of New York. He suggests that we speak of it as Richmond seminary, as we have Louisville and Columbia seminaries, and as we also have Princeton, Alleghany and Chicago, the name giving the locality at once.—Central Presbyterian.

At a recent congregational meeting of the First Presbyterian church of Trenton, N. J., Rev. Dr. John Dixon, the pastor, who is one of the trustees of Princeton university, and of the Lawrenceville school, asked for the dissolution of the pastoral relation in order that he might accept the assistant secretaryship of the Presbyterian board of home missions, to which he was recently elected. His pastorate of the church has extended over fourteen years.

The net gain to the Northern Presbyterian church membership last year was 14,986. Over one-third of this was made in Pennsylvania. New York records a net loss of 1,370. Michigan is smaller than last year by 192, and Indian Territory by forty-six. All the other synods show a gain. In many instances it is very small, but it is an advance.

Rev. William J. McCaughan, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, of Toronto, Canada, has received a call to the pastorate of the Third Presbyterian church of Chicago.

The Hanson Place church, Brooklyn, Rev. Dr. A. C. Dixon, pastor, is preparing greatly to enlarge and extend the scope of its work during the coming year. Last month it was voted to turn the house of worship over to Pastor Dixon to hold it open every day in the year for some kind of religious work. It was also voted to raise $5,000 to cover the additional expenses of such services. This month Rev. W. E. Needham will give a series of illustrated lectures for children. He will be followed by Rev. L. A. Munhall in a series of Bible lectures. Later Dr. Howard A. Pease, pastor of the church at Geneseo, N. Y., will give three lectures on the "Gospel of Health" Dr. Dixon will give more of his time than usual to his own church, giving only Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursdays evenings to work elsewhere.

The friends of education throughout the denomination will regret to learn that Dr. Nathan E. Wood, of the First church, Boston, on Sunday last, anounced to his church that he should decline the presidency of Newton Theological institution. He cannot see that duty points him to the work of theological training, while he discovers an imperiousness in the voice of his church which he cannot disregard. The man who has such exalted opinion of the power and dignity of the pastorate is just the sort needed to train our theological students, and Dr. Wood's declination cannot but emphasize his fitness for the position to which he had been chosen.—The Standard.

Rev. Dr. Alexander Maclaren, who is spending his holidays in Scotland, has been suffering from rather a severe attack of lumbago. Dr Maclaren has been absent from his pulpit six Sundays, and owing to his illness it is uncertain when he will be home. It is to be hoped he will soon recover and return to his work with renewed strength and vigor.

IN THE CHURCHES AND WITH THE CITY PASTORS

Rev. Frank E. Jenkins, the new pastor of the Congregational church, will speak to men at the Young Men's Christian Association today at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon, taking for his subject "The Transforming Power of Fellowship with Jesus Christ"—John 1:35-42. This will be the first opportunity many young men of the city will have had to hear Mr. Jenkins, and no doubt there will be a crowded house. The Young Men's Christian Association orchestra, which is now one of the best in the city, will add greatly to the interest of the meeting by a short musical programme All men invited.

For two weeks past an interesting protracted meeting has been held at the East Atlanta Baptist church, junction of Auburn avenue and Wheat street. The services closed on Thursday night. Five were received for baptism and two by letter. Some twenty professed conversion. The meetings were well attended every night. Rev. A. W. Bealer preached one sermon, Rev. W. A. Davis two and the pastor the balance. This morning at 11 o'clock he will preach on "Baptism—What It Is and What It Signifies." The Sunday school is increasing in numbers and interest every Sunday.

There will be preaching today at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. at the Central Congregational church by the pastor, Rev. Frank E. Jenkins. The subjects will be "The Three-Fold Baptism" and "The Evolution of Man." The Sunday school lesson, "John the Baptist, the Forerunner of Christ," will be illustrated by a number of stereopticon views.

The pastor of the Universalist mission, Dr. McGlauflin, has just returned from the biennial session of the southern conference of Universalists. Two years ago the session was held in Atlanta; this time it is meeting at Chickamauga, Ga., in a new edifice, where the representatives from seven states are counselling on the important problems of the day. Rev. Q. H. Shinn, D. D., general missionary; Rev. D. B. Clayton, D. D., of South Carolina; Rev. J. C. Burruss, D. D., of Florida; Rev. James Billings, of Texas, are among the more prominent clergymen present. Rev. Lyman Ward, of New York, and Rev. Richard M. Smith, Ph. D., of Alabama, represent the educational interests. The conference began on Thursday last and will end tonight. Dr. McGlauflin will speak to his congregation in this city today at 11 o'clock in the morning on the topic, "What Shall We Do with Our Criminals?"

The services of the Sixth Baptist church will be held at the residence of Mr. Wells, 179 Haynes street. Preaching by the pastor both morning and night. Subject for the morning service, "Politics and Religion as Christ Found Them."

The subject of the sermon at the morning service at Jackson Hill Baptist church by the pastor, Rev. A. A. Marshall, will be, "The Gleaning of the Grapes of Ephraim Better Than the Vintage of Abiezer." At the evening service Mr. Marshall will talk about "The Removal of Mantles and Wimples."

Diseases Without Names.

Free Trial Package of a Remarkable Health Builder Sent Free to All Who Write---They Cure All Those Distressing Ailments That Precede an Attack of Some Definite Disease.

No Matter How Despondent You May be or How Useless Drugs Seem to be Write at Once and Try This Marvelous Remedy That Costs You Nothing.

Any departure from a normal state of health is a condition of disease. There is no definite name for it, but there is a remedy that exerts the most wonderful influence in righting the disorders that constitute ill health. Rheumatism, Sciatica and all blood diseases are invariably preceded by constitutional disturbances of the nervous system. The same is true of catarrh, kidney and bladder trouble, liver complaints and nearly all definite diseases. No one ever died of Bright's disease or heart failure without preliminary suffering. And all conditions of disease give forth certain warnings which may or may not be heeded by the sufferer. As a rule, however, the patient resorts to specifics and loses valuable time. A constitutional remedy such as Dr. Dix Tablets, is required to restore the nervous system to strength and provide the blood with nourishing elements that will keep the flesh and muscles solid and the vitals in good working order. Send to Hayes & Coon, 218 Hull building, Detroit, Mich., and they will mail you free a trial package of Dr. Dix Tonic Tablets.

This remedy is so perfect, so accurately adjusted to the needs of the body and produces such a marvelously rapid improvement in the vital action of the various organs that it has been justly called the most perfect remedy known.

Hayes & Coon will also send out a book setting forth in a very convincing manner just why these remarkable tablets cannot fail to restore you to health. Write today for the free trial package.

THE SAGE OF OXFORD.

Although Seventy-Eight Years Old and Partially Paralyzed, Dr. Henderson Is Restored to Complete Health by Dr. Dix Tonic Tablets.

George W. Yarbrough, one of the leading men of the Methodist church and presiding elder of the district in which Emory college, Oxford, Ga., is located, writes entertainingly of old Dr. Henderson in a recent article in The Wesleyan Christian Advocate. He recalls the olden days to the early fifties when Dr. Henderson discovered the ghost in Professor Smith's pantry. The doctor, in a letter to Hayes & Coon, proprietors of Dr. Dix Tonic Tablets, says:

Oxford, Newton County, Ga., September 6, 1898.—Messrs. Hayes & Coon, Gents: My case was a low type of general nervous prostration. I had an obtruse pain in my left shoulder and arm, and in fact I was semi-paralyzed all over, a hopeless case. I had been confind to my house for six months, had given up all treatment; but seeing your advertisement in The Atlanta Journal, I concluded to try your Dr. Dix Tonic Tablets and Constipation Tablets. I commenced taking them on the 1st day of July last, and they have worked a wonder in my case. I have gained 12 pounds in weight, I can walk to Covington, a distance of two miles, without stopping to rest. My age is 78 last January, but my sudden transit from a low type of despondency and gloom to a high degree of cheerfulness now renders life worth living. I will continue the use of your Tablets yet for a while, believing them to be all that could be said of them. The violin and bow in the picture is of my own make. Although I play on my violin, I am a strict member of the Methodist church. Respectfully,

DR. JAMES O. P. H. HENDERSON.
(The Hero of the Ghost of Oxford.)

JAMES O. H. P. HENDERSON.

NOTE.

The matter below was written by a member of the Century Club who had made a list of over thirty important subjects to which he has had occasion to refer during the past three months, and which he could not find in his four encyclopædias. He found them all in The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia, obtained through our Century Club on its opening day.

A Challenge.

In what other one work, or in what other ten works, will you find the information that is in THE CENTURY DICTIONARY AND CYCLOPEDIA? Take a few matters of general and present interest, such as are here given, and look them up in this work and in others, and see how surprising the result.

Where else will you find instantly information about the things mentioned in the newspapers? What other work than "The Century" will tell you where in Cuba is PINAR DEL RIO, and all other provinces and cities that you see mentioned, and in addition to descriptions of places will supply you with maps which help to locate them in your memory? What other work will tell you about the Spanish Cortes and how it is constituted, or will properly pronounce the many foreign names that you read daily? What other work will tell you about Yap, that island in the Pacific that we will retain, and which the Germans seized in 1880? The Century tells about all of these.

Where else will women find answers to all the questions in which they are interested? What other work will tell them about the different kinds of Lace, Buckingham, Alencon, Antwerp, etc.; about Whooping Cough, Measles, and other diseases; that will tell them when writing a letter what to capitalize and what not, and when to put a period and when a semi-colon?

Where else will you find when and by whom Mr. Blaine was first called "The Plumed Knight?" No other work will tell you, but "The Century" will. It will tell you, too, about all other popular names and nicknames; how Dickens got the name of "Boz," Lincoln of "Rail-Splitter," Jackson of "Old Hickory," and how the term "The Sick Man" came to be applied to Turkey.

Where else will you find answers to the many questions that arise in your daily business; that will tell you about Corporations and Trusts; about Bankruptcy and Laws; about Checks and Notes; about Bulls and Bears; Barrels (the size varies in different States), and Carloads (how much, if flour; how much, if sugar, etc.), and the money, coins and measures of different countries?

Where else will you find answers to the thousand and one questions that arise in the home? There are questions your boy asks you about arithmetic, about grammar, about history, or that your girl wants answered about her music. The Century will answer all those questions. See if any other book will.

Where else can you get an account of the Roentgen or X-Rays, or find an entry of Bike and Quad, and see a picture of the latest form of the Bicycle? Where else will you find the difference between a limited and an express train? You know that the railroads call some trains express and others limited. Look in The Century and find the difference.

A Prize Was Offered But Has Never Been Claimed.

When The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia was completed the announcement was made that it "more than took the place of any other ten works ever published." To prove the truth of this statement, The Century Co., publishers, offered a prize of $500 to the person who answered most successfully 90 per cent of the questions in their prize competition from ten other works of reference without using The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia. This prize has never been claimed.

The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia has over 500,000 definitions, 300,000 quotations, 150,000 encyclopedic articles. It contains 8,000 engravings and 300 maps, the finest ever published. There are a million different articles. From these the publishers selected only one hundred and fifty, each a matter that every one ought to know, and these are sufficient to prove the superiority of The Century over any know, and ten other works combined.

Our Offer.

By an arrangement with The Century Co., Publishers, to form a limited club for the purpose of introducing The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia in its final and completed form in the South, we are enabled to offer a limited number of our readers single sets of the work at the same low price at which they sold in lots of one thousand, THUS PLACING EACH INDIVIDUAL ON A PAR WITH THE LARGEST WHOLESALE BUYER.

MADGE'S VISIT

BY F. KATHLEEN ODUM.

"Isn't it cold?" cried little Madge sitting down and sticking her toes in the fire to warm.

It was a dark, gloomy, winter afternoon. We were all sitting around the fire; some were reading, some were playing and others were silently sewing their dresses. The speaker was the baby, a six-year-old. She had been asleep and had just been awakened.

"Yes, Madge, it is very cool," said Alice, our eldest sister.

"Cool?" cried all. "Why, Alice, it's just freezing! Well, you had better keep your face straight and don't look cross if you don't want it to freeze," was the reply.

"John," said mother, "please read some to us. Something bright and cheerful; it is so gloomy. Your father used to always read to us."

Now our father had been a sailor and once on his way home a storm came. The vessel went down and all on board were drowned. So we have always lived with mother in this little village and all of us went to school except John, for he had finished and was clerking now.

"Well, mamma, as I happen to be reading a funny book, 'Three Men in a Boat,' I'll read you where I am."

I suppose, my readers, that you have read it and will understand it.

After we became quiet John began:

"What does he want to howl like that for when I am playing?" George exclaimed while taking aim at him with a boot. George is one of the men who has never learned to play a banjo. He has had too much all around discouragement to meet. He tried on one or two evenings while we were up the river to get a little practice, but it was never a success.

"What do you want to play like that for when he is howling?" retorted Harris catching the boat.

"You let him alone, he's got a musical ear and your playing makes him howl."

So George determined to postpone the study of the banjo until he reached home. But he couldn't get much opportunity there.

Mrs. P— used to come up and say she was very sorry—for herself she liked to hear him, but the lady upstairs was in a very delicate state and the doctors were afraid it might injure her."

"Good!" exclaimed little Madge.

"Then George tried taking it out with him late at night and practicing around the square. But the inhabitants complained to the police about it and a watch was set for him one night and he was captured. The evidence against him was very clear and he was bound over to keep peace for six months."

"Poor boy," said mother.

"He seemed to lose heart in the business after—"

"Good evening, Mrs. Pitre," said Mr. Hand, coming in. "I have interrupted you so will come again."

"Why, no," said mother, "John was just reading to us; come in and sit awhile."

Mamma and Mr. Hand talked a long time, and at last Madge said: "Mamma, you and Mr. Hand come play with us."

"What are you going to play, Madge?" asked Mr. Hand.

"Oh, Alice and I are going to play croki-nole, and we will beat you and mamma."

They had been playing some time when Mr. Hand stopped and said: "Did you know you had a new neighbor?"

"Why, no! Who are they?"

"He is a Mr. Temples. He used to be a sailor, and lives all alone!" Soon afterwards Mr. Hand departed, and we all then discussed our new neighbor.

"It will soon be Christmas," said Madge.

"Yes," said mother, "and we must go present-looking tomorrow."

So we all went to town the next day, except Madge. We sent her over to stay with an old neighbor, Mrs. Bond, but Madge had a plot in her own head, and so Mrs. Bond didn't see her that day.

Our new neighbor, Mr. Temples, was sitting in a large arm chair before a warm blaze, when he heard a gentle knock. He said: "Come in!" and to his surprise, when the door opened there stood our little Madge.

"Why, theigho! Who are you, little fairy?"

"I am Madge Pitre; mamma and everybody is done gone to town, and I'a come over here, but they don't know it, you see?"

"All right. Bright eyes, come here, and tell me all about yourself and your mother."

Madge liked to be petted, so she climbed on his knee and told him all about mamma, and papa, "who was drowned when I was a tiny baby."

"What's the matter?" said little Madge, seeing a pale look cross Mr. Temple's face.

"Nothing dear. But do you know your mamma's name before she married?"

"Course I does. Papa used to call her 'pretty Rose Dillon.'"

You had better run home now," said Mr. Temples, after he had showed Madge many things he had collected, for he, too, had promised to come over and tell them all about some of his shipwrecks.

It was Christmas night, and we were all trying to get Madge to sleep.

"Santa Claus won't ever come, Madge, if you don't go to bed."

"Can't help it," said Madge, "I'se looking for company. About that time there was a knock, Madge ran to the door and in came Mr. Temples. Then in such a queer little way Madge said: "Mamma, this is our new neighbor."'

Mr. Temples shook hands with us all and seemed interested in everything. After a while Madge said: "Please tell that shipwreck story, Mr. Temples. Please!"

"Very well, come here and sit in my lap." Then when Madge had got settled in his lap he told us a long, interesting story about how he once kissed a wife and sweet little baby goodby and sailed on a long journey. While on the way back a fearful storm came, drove their ship against some rocks and all were lost, so everybody thought. However, a few escaped and years afterwards he returned to the city to find that his wife and children were gone.

What were their names?" said Madge.

"Why, my wife was once little Rose Dillon, and my baby was Madge."

"Oh, John! John! I thought it was you," and mother threw herself at his feet, and papa—for it was papa—caught her in his arms.

A long time—an hour or two later—Madge said: "Umph humph, you see what my visit done. We found our sho' 'nough papa, an we'se all going to be rich."

And so we are, and papa is no longer a sailor, and mamma no longer stays with us all by herself.

LISKUM, THE STORY OF A GYPSY GIRL.

BY EMMA A. OPPER

It would not have happened if Harriet had not hurt her foot at the beginning of the summer. She rode down a stiff hill on her bicycle, and fell off and sprained her ankle; and if she had not she would never have known Liskum.

It was a settled thing that Harriet and her brother Eugene, who was two years younger and generally considered to be a "limb," should spend part of every summer with their Uncle Thad, a well-off bachelor with a large country place at Durham. He liked Harriet and Eugene, and meant to leave them his property.

"He doesn't pay much attention to us you know," Harriet reported to her mother after their first visit, "for he's always buying horses and selling them and having the barns fixed up and driving around in sulkies. And we don't see very much of Mrs. Dyer, the housekeeper, for she's always busy. But Uncle Thad likes having us there. And there's Mrs. Pomeroy. Mrs. Pomeroy lives in the next house to Uncle Thad's, and she's splendid."

Eugene was really sorry for Harriet when she sprained her ankle, and he staid at home to amuse her during the entire half day. Then he grew figety, and that afternoon he was off again.

He came back at supper time. "Say!" he announced, "there's a band of gypsies camped down by the bend. I've been down there."

"O," said Harriet, "I never saw any real gypsies. What are they like?"

"They're jolly. A lot of men and women, and some kids and horses and dogs. I got acquainted with one girl, and she's smart, I tell you."

"I wish I could go and see them. I can't; I can't do anything! O, dear!" said Harriet, dolefully.

Eugene compassioned her; and his compassion bore fruit. The next afternoon, when Harriet had limped out of doors, with Uncle Thad's help, and was sitting under the great maple with Mrs. Pomeroy, who had come over with a good story to read to her—the next afternoon, Eugene, who had disappeared after dinner, came clambering over the back fence. And somebody climbed over after him, with quite as much agility.

"Here's Liskum," Eugene called out; "here's the girl I got acquainted with at the gypsy camp. Liskum, this is Mrs. Pomeroy and my sister Harriet."

"O, good!" said Harriet, with unmixed delight.

"My dear child," said Mrs. Pomeroy, in motherly welcome. Mrs. Pomeroy, in spite of the fact that she had no children of her own, was very motherly.

"Liskum—is that your name?" said Harriet. "Liskum what?"

"Just Liskum," said the girl.

"And you are a gypsy?" said Harriet, with increasing wonderment.

"I guess I am," said Liskum. She dropped herself lightly on the grass at Mrs. Pomeroy's feet and lifted a gaze of liveliest interest.

"Aren't you sure?" said Harriet. "What a nice-looking girl for a gypsy," thought Harriet, and she knew Mrs. Pomeroy was thinking the same thing. The girl, who might have been ten years old, was a graceful child, with a pretty, sunburned face, thick, dark hair and blue eyes, which could change swiftly from sober scrutiny to smiling brightness.

"Well, I wasn't a gypsy always," she answered.

"What were you?" said Harriet.

"Why, just a girl," said Liskum, and they all laughed together.

"She had a grandmother once," said Eugene, "and she lived with her."

"You do not mean," said Mrs. Pomeroy, anxiously, "that you were stolen by the gypsies?"

Liskum shook her head. "No, but we were poor and my grandmother died, and then I was all alone and there wasn't anybody that wanted me, and the gypsies were there and when they went away they took me, and after that I was a gypsy," said the girl. "It's been a good while—four years or five."

"Poor child," Mrs. Pomeroy murmured. "Poor, homeless child. Do you like living with the gypsies?"

Liskum looked off at the sky. "Pretty good," she said, rather feebly.

"Do you have plenty to eat?" Harriet asked.

"Mostly," said Liskum.

"I'll bet it ain't clean, though," said Eugene. "I saw 'em cooking their dinner yesterday.

"Not clean," Mrs. Pomeroy sighed. She bent down to slip a kind hand under the girl's chin and to lift her face and look into her eyes. "Are they good to you?" she questioned her.

Liskum opened her mouth to speak, and she closed it. Her eyes drooped and her lip trembled.

"Poor child!" said Mrs. Pomeroy again.

Uncle Thad came riding out of the stable on Humbert, the handsomest riding horse he had bought lately. And Eugene cast at him a puckery look. Eugene was exceedingly desirous of having a ride on Humbert, but his uncle had forbidden him, for Humbert was young and mettlesome.

Uncle Thad reined up opposite the group and looked down quizzically at Liskum. "Hello!" he said, "what's this?"

"A—a young lady from the gypsy camp," Eugene explained, and Uncle Thad looked and laughed. His laughter was not unkind, but Liskum looked awed and startled, and when Humbert had pranced off, she rose.

Mrs. Pomeroy patted her brown cheek. "Come again, my child," she said.

"Do come again!" said Harriet, and Liskum promised. And Eugene went back part the way to the camp with her gallantly.

Harriet remembered the gypsy girl. She sat under the maple, the next afternoon, and wondered if Liskum would come again, and when Eugene came past she asked him whether he thought she would.

"Oh!" said Eugene, "they went off this morning, the whole lot of them. That's how gypsies always do—go off sudden."

"Oh, dear! And she won't come again," Harriet mourned, in a misery of genuine disappointment. She was so greatly taken aback by the news that she failed to notice how fast, and with what a furtive manner, Eugene was hurrying toward the stable.

Of a sudden he reappeared. "Eugene!" Harriet gasped, for Eugene was mounted on Humbert.

"Eugene!" Harriet cried. "Did Uncle Thad say you might?"

"No, he said I couldn't—but I want to, and it won't do a bit of hurt, and Uncle Thad isn't here, nor Jim, and he won't ever know it, and I'm going, too!" said Eugene, in one rapid breath. "Promise you won't tell."

"Eugene, don't!" Harriet implored.

"Promise you won't tell!" Eugene insisted, bending toward her an anxious face. "Uncle Thad would just skin me. Aren't you a mean thing? Promise! Won't you promise?"

"I—yes—I—" Harriet faltered, and there was a raising of the dust and a scurrying of fleet hoofs down the drive.

Harriet sat aghast. When, ten minutes after, Mrs. Pomeroy came over with her book, to finish their story, Harriet was still staring with dismayed eyes down the drive.

"Chapter eight," said Mrs. Pomeroy, settling herself, and beginning.

Harriet did not hear that chapter. She was full of apprehension. What if Humbert should run away, or throw a shoe? What if Eugene should fall off him and hurt himself? And right in the midst of her disquieted thoughts something happened which was worse, surely, than anything else imaginable—her Uncle Thad drove into the yard and into the stable.

Harriet's heart stood still. She listened—she waited. Presently Uncle Thad came out of the stable. Where's Humbert?" he called to Harriet. "Where is Jim? Jim didn't drive off with Humbert, did he?"

"No," said Harriet; she began to grow pale.

"Where's Humbert, then?" said Uncle Thad, with rising voice, and he turned back into the stable. Mrs. Pomeroy, peacefully unconscious of the dire truth and of the gathering storm, began to read again.

Uncle Thad reappeared. And with him came somebody else—a little figure whose arm he grasped, a slim, small, poorly dressed girl. Liskum!

Harriet gazed, dumbly. "Look here," said Uncle Thad, forcibly, "what's the meaning of this? Isn't this that gypsy girl that was around here yesterday?"

"Why, yes; it's Liskum," said Harriet.

"Liskum!" Uncle Thad repeated, not gently. Uncle Thad was rather quick-tempered always, and now he looked warm. "Those gypsies decamped this morning, the whole lot of them, and what's this one doing here?"

Nobody spoke. "Nobody knows how much she's been prowling around here," said Uncle Thad, "nor what she's found out and told the rest of them, and now her tribe is gone and my horse is gone. Rather queer, isn't it?"

Liskum looked up at him. Her under lip was between her teeth; she was the picture of despairing fright. And Harriet almost wrung her hands. Her heart pounded. O, dear, if she could speak out—if she could tell her uncle that Eugene was riding Humbert. But no, she had promised Eugene; she know what powers of twitting and taunting he possessed, and how he could exercise them when she did anything he thought "mean." Besides, a promise was a promise; she kept her promises always, and she must keep this. She looked at her Uncle Thad and Liskum—and her unhappy heart kept on pounding.

"Thaddeus," said Mrs. Pomeroy, "don't be hasty. It cannot be. I do not believe this girl knows—"

"Somebody knows," said Uncle Thad, warmly. "If those vagabonds have stolen my horse I'll chase them up."

Harriet could see Liskum tremble. Harriet, what with her load of suppressed anguish was trembling herself. What should she do? Oh, what should she do? It seemed to her that if something didn't happen pretty soon she should scream.

And something happened. There was a rattle of brisk hoofs and Eugene came speeding up the drive on Humbert.

"Well—well—well!" said his Uncle Thad, in an awful voice. Eugene stared at him. His scared face grew very red. "Have you got back?" he gasped. He slid to the ground and stood backed up against Humbert in utter abjection and abasement. "I—I took a little ride," he stammered.

"So I see," said his uncle, sternly. "So I see. Go and put Humbert in his stall. I'll attend to you later, young man."

It was a terrible moment. But even in the midst of it Eugene flashed a look at Harriet, a look of true gratitude and appreciation, a look that said, "You didn't tell on me; good for you!" And he silently led Humbert into the stable.

Uncle Thad took Liskum's brown little hand in his. "Liskum," he said—"that's your name, isn't it?—Liskum, I am sorry I laid the blame on you without cause or reason. I was hot and hasty. I owe you an apology, Liskum, and I make it right here and now."

"I never stole a horse," the girl faltered. "I wouldn't!"

"Of course you wouldn't," said Harriet, and her eyes shone. And Mrs. Pomeroy put her arm around Liskum and drew her near to her.

"My dear," she said gently, "what are you doing here alone? If the gypsies have gone, way are you here, Liskum?"

Liskum's hands clasped themselves, nervously; she turned upon Mrs. Pomeroy a look of unutterable, deep appeal. "I—I," she said, under her breath—"I liked you, and I liked her," pointing to Harriet, "and you was so pleasant-spoken to me, more than anybody has been since I had my grandmother—and I—I thought I'd stay here where I could see you sometimes. I couldn't bear to go off with 'em," said Liskum, "and I—and I came up here—and I hid."

"You poor, poor child!" said Mrs. Pomeroy, and there were tears in her voice.

And Harriet looked at them, her eyes eager, her lips parted. Several anxious thoughts were in her mind, chiefly there were two: that Mrs. Pomeroy had no children, and that her husabnd was as good hearted as she was, and well off, too—and that poor Liskum had no home, and that she liked Mrs. Pomeroy, and that she was a gentle girl, and bright and pretty.

"Oh, Mrs. Pomeroy," Harriet whispered.

"Liskum," said Mrs. Pomeroy, and the tremble in her voice was replaced by a note of firmness and decision—"Liskum, we will try to make a home for you. If you don't want to live with the gypsies you shall not, my girl. I will take care of you, Liskum."

"Good enough," said Uncle Thad, and he said it loudly and heartily. And Harriet, looking into his face, knew by its softened expression that his injustice to Liskum would serve, whether reasonably or no, as a means of disculpation for Eugene. She knew that Eugene would be forgiven for riding Humbert.

Harriet and Eugene went home, with the profoundest regret, a month later. Harriet's foot was quite well, and their last weeks at Durham were much the jolliest—because of Liskum. And when they had got home, what gave them both the deepest pleasure was their frequent news from Durham. Sometimes their Uncle Thad wrote and sometimes Mrs. Pomeroy; but the day before Christmas there came a thin, oblong package directed to them both in an unfamiliar hand, and a letter directed likewise.

Eugene opened the package and they both fairly squealed with pleasure. It was a photograph of Liskum in a becoming hat and jacket and tippet—Liskum, with a plump, bright face. Liskum, looking well cared for and happy.

Harriet tore open the letter. "I do believe," said she, "yes, it is, it is from Liskum!" And she read it.

"Dear Harriet and Eugene—I go to school all the time and I have learned to read and write and I am going to surprise you with a letter from me, myself. Do you like my picture? Mrs. Pomeroy took me to town and we had it taken. Your Uncle Thad gives me a good many things, and he gave me the tippet; it is silver color and it is thick and warm and I like to wear it. But I wish it was summer, so that you both would be out here again. Mrs. Pomeroy has taken me for her girl, and so this is what I am now, and it is what they call me. Your friend,

"LISKUM POMEROY."

BOYS' HIGH SCHOOL.

The pupils now constituting the Boy's High school will not be apt to forget the manner in which we honored the memory of General Lafayette. Never have boys showed more enthusiasm than did our pupils on this memorable occasion. Those who took part in the exercises acquitted themselves creditably.

The following is the programme rendered on Lafayette Day:

"Lafayette," declamation, Cam Dorsey; "Social Rank of Lafayette," original, Thomas C. Turner; "Lafayette in the French Revolution," original, Lamar Hill; Lafayette at Yorktown," original, Herbert Haas; "Lafayette's Military Career in the United States," original, Henry F. Scott; "Lafayette as a Personal Character," original, Harry Colle; "Lafayette as a Generous Friends," original, Veazy Rainwater; "The Relations of Lafayette and Washington, and His Visit to America," original, Ed Hill.

The school was dismissed after the exercises. The boys of the high school contributed liberally to the monumental fund. The contributions were taken up immediately after leaving the hall. Professor Slaton thought the boys would be more liberal after hearing the patriotic speeches in the hall.

They were also stimulated to give freely by the offer of one of the members of the board to double the amount given by the entire Boy's High school. He will have the pleasure of giving a neat little sum.

The senior class completed Tennyson's "Princess" this week. We have been studying this beautiful poem since the opening the school.

Professor Slaton has required us to investigate all the references, mythological, rhetorical and geographical. We are also required to learn the forceful quotations from the author. Every boy who has investigated the work thoroughly feels that he has been benefited by it. When we began this book the boys were inclined to think it rather dry. But after careful study they unanimously pronounced it grand. We will begin the study of "Webster's First Bunker Hill Oration," some time during the ensuing week. Our examination on the "Princess" will be taken on Monday.

The high school was well represented last Tuesday night at the lecture by Mr. Wendling, about thirty-five of the boys being present. Professor Slaton, who is a director of the Atlanta Lecture Association, has obtained reduced rates for the boys. He has shown great interest in this matter, as it is a splendid way of aiding the study of literature.

In doing this he not only saves the boys more than 50 per cent in purchasing tickets, but he stimulates them to attend these lectures and by doing so greatly benefits the work in the matter of literary development. During the first year of the lecture association there were 200 tickets sold in the high school. Last year there were about 350. This year the boys have begun with a zest that will greatly increase the attendance on these occasions.

Some of hose who are unfriendly to the high school will be surprised to read the following story: Last week a prominent merchant of this city related his experience upon an occasion when he desired to employ a young man in his store. He stated that two applied for this position. The one who was employed showed such a superiority over the other in the matter of letter writing that the merchant did not hesitate to employ him. This young man is a graduate of the high school.

The merchant has presented to the high school three copies of the book which he said had been the chief key to his success in business. The pupil writing the best application for a position will receive a copy of the book.

The session on the society last Friday was the most humorous I have witnessed since I entered the school. During the speeches of Seals and Stovall the hall rang with laughter.

There were no declamations. The subject for debate was, "Resolved, That the pension policy of the United States at present is wise." Affirmative leader, Seals; negative leader, Smith. Professor LaFever criticised the debates. This is the first time he has acted in this capacity. President Cole gave his decision to the negative.

FRASER STREET SCHOOL.

The eighth grade is very much interested in physiology just now, as are the small boys of the lower grades in the skeleton which Mrs. Knight uses to instruct us. The seventh grade society holds its first meeting on October 28th, and Marshall Lane, the president, has prepared a very entertaining programme. Our Lafayette day exercises, consisting of songs, compositions and recitations, in costume, were very interesting also.

CREW STREET SCHOOL.

On Wednesday last, Lafayette Day was observed with fitting exercises in our school. In nearly every grade programmes had been arranged, except where the children are too small; but in these grades the teachers talked to the children and impressed upon them the great aid that Lafayette rendered to this country during the revolution.

Following are some of the programmes:

Since my last report several other societies have been formed, one in the third grade B, fifth grade A and fifth grade B. The name of the society of the fifth grade A is the Winnie Davis, in honor of the "Daughter of the Confederacy."

The name of the third grade society is the Helping Club. Above the rostrum are suspended the two mottoes of the society, "Be kind and quiet and do your own work" and "Let all things be done decently and in order." The officers are Dorothy Stevens, president; Henry Williamson, vice president, and Philip Arrowsmith, secretary.

The fifth grade B society has not yet been named. The officers are: McTyere Lewis, president; Louise Baird, vice president; Bessie Brown, secretary; Lewen Brown, critic.

When the roll of the fourth grade A was published the name of Jack Pappenheimer was omitted. Jack is one of the brightest pupils in his class. His average was 95.

The fund raised for the Lafayette monument in our school was $18.54.

WEST END SCHOOL.

The Red Cross Society held a meeting last Friday, and the following programme was rendered:

We decided to have the regular Red Cross badges and a committee was appointed to look for the ribbon to make our badges of, and we hope to have them soon. We had a very nice programme on Wednesday, and all felt grateful to that great Frenchman, Lafayette, for the service he so willingly gave us during the revolutionary war.

The programme follows:

Song, "America."
"The Rising of 1776"—Elizabeth Adair.
"Independence Bell"—Nelly Wynne.
Extract from The Journal.

CALHOUN STREET SCHOOL.

Calhoun school entered with much enthusiasm into the celebration of Lafayette day. All the classes had prepared programmes and the exercises in every grade were enjoyable and creditable. In the grammar grades the various literary societies presented programmes especially suited to the day.

The amount collected from our school was $17.50. In the eighth grade the French and American colors decorated, in a tasteful manner, the large portrait of George Washington.

Promptly at 12 o'clock the seventh and eighth grades were called to order by Walter Merrill, president of the Eighth Grade Literary and Debating Society. Reports were read by the treasurer, secretary and librarian, after which the following programme was rendered:

Song, "America"—Seventh and eighth grades.

Composition, "Lafayette in America"—Furber Burt, eighth grade.

Recitation, "Address to Sailors and Seamen," written about the time of Lafayette—Grace Thorn, eighth grade.

Recitation "Our Colors"—Edward Clarkson, second grade.

Music—Willie Williford, second grade.

Recitation, "The Launch of the Ship"—Girls of the seventh grade.

Declamation, "Lafayette"—John Woodward, eighth grade.

"Song, "Lafayette"—Seventh and eighth grades.

The Lowry Literary Society of the fifth and sixth grades held its meeting from 12 to 1 o'clock. Elizabeth High presided over the society with much dignity. Sidney Reed was secretary. Some of the most interesting features of the programme follow:

"A Lafayette Quiz"—Mary Brent Smith and fifth grade pupils.

"A Pen Portrait of Lafayette"—Gladys Kirk.

"The Hero of Two Worlds"—Lois Crosby.

"Why the Day Is Celebrated"—George McCarty.

"When Grandaunt Danced with Lafayette"—Cora Wynn.

"Tribute to the Land He Helped to Preserve"—Traylor Prince.

Song—"The Days of Lafayette."

"The Dress of a Gentleman of That Period"—May Belle Alexander.

"An Instance of His Chivalry"—Carrie Dubose.

In the fourth grade thirty children took part in an interesting sketch of the events of the American revolution, and ten others represented dates on which important historical events took place. The class sang "America," "The Star Spangled Banner" and "Dixie" with much enjoyment.

Among the bright children of the second grade several excellent recitations were given by Edward Clarkson, Agnes Coleman, Alice Silvey, Ben Hall and Walter Venable. A dialogue by eight little people was very good.

FORMWALT STREET SCHOOL.

There were a great many visitors at our school on Lafayette day and we were honored by the presence of Major Slaton. The higher grades assembled in the fifth grade, which was beautifully decorated with wreathes of holly and ivy and flags of France and the United States, side by side. The blackboards were covered with original drawings. The primary grades collected in the fourth grade, which was also elaborately decorated. All the scholars who desired were allowed to help decorate and the result manifested their artistic genius. Major Slaton complimented us highly on our exercises, and said that he had never heard better in any school, and that our order was perfect. He then made a short but eloquent speech about Lafayette, and said that in contributing such a large sum, $14, toward the monument of Lafayette we erected one to our own memory. The principal, the teachers and the children were very much delighted with his compliments and felt that their labor had been fully repaid. The programme was as follows:

Seventh grade:

"Character of Lafayette"—Will Slaton.

The third and fourth grades rendered a nice programme also. I forgot to say that the seventh and eighth grades were highly entertained by the fancy whistling done by Miss Bowers, of Montana. Rose Wood.

WILLIAMS STREET SCHOOL.

This week the regular routine school work was pleasantly interrupted by our Lafayette exercises. The sixth, fifth and fourth grades combined programmes, as did also the third, second and first grades.

Professor Landrum, our assistant superintendent, spent the day with us. This added greatly to our enjoyment, as we are always glad to see him.

Our pleasure was seriously marred by the absence of one face which we are accustomed to see, and which we have missed during the past two weeks. Miss Berman, our loved principal, is ill. We hope she will be restored to health. A warm welcome awaits her return to us.

The programme on Lafayette Day was as follows, in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades:

Song, "America"—by class.
Introduction—Ruth Neller, fifth grade.
Reading, "Causes Which Led to the Revolution, and Lafayette's Connection with the Revolution"—Jesse Draper, Emma Able, DeWillis Johnson and Ollie Mae Osborn, sixth grade.
Song, "Columbia"—by class.
Recitation, "The Declaration"—by fourth and fifth grades.
Composition, "Lafayette"—Glascock Mays
Song, "Star Spangled Banner"—by class.

Then followed a miscellaneous programme of songs and recitations.

The exercises closed with the singing of "Dixie."

The first, second and third grades, consolidated at 12 o'clock. After the singing of "America," Mrs. Rhett, teacher of third grade, gave the children a short talk about Lafayette, his life, birth and death.

The classes then entertained their guests with appropriate recitations and patriotic songs, closing the exercises with the singing of "Dixie."

THE PRATHER HOME SCHOOL.

We have been so busy and so merry that the Junior letters have been neglected. However, we will now do better. We were glad to welcome the return of Constance Knowles, who has grown to be as tall as our principal; also Lila Reynolds, from Augusta, who is so pleasant and good humored.

Mattie Ward, from Norwood, Ga., is taking a fine stand in her classes, while Marie Fitzpatrick, from Lancaster, Ga., Lels Jones, from Memphis, Tenn.; Annie Tanner, from Savannah, Ga., and Cornelia Ahlun, from Mobile, Ala., are all interesting in themselves, and also from the fact that they come from other places, of which they sometimes speak.

Florrie Morrall, from Barnwell, S. C., had to return home on account of sickness, but we hope she will be able to return before Christmas.

On Lafayette Day we had essays read by Miss Charlotte Hall and Miss Florine Richardson; then a full discussion of Lafayette memories and souvenirs; then Miss Bessie Tompkins amused us with the contrasting opinions of Lafayette's friends and enemies about his personal appearance. As her great-grandmother led a minuet with Lafayette at a grand ball, when he visited this country in 1824, we tried to believe what she told us.

The programme was rendered by Misses Jennie Mobley, Florine Richardson, Louise Harris, Cornelia Ahlun, Bessie Tompkins, Mary Peas Tupper, Mary D. Woodward, Bessie Woodward, Gertrude Westmoreland, Elle Goode, Charlotte Hall and Kate Robinson. Sue Allen Ball.

HUNTER'S SCHOOL FOR BOYS.

The school has been very busy this week and several events of interest occurred. In the highest reading class declamations were substituted for readings last week. The result was gratifying. Great interest was shown by all participants and the enthusiasm of the other students was so great that it could not be easily retained.

In all four days eight declamations were rendered. Next week the rhetoric class will declaim, while the other class will rest. The week after that readings will be commenced again by the rhetoric class.

Commencing next week, a change will be made in mathematics. In the higher classes geometry will be recited on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and algebra on the other several days. This change will doubtless be beneficial to every one.

Arithmetic will be recited on Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

In a spelling match on Friday representatives of the smaller class were badly worsted by larger boys. Joe Hall carried off the pennant for spelling against a number of determined opponents.

Spelling has been resumed among the larger boys and written lessons are recited daily. The other classes have oral lessons. Declamations were held on Friday by the boys who are in neither rhetoric class. Several of the speeches were very creditable.

After recess the junior society was organized. Seven old members were present. Arthur Robinson was selected chairman. Sinclair Jacobs was elected president, R. Carter vice president and Wilfred Jacobs secretary. A question will be selected at a call meeting next week. The officers are in every way capable of doing their duty and under their administration the society will doubtless flourish. The meetings of the junior societ will alternate with those of the senior.

Then came the quizzing class in arithmetic. This recitation being the first of the term, was anxiously awaited. Gwin Lipes and Joseph Hall had chosen sides for this contest. Twelve boys participated, six on each side. Each pupil prepared questions and gave them to the leader. Ten questions were asked by each of the leaders, but the number was increased or diminished at will.

The first plan was to count a miss every time one missed a question, but later it was not counted so unless the whole side missed. The last plan was liked the best. The questions were asked by the leaders.

When the time was up forty questions had been asked by each leader, and Hall's side had conquered, having answered three more questions than the other side. The result is encouraging and another such recitation will be conducted next Friday.

In addition to the first team, the Boys' High school has another excellent team. This has elected officers, but has had very little practice yet. A game was played yesterday against the first team, but notice reached me too late to write out the game in full.

Theaters...

The coming of so clever a comedian as Willie Collier in H. A. Du Souchet's successful farce, "The Man from Mexico," at the Grand Monday and Tuesday, cannot be regarded as other than an event of genuine importance. Mr. Collier is an artist to the tips of his fingers, with a fund of humor that has plenty of room in "The Man from Mexico." During the original run of this farce at Hoyt's theater, New York, where it remained for months, the audience tested the capacity of the theater nightly, and most of the time the orchestra was banished under the stage to make room for the spectators.

In "The Man from Mexico" Collier is a frolicsome married man, goes to dinner, but skips out before the feast is raided by the police, only to get in a wrangle with a cabman, and getting saucy with the police judge, receives a thirty days' sentence. The husband gives it out that he is off on a trip to Mexico, but really goes to jail, and the second act with Collier in striped suit, is excruciatingly funny, especially when the wife, distributing flowers as a member of the flower mission, to the prisoners, nearly stumbles upon him. In the last act he returns in a startling Mexican outfit. Willie Collier stands almost alone in his peculiar line of comedy, but he has never before appeared in a play that gives him the scope to display his art of expression of body, voice and face like "The Man from Mexico." His every line of comedy is quaintly humorous, his every movement irresistibly funny, and his face is at all times a study. The members of the company who will support Mr. Collier in the interpretation of the farce have been carefully selected by Managers Smyth and Rice, and comprise the following well-known names: Thomas Wise, Adolph Jackson, George W. Parsons, Louis Bishop Hall, M. L. Heckert, L. J. Sheehan, Eugene Jellis, Miriam Lawrence, Julia Bachelder, Leslie Haskell and clever Louise Allen Collier.

The presentation of "The Man from Mexico" will be marked on this occasion by a complete and elaborate scenic equipment which has been painted by Arthur Voeghtlin, the celebrated scenic artist.

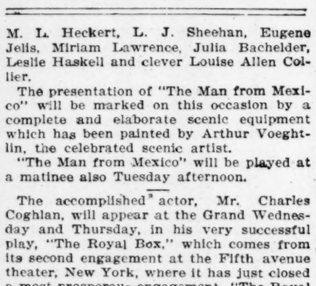

"The Man from Mexico" will be played at a matinee also Tuesday afternoon.

WILLIE COLLIER AND LOUISE ALLEN, In "The Man from Mexico."

The accomplished actor, Mr. Charles Coghlan, will appear at the Grand Wednesday and Thursday, in his very successful play, "The Royal Box," which comes from its second engagement at the Fifth avenue theater, New York, where it has just closed a most prosperous engagement. "The Royal Box" is from the pen of Mr. Coghlan, although he does not claim it to be entirely original. It is founded upon the elder Dumas' "Kean." His adaption possesses the merit of originality, and he has given his version of the old play of "Kean" entirely new dialogue, new scenes, new characters and situations, and that general tone of newness which makes it in all its aspects a new play, meeting all the requirements of the stage of 1898. But one character of the piece is drawn on similar lines to "Kean" and that is Clarence, the actor, played by Mr. Coghlan, which, however, differs from Dumas's imaginary character most essentially in its spirit and its aspiration. "Keen" is a mountebank, and content to remain such. The "lietmotif" of Mr. Coghlan's version is the dissatisfaction of the actor with his artificial life on the stage, regretting that he has not given his talents to the more serious work of life, and his jealousy of men who wear real stars upon their breasts, and who are possessed of real honor, of real greatness and of power.

MR. CHARLES COGHLAN, In "The Royal Box."

The time of the action of "The Royal Box" is the same as that of "Kean," London, 1810, just before the regency of the prince of Wales. Mr. Coghlan's story involves the actor, the prince of Wales, the Swedish ambassador, Countess Helen, his wife; Celia Pryse, a stage-struck girl; Tips, a constable; Lord Bassett, a sporting nobleman; Wigets, a mountebank; ladies of the court, and actors of the Drury Lane theater. The company which supports Mr. Coghlan is exactly the same which presented it at the Fifth Avenue theater during the past four weeks, and is as follows: Andrew Robson, Alexander Kearney, Palmer Collins, Charles Stanley, Claude Brooks, James W. Bankson, Harry Hanlon, R. C. Chamberlin, Taylor Granville, Mortimer Weldon, Edgar George, Miss Lottie Linthicum, Gertrude Coghlan, Gertrude Bennett, Josephine Adams and Miss Grave Kilkens.

"The Royal Box" is presented in five acts, and will be staged here exactly as in New York, with the same scenery, properties and effects, antique furniture and historical costumes.

Mr. Coghlan will also present "The Royal Box" at a matinee Thursday.

The engagement of the great triple-star alliance, Louis James, Kathryn Kidder and Frederick Warde, is announced for Friday afternoon and night at the Grand.

They will present the famous and historic comedy "The School for Scandal," with the most notable cast that has been given this play since its revival in 1874 by Augustin Daly, in which company Louis James was then leading man.

The name of the comedy is testimony of two things—the author's original motive and his belief in its fascination. The scandal mongers social exquisites, open the piece and appear once afterwards in scenes of the most polished and incisive wit that is known to the drama. "As my little productions are mostly satires and lampoons on particular people," says Sir Benjamin Backbite, "I find they circulate more readily by giving copies in confidence to the friends of the parties." Again this worthy, speaking of course of an absent friend: "It is not that she paints so ill, but when she has finished her face she joins it so badly at her neck that she looks like a mended statue, in which the connoisseur may see at once that the head is modern, though the trunk is antique." But Sheridan made these amusing gossips his background finally, and advanced the fun to be had from the young wife wedded to the old husband, Lady Teazle and Sir Peter Teazle, and a brace of fashionables, the antithical rakish Charles Surface and his plausible brother Joseph who, when the surface is probed, are disclosed in converted positions. The complications of the comedy are a continued source of hilarity, and the crest of every wave of laughter is white-capped with the nimblest wit imaginable. The auction of the ancestors and the screen scene are more famous than any other two scenes in comedy.

Managers Wagenhals & Kemper have given the play a production of scenic splendor, a car load of scenery, properties, furniture and draperies being employed in its presentment.

"The School for Scandal" will be put on Friday night, "Othello," with James as Othello; Miss Kidder as Desdamona, and Warde as Iago, is announced for the Friday matinee.

The London Gaiety Girls Extravaganza Company will hold the boards of the Columbia Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of the coming week. Manager White promises an olio of exceptional strength, including Alex W. Wilson, ventriloquist comedian, direct from Dan Lowery's Palace Varieties, Dublin; the Sisters Countess, McAvoy and Gilson, Miss Tot Gilchard, Gus Mills, character female impersonator, and Miss Rollo White, the champion lady bag puncher of America.

The entertainment will be made up of comedy, vaudeville and burlesque. The company is said to be a large and up to date organization.

The night prices will be from 15 to 50 cents. At the special bargain matinee Wednesday the admission will be 25 cents and reserved seats 50 cents.

"Remember the Maine," Lincoln J. Carter's American naval drama, will be seen Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week at the Columbia. Mr. Carter seems to have struck it rich with this play, for it is a well known fact that "Remember the Maine" is one of the best paying pieces of theatrical property on the stage today. It is American through and through and the scenes showing the destruction of the Maine and the battle of Manila are said to be wonderfully realistic. A carload of special scenery is carried by the company.

The Detroit Saturday Night American said of the performance:

"Lincoln J. Carter has been more successful in the production of melodramas than any manager of the day. He has made a life study of the tastes of the patrons of that form of amusement, with the result stated. 'Remember the Maine' is a case in evidence. The mechanical and electrical appliances and the spectacular properties are much superior to those of more pretentious attractions.

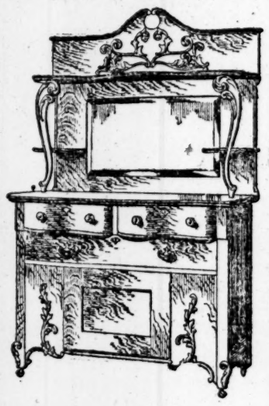

"Conspiracy, strategy, romance, love, jealousy, ambition and the vivid projects of the battles at Santiago and Manila are strung together in the most ingenious way and the piece entrusted to a large and very agreeable company of players. Each role is well filled, and instead of the usual incapacity of melodramatic players, the company last night was in every way satisfactory, even in the minor roles. This is another of Mr. Carter's qualifications—he knows where and how to secure the best talent in his line and seems to have first call in this respect. All the roles were so well rendered last night that no distinction is called for unless it be that of the Spanish adventuress, embodied by Miss Josephine Mills. She had the most difficult part in the play and she made it the best artistically. The roles of Weyler, Cabano, General Lee, Captain Sigsbee, Kate Walters and Maria de Castro were splendidly impersonated.

"The performance was keenly enjoyd by a large audience."

The night prices here will be from 15 to 50 cents. The matinee will be 25 cents admission and 10 cents extra for reserved seats.
